Paris Weird Symbols of Evil Now Cherished as Protective Spirits.

Chained to the tower of Notre Dame, 200 feet above the street, is the Great Evil Spirit—evil no longer, say the French, who, with a vein of superstition, see in his watchful attitude protection from invading hordes.

HIGH on top of the ancient cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris stand the gargoyles — centuries old. Time was when these impish ornaments were deemed the personification of evil, but today there are Parisians who look upon them as good spirits that keep back the helmeted warriors of the kaiser and thwart daring attempts of air pilots to spread death and devastation.

Your Parisian is superstitious—and admits it. That is why you hear on many lips the expression of strange confidence in the immunity of the capital so long as the fantastic figures, looming from the pinnacles of Notre Dame, remain unmolested.

So Paris, or at least no inconsiderable part, does not feel the dread and terror of her sister capital, London. To the average visitor and sightseer of Notre Dame there is little significance in the gargoyles or devils of the ancient cathedral. As these strange ornaments are so far from the observer they appear insignificant, and many pass without seeing them at all, so in tone are they with the ancient, weather-beaten gray of the whole edifice.

The variety and perfection as works of art of these strange ornaments are really wonderful when one comes to make a careful study of them. They once had a far different—a more grewsome—meaning than they have today and in order to understand it one must glance backward over long centuries to the ancient period that brought this strange form of church decoration.

France was just at this time coming forth and leading the world in civilization, and the strength and fearlessness then displayed showed her splendid youth. The great builders wrought out powerful ideas in stone, of which Notre Dame is the most perfect example. These people, the sons of the ancient Gallic tribes, were holy men, deeply concerned in religion, and their work was made to stand as a lesson and mark a moral for the generations following to read.

In those old days the devil, as the most powerful enemy of man, was represented in every horrible form possible—distorted caricatures of human and animal life were displayed freely to teach a lesson to the people of what was to be overcome with the help of God. Thus the great cathedral of Notre Dame was freely decorated at every nook and corner with these terrible creatures, that the people might look and learn and profit accordingly.

Some of the gargoyles are depicted half human, half-beast, outlined against the sky and gazing with solemn eyes out over the great and beautiful city sweeping away from the cathedral in hazy distances. In every expression or pose or action something evil is depicted—malice, cruelty, cunning, anger, hatred, despair—all may be found wrought out nicely in the faces and forms of the Notre Dame devils.

There are two classes of figures on the cathedral—those which are used for waterspouts to carry off the water from the roofs and those which are merely ornamental. These decorative waterspouts go to prove how practical was the genius of those ancient sculptors, who deftly turned the symbolical creatures to good account. So the waterspout devils project far out over the edges of the church, and thus fling from the sides the waste water, unsightly tin or leaden pipes having no place on this pile of stone sculpture. The mouth of the gargoyle formed the aperture of the spout, and they are all different.

The origin of these strange creatures may be traced farther back than the French sculptors of the twelfth century, for a study of the Apocalypse reveals the four living creatures as symbols of the evangelists, and the dragon as the enemy of man; but the sculpturing of figures representing the dragon or devil for the decorating of places of worship was not practiced until the eleventh century, a few generations before the master builders planned the "Ancient Queen of Cathedrals," as Victor Hugo called Notre Dame.

Hugo loved Notre Dame. He knew its every nook and cranny, its long galleries, its infinitely varied sculpture, and every gargoyle was as familiar to him as his library shelves. He spent long hours of study in the cathedral, and he has written of it more than any other French writer, making many of his characters live in and about it.

Those who are familiar with Hugo's hunchback, Quasimodo, will remember how he loved the carved creatures of the cathedral—the stunted, misshapen, human creatures—with his darkened mind but big, lonely, hungry heart, longing for some one to love him, and turning to the stone monsters because they were so like himself.

He spent his time at the cathedral and was bound up in its charms, and the people who came and went looked upon him with a superstitious dread and fear. This queer, unlovable character selected the most hideous of all the gargoyles, and seemed to find a fellowship between them and himself. The common tie of repulsiveness was strong between the stone and the human, yet he shattered one of his favorite comrades of stone when he learned that it struck terror to the heart of Esmeralda. And from behind these friendly devils of his it was that he showered the stones and poured the molten lead upon the mob which he fancied had come to tear his loved one from the cathedral.

"Let the Germans fight on: they will never take Paris as long as those gargoyles stand there to watch and protect us." As these words of the impulsive Parisian are spoken one wonders at the change of feeling for these snarling, scowling creatures of fantasy.

The quaint figures that look down from the heights of the ancient edifice. No sculptor has ever shown more vividly the monstrous spirit of human cruelty, pride and cunning than the one who chiseled out of stone these terrible images.

PNOTISM, Once Feared as WITCHCRAFT, Now Hailed as AID to MEDICINE in Curing Many of Man's Strangest Diseases

NOSIS as a medical aid has been ...mely popular with authors and ...wrights during the last few ... set forth successfully and in... in two brilliant plays, "The ... by Nicodemic, and in Belasco's Becky."

... Shadow" a woman who has ... by paralysis goes from physi...sician begging them to restore ...th so that she may have her affection and companionship, in... sympathy and mere pity. Her ...is never complete, but her health ... by means of hypnotism before ... curtain.

"Case of Becky" the patient, a young girl, has a number of diametrically opposed natures. After consulting many physicians to no avail, she comes upon a nerve specialist, who treats her by hypnotism, and he blends the diametrically opposed personalities into one happy personality.

Dr. Heldring-Fabricius, who is a well-known practitioner of hypnotism, says: "My usual way in proceeding in treatments consists in getting the confidence of my patients and making them thoroughly believe in my method of treatment. Then I make the patients go through a set of exercises which I demonstrate for them. These exercises are first, active; second, passive; third, exercises of relaxation, which consist of exercises under the patient's control and hypnotic exercises which are under the operator's mental control.

"I wait until the patients are thoroughly relaxed, and often talk to them to get them into a receptive mood. Now, whether I induce hypnosis at this point or not depends on the condition of the patients. In either case I speak to them such words as these: 'I want you to relax all your muscles and nerves thoroughly. By doing this you will quiet your nerves, you will suffer less pain, and get well faster.'

"You probably do not realize that your brain or mind controls the muscles, nerves and blood vessels of your entire body, but it does. Just the same as your brain or mind unconsciously controls your heart's action, your breathing, and your circulation, so does it control all other parts of your body. There are running to and from the brain innumerable nerves or wires to all the different parts of the body, just like telephone or telegraph wires. The brain or mind sends messages to and receives messages from all these different parts, consciously or unconsciously. It is only in sickness that sometimes there are breaks made in this communication, like the breaking of a wire, due to too much pressure on the brain or along the nerve's course. These breaks must be cured by the relieving of the pressure, which means strengthening of the nerves and nervous system.

"One of my most interesting patients was a 9-year-old girl, Grace De Young, who lives at South Holland. She was a paralytic. After studying my little patient carefully I diagnozed that she had a clot on the brain and that the only possible way to remove it was to reduce the blood pressure and the circulation in those parts. There were times when I almost lost hope, because the child was blind in one eye and was paralyzed in speech, limbs and bowels.

"At first progress was very slow, but after a while I became encouraged when I saw she took interest in things. One morning she was able to say to her mother, 'Mamma, hear the church bells ringing!" The one blind eye showed the same slow but sure progress after treatment by hypnotism, aided by the use of lenses and glasses of different strength. At the end of ten weeks I found Grace a healthy and normal child.

"Another patient came to me suffering from acute stomach trouble caused by ulcers. Her tongue was paralyzed at times. I gave her twenty-five treatments and she is now a healthy girl. Her sister was suffering with deafness of the right ear caused by a catarrhal condition in the head, giving rise to many headaches, which lasted sometimes as long as two or three weeks. After a number of treatments her catarrhal condition improved and caused her headaches to disappear and hearing to become normal. A pronounced consumptive under my care forgot the name of the disease and gained thirty pounds.

"Insanity, nervous trouble and heart trouble have all responded equally to this cure. The mental trouble called insanity is a condition in which the circulation in the brain is the same as when a patient is in a semi-sleep, in which they experience in their abnormal condition the vagaries of dreams, which they see enacted, and try to enact themselves. One of my most interesting cases was that of a woman suffering from religious insanity. Time and again she was declared insane until I took her in hand and treated her with hypnosis. She is now mentally strong.

The last-named substance is important because, besides serving as fuel for the body, as fats, sugars and starches do, it also supplies nitrogenous tissue building material. The proportion of protein in skim milk, as well as of the mineral constituents, which are also valuable for body building, is even greater than in whole milk.

Since the nutritive part of skim milk consists very largely of protein, it is to be classed, as whole milk is, with such food materials as eggs, meat, fish, poultry and cheese (though it is much more delicate than those foods) rather than with such substances as sugar, which serve only as fuel.

Two and a half quarts of skim milk contain almost as much protein and yield about the same amount of energy as a pound of round of beef.

Gasoline Excavator Does the Work of Fifty Men

A NEW piece of machinery available for the farmer or the contractor has made its appearance in the shape of a device for excavating cellars, digging ditches or loading wagons and carts with material from the ground level or below it. It consists of a nine horse power gasoline engine mounted on a frame and capable of being moved from point to point.

Power is transmitted from the motor by a drive chain to a drum at the top of the machine, on which a fifty-foot cable is wound. A slip scoop at the end of the cable carries the dirt from the pit or basement at any angle and delivers it into the wagon at the opposite side of the machine with approximately the speed and efficiency of fifty men.

The loading part of the machine is in no way complicated. When the loaded scoop reaches the machine the cable draws it into a steel holder on the end of a pair of lifting arms, which elevate the scoop, dirt and all, and empty it into the waiting wagon.

A wagon can be filled in less than five minutes. The scoop is automatically returned to the ground after unloading by the release of the friction clutch that conveys the power to the hoisting drum.

Novel Atomizer Size of Watch

A RECENT novelty is a pocket atomizer in the shape of a watch. The head or top has a small orifice, and the spray is produced by pressing on the flexible metal sides. A miniature funnel is provided for the filling, which is done by unscrewing the head. Another atomizer consists of a small cylindrical pump mounted on a cork so as to fit into any bottle and thus avoid handling of the perfume from one bottle to another. A plunger at the top serves to produce the spray from a side orifice. The tube which descends into the liquid has a second or telescoping end so that the tube can be extended down as far as the bottom of the bottle and thus take up all the liquid.

Indigo Industry Revived in China

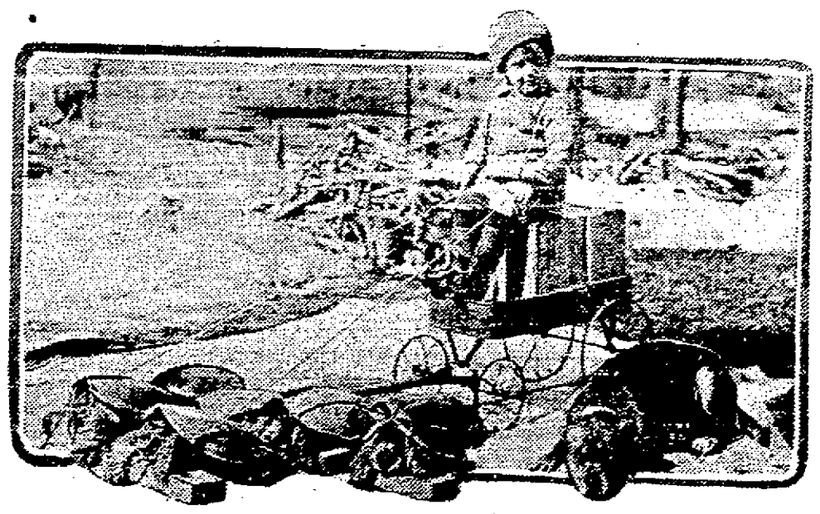

THE shortage of the supply of synthetic indigo in the markets of the world as a result of the war in Europe and the consequent high prices for imported indigo in Chinese markets has led to a revival of the native production of indigo in various parts of China. Indigo production is one of China's oldest industries. The Chinese developed their own process of making the dye and used their native product for many centuries before foreign dyes were known. The production of native indigo has continued ever since.

Eight Snapping Turtles Trained to Haul Boy's Cart

REX BASSLER, youngster of 6, living at Darien, Wis., has probably the strangest driving team in the world—a team of eight snapping turtles. Each weighs about thirty pounds and is from 50 to 75 years old. Rex has tamed these creatures, which naturally are savage, and they draw him in his express wagon like ponies driven by other children.

The youngster learned that turtles could be tamed while watching his father, Max Bassler, catching turtles for the New York and Philadelphia markets. He found that they were appreciative of kindly treatment and bits of food, and soon was able to make the turtles follow him about while they were being held for shipment to the East. Persuading his father to give him some of the largest, he finally grouped them for a driving team, and they seem to enjoy the sport as much as he likes to ride behind them.

The turtles in Rex's team are now so old that their backs are covered with moss. The two largest are males and are savage to all but Rex. He can handle them as he likes, and can even stand on their backs and let them walk off with him. The team is kept in line by means of a wire harness. Holes were drilled in the backs of the leaders' shells and in the front part of those following and all then wired together.

Poisoned Seeds Make Odd Plants

OBSERVATIONS on plant variation from poisoning of seeds have been reported in France by Professor A. Jungelson. After being placed for one to twenty-four hours in a dilute solution of sulphate of copper seeds of maize were planted, and a considerable proportion yielded abnormal spikes, the percentage of the abnormal plants being greatest among those from seeds that had been deprived of their seed coat or otherwise mutilated before exposure to the copper solution.

The mutilation alone produced no change in the character of the plants. The more intimate the contact of the poison the greater was the tendency of the plant to take on new forms.

Why Noah Lived 595 Years

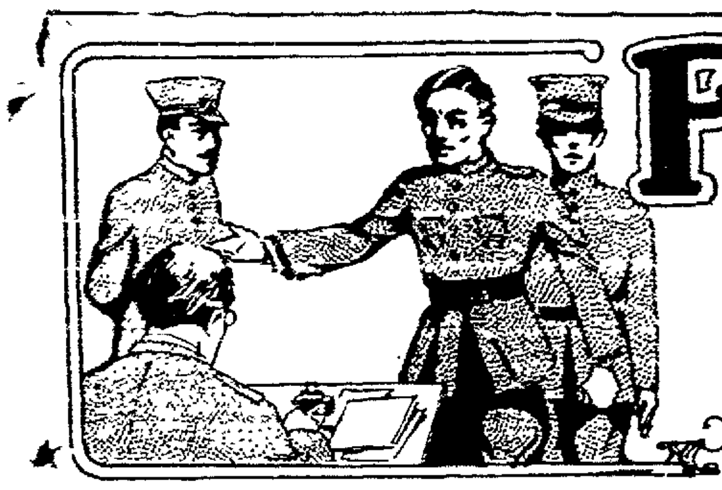

SCIENTISTS who see today how few people live to be 100 years old find themselves at a loss to explain how Methusaleh managed to live 969 years, while Noah reached the respectable age of 595 years. Recently, however, a discovery has been made which helps to explain this mystery.

When the causes of short life nowadays are counted up it is found that most of the deaths are due to disease. Very few people die from old age. And the reason why people die from any one disease is that they have been weakened by other illnesses which they have had or which have been handed down to them by their ancestors.

To some of these diseases the human race has become so accustomed that it is immune. Measles will kill off a whole Indian tribe, but among the white race it is only an annoying childhood malady. But the variations of disease increase far more rapidly than the immunity.

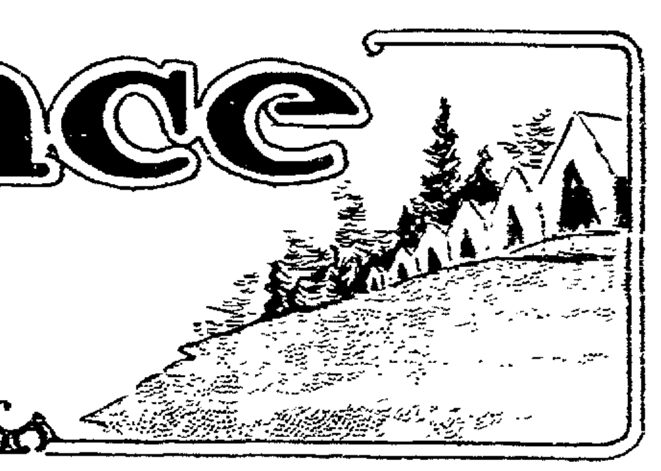

Noah and the other patriarchs had not nearly as many different kinds of diseases to face, because they had not had enough ancestors to hand them down a variety. Consequently their constitutions were not constantly being weakened as are ours today. For example, there is no reference in very ancient literature to a cold in the head. The Greeks and Romans seem to have been the first people to suffer from it.

The real reason why the patriarchs lived longer than we do now was because in those days the fount of humanity was fresher.

False Evidence

by E. Phillips Oppenheim

"Well, what is it then?" I asked.

"Well, it is just like this," she answered slowly; "he's coming himself to try and get it back again."

"Indeed! And when may I expect him?" I inquired, becoming suddenly interested.

"Tonight."

I leaned back in my chair and laughed drily. The woman must be mad.

"'Taint no laughing matter, master," she said sullenly. You'd 'a laughed t'other side o' your mouth, I can tell 'ee, if I hadn't a chosen ter come and tell 'ee. He ain't a coming to ask you for it. He's a coming to take it, and to pay yer back something as yer gave 'im at our cottage—him and a mate."

I began to see what it all meant now and to understand why the woman had come.

"And you've come here to put me on my guard, is that it?" I remarked.

"Yes. Yer gave me money when I was starving, and I felt sort 'er grateful. And when I 'eard them two blackguards a planning how they'd settle you I thought as they just shouldn't. If you puts a bullet in that 'long Jem,' which is my man's pal, I shall thank you for it. Jack's bad enough, specially when he's just getting 'round from a spell o' drinking, which he is now; but he's a sight worse. Cuss him. He's always a leading my Jack into something."

"What time are they coming?" I asked, thoughtfully.

"I 'eerd 'em say as they'l meet at Cop't Oak, which is a mile from here, as soon as it were dark, and hide until was all a-gone to bed. I'm mortal afeard of their seeing me, although I shall go 'ome t'other way."

I pressed her to stay at the cottage for the night, but she stubbornly refused. Her Jack would kill her if he found out that she had been there, she declared. But before she went I made her drink a glass of wine, and fill her pockets with bread and food which I had ordered in.

This promised to be an exciting night for me altogether, I thought, as I drew out my revolver from the cupboard and carefully loaded it. I was not inclined altogether to believe or altogether to disbelieve this woman's story, but at any rate there was no harm in being prepared. If I had gone to bed, there would have been little sleep for me with my head still throbbing with the vivid recollection of that terrible scene in the picture gallery. I dared not think of it. I dared not let my thoughts dwell for an instant on the inevitable consequencesof what had happened. The excitement of what might shortly take place kept me from the full sickening realization of the change which that evening's events must make in my life, but underneath it all there was a dull aching pain in my heart for had I not lost Maud?

Presently Marian and Mr. Holdern arrived. I had forgotten their very existence and directly the latter had taken his leave Marian was full of eager, agitated questions. Why had I left so suddenly? Had I quarreled with Sir Francis Devereux? What did it all mean? Maud had gone to her room with white face and looking like a ghost, and Lady Olive had not again entered the dancing-room. Sir Francis had apologized to his guests with the agitation of one who had received a great shock, and Rupert Devereux none of them had seen again; and I was mixed up in it. What did it all mean?"

She threw herself into my arms and when I saw the gathering tears in her soft gray eyes and her anxious, troubled look, I shrunk from the task before me.

"Not now, Marian: I will tell you tomorrow; wait until then," I begged. But she would not wait.

Then, with a great effort, I braced myself up and told her everything. She listened with ever-growing astonishment, and when I had finished she slipped down from my knee and sank upon the hearthrug.

"Poor papa!" she sobbed. "No wonder you hate that Rupert! Beast! Oh, Hugh, Hugh, why could you not tell me before? I ought to have known," she added reproachfully.

"It could have done no good," I answered.

"Oh, Hugh!" she sobbed. "Char——, Mr. Hold——"

"Mr. Holdern knows all about it," I interrupted. "I thought it right to tell him when he asked me for you."

A great relief brightened her face and she smiled through her tears. Even a woman is selfish when she is in love.

"I am glad he knows," she whispered, looking into the fire. "How strange it all seems! Why, our name is Devereux; you will be Sir Hugh Devereux. Why, Hugh, Devereux Court will be yours some day!"

"Never!" I answered firmly, "until Sir Francis asks my father's pardon and receives him as a son, I shall never take the name of Devereux or enter the court. I have sworn it, Marian."

"And it was noble of you to swear it, Hugh," she whispered, coming over and kissing me. "They say truth always comes out some time or other. Perhaps this will all come right some day."

"For our father's sake, pray that it may do, Marian dear," I answered gravely. "And now run along to bed; I have some writing to do."

She lingered by my side.

"Hugh, what are you going to do now? You will leave here, I suppose?"

"I must, Marian. Unless Sir Francis desires otherwise, I shall remain here until he has found some one else to take my place, though it will be as Hugh Arbuthnot, his agent, only, and into Devereux Court I will not go again. It will be well for Rupert Devereux, too, that he keeps out of my way," I added to myself. "When does Mr. Holdern want to marry you, Marian?" I asked her suddenly, changing the subject.

She blushed up to her eyes and looked at me half pleased, half reproachfully.

"Hugh! How could you ask me like that? I—I don't quite know."

"Because you'll have to go away with me, you know," I continued. "I can't leave you behind."

She looked serious enough now.

"Of course you can't, Hugh. I don't think I ought to leave you at all. You'll be alone if I do with no one to look after you."

I pretended to look serious, as though considering the matter, but her piteous expression and quivering lips were irresistible, and I broke into a reassuring laugh.

"Not I, Marian! It is the best thing that could possibly have happened. When I have no longer you to look after I shall go abroad, wherever our father is, and share his lot. Country life is beginning to get wearisome to me. I was meant to be a soldier I think. Now, Marian, you must really go to bed. I want to be alone."

It was past 12 and I was beginning to get anxious. But she still lingered for a moment.

"Hugh, I had almost forgotten, I have something for you and a message."

I bent over my desk lest she should see the light which sprung into my face. I did not wish even Marian to know my secret.

"What is it?" I asked. "Be quick."

"Why, she came to me like I've never seen her before as lifeless and sorrowful as anything, and said, 'Tell your brother that I think he is behaving nobly, and that I hope we shall always be friends.'"

"She said that!" I exclaimed, starting round, "Maud said that"

My sister looked up amazed.

"Maud! I didn't say anything about Maud. She didn't even speak to me. It was Lady Olive, and she sent you this."

I stretched out my hand for the gold-topped cut glass little smelling salts which Marian was holding out for me and laid it down before me. Disappointed though I was, it was a kindly act of Lady Olive's, and I was just in that mood when a man appreciates such a one. For a moment or two I felt very tenderly toward Lady Olive, for, reckless little flirt though she was, she was generous and warm-hearted, or she would never have done this.

"It is very kind of her," I said, huskily. "Good night, Marian!"

"Good night, Hughie. Don't sit up late, dear, and don't fret. It makes me feel so selfish, Hugh, to think that I can't help being happy because—because of Charlie, but I can't help it. I do love him so, and he is so good to me."

Then at last she went and I was left alone. First of all I put a heavy shade upon the lamp and placed it so that no one could possibly see it from outside. Then I finished loading my revolver and put a life preserver in my breast pocket. Going out on tip-toe into the hall I opened the passage door and also left my own wide open, so that if anyone should attempt to enter the house from any room I must hear them. This seemed to me to be all that I could do and, drawing my easy chair into the corner of the room which faced both door and windows, I sat down and waited patiently with my revolver on my knee.

At first the time did not seem long. I had come to a crisis in my life and there was much for me to think about. In the twenties, however dark and doubtful the future may be, there is always a certain fascination connected with it—possibilities, however remote, which the sanguine spirit of youth loves to peer into and investigate. And so I sat and thought, and considered, and longed, without ever getting sleepy or feeling the spell of weariness.

Two o'clock struck, and of a sudden a curious change came over me. I became so violently restless that I could sit no longer in my chair. Sober-minded people may scoff at such a statement, but I declare that some irresistible impulse compelled me to go to the nearest window and look cautiously out.

The window was not one of the front ones, but was one which looked sideways over a strip of garden, a thick privet hedge, into a dark black fir plantation, through which ran a private pathway into the garden of the court. At first I could see nothing, then suddenly the blood died out from my cheeks, even from my lips, and I stood transfixed, rooted to the spot—my limbs numbed and helpless as though under the spell of some hideous nightmare.

What my eyes looked upon my reason refused to credit. Turning from the handgate to the plantation, without a hat, and with a wealth of golden hair streaming down upon a swansdown cloak was—Maud! It was impossible: it was ridiculous—it was beyond all credence. And yet my straining, riveted eyes watched her walk slowly, with her usual stately, even tread, down the grass-grown path between the plantation and the hedge of the cottage garden, and disappear from sight.

Though an earthquake had yawned at my feet I could not have moved. Nothing but sound can break up such a spell as this sudden shock had laid upon me. And the sound came, for suddenly there broke upon the stillness of the night such a cry as I had never heard before—the thrilling, agonized shriek of a woman in mortal fear.

CHAPTER XV.

"Cousins!"

Like the shock from a galvanic battery did that sound breathe life into my frozen limbs. Holding a chair before my face, I literally burst through the high French windows, crashing the glass and splintering the framework into a thousand pieces. With the cry of a wild beast I dashed across the lawn and leaped over the privet hedge. Maud, my Maud, was scarcely a dozen yards from me, struggling in the grasp of the man who had come to rob me of his confession, with his great hand pressed against her wild, beautiful face to stop her cries.

They heard me coming and he half released her, and with his other hand pointed a revolver at me. But passion must have lent me wings for before he could pull the trigger I had dashed it into the air, where it exploded harmlessly, and with my clenched fist I struck him such a blow as I had never struck before or since. He was a powerful man, with a thick, bullet-shaped head, but he went down like a log and well-nigh never rose again. His companion, without a word, turned and ran across the park like a hare, and I let him go.

Maud was in my arms, sobbing hysterically, Maud with the moon shining down on her blanched but exquisite face and her white arms thrown around my neck. If she were the daughter of a prince of hell she was still the woman I loved, and I stooped and covered her cold face and lips with passionate kisses. Then I caught her up in my arms, for she was shivering, and ran with her to the house.

Every one had been roused by the sound of my exit and the report of the revolver. Marian, with her dressing-gown loosely wrapped around her, was standing trembling at the head of the stairs, and behind her were the servants, more frightened than she was. When she saw me cross the hall with Maud's lifeless form (for her faint seemed almost the faint of death) in my arms, she gave vent to one cry of blank amazement and horror and then hurried down to us.

"Hugh, Hugh," she whispered, clinging to me as I laid my burden down on the sofa and fell on my knees by its side. "Maud here! Maud out in the park at this time of night! What has happened, Hugh? What does it all mean?"

"Can't you see?" I muttered hoarsely, never withdrawing my eyes from the white, cold face. "She has had a fright and has fainted!"

"But what on earth has brought her here—out at this time of night? And in her slippers, too!"

I was on the point of saying that I knew no more than she, but suddenly the truth flashed into my mind. Maud had walked out in her sleep! I had heard her say that for a long time she had been obliged to have her maid in her room at night and sleep with locked doors and that when Sir Francis lay dangerously ill not many years ago, nearly every night when she had gone to bed [illegible] of him she had risen in her sleep and tried to make her way to his room. Then she must have been thinking of me! A sudden thrill of joy passed through me at the thought and Marian looked at me in stupefied bewilderment to see the smile which for a moment parted my lips.

"She must have come out in her sleep, Marian," I whispered. "There were some men hanging about outside—poachers, I suppose—and they have frightened her. Get some brandy, quick! and tell one of the girls to light a fire. We must have some hot water."

She hurried away and the door had scarcely closed when Maud changed her position slightly and her lips moved. I bent my ear close over her and this is what I heard.

"Hugh! Hugh!"

My heart throbbed with a great joy. Suddenly I stooped down and kissed her [illegible] back and stood upright, for I saw that she was fast recovering consciousness.

First her breathing became deeper and less fitful. Then, with a little sigh, she opened her eyes and raised herself a little on her elbow.

She looked around in blank bewilderment. Then her eyes fell upon me, and the hot color rushed into her cheeks.

"Mr. Arbuthnot! Why, where am I? How did I come here? and those men," she added, with a shudder, "those fearful men: was it all a dream?"

She raised her hand to her forehead and looked at me appealingly. I hardened my voice as much as possible and avoided meeting her eyes.

"I think I can explain to you what has happened," I said. "You must have got up in your sleep and walked down through the copse. There were some men outside: I believe they were going to try to break in here, and one of them must have caught hold of you, for when I heard you scream and ran out, you were struggling in his grasp. I knocked him down and the other one ran away. Then I carried you here and here you are. Marian has just gone out to fetch some brandy."

Womanlike, her first thought was of her appearance, and she sat up and looked at herself eagerly. Evidently she had fallen asleep before preparing to retire, for the only change in her dress since the evening was that she had exchanged her dinner gown for a long white dressing robe, and let down her hair. Nevertheless, she blushed as she sat up, and looked at me, pushing back the waves of hair from her face.

"I remember falling asleep in the easy chair," she said slowly, "and after that everything seems like a horrid dream. Those men's fearful faces, and you—oh, how fierce you looked! But it all seems very indistinct."

Then Marian came in and she turned to her smiling.

"Miss Arbuthnot, I'm afraid you'll think this a very unceremonious morning call. You didn't know I was a sleep walker, did you?"

Marian put down the decanter she was carrying with a little cry of relief.

"Oh, dear, I'm so glad to see you all right again. What an awful adventure you've had!"

Maud smiled placidly. She was her old self again, stately and composed.

"It might have been a great deal worse but for your brother," she acknowledged. "I wonder if they've found out at the court. They'll be getting a little anxious if they have."

"Unless I'm very much mistaken, they've found out," I answered. "Listen."

I went out and threw open the hall door. Clearly enough we could hear the alarm bell at the court clanging out with shrill, quick strokes and the whole of the park seemed dotted with men carrying lanterns, looking like will-o'-the-wisps, and making the soft night air echo with their hoarse shouts. Two figures were rapidly approaching the cottage and I hailed them.

"Have you seen anything of Miss Devereux?" called out Groves, the head butler. "She's out in the park somewhere a-walking in her sleep."

"She is here," I answered, and then I went in and told Maud that they had come for her.

Marian left us to find a warmer cloak and thicker shoes and for a moment we were together. She turned to me at once with a sweet, sad smile on her lips and a look of regret shining out of the azure depths of her dim eyes.

"Mr. Arbuthnot, I had quite forgotten, in all this excitement, which happened in the picture gallery. We are cousins, are we not?"

I shook my head.

"It is not a relationship which I shall claim," I answered slowly. "If I should see you again before I go, Miss Devereux, it will be as Mr. Arbuthnot."

Her eyes were speaking to me—speaking words which her lips could not utter, but I avoided them.

Eager voices were hurrying through the garden, and Maud held out her hand with a hurried gesture.

"At any rate, you will let me thank you for your timely aid this evening. But for you I don't know what might not have happened."

I took her hand and raised it to my lips. Then I let it drop and moved toward the door.

"I think I ought to thank you rather," I answered, with a pretense at a laugh, "for giving me the alarm. If those fellows had got into the house and taken me by surprise, things might have been worse for me, at any rate."

I opened the door and admitted Groves and several of the other servants. Francis Devereux was there, too, but he stood on the pathway outside, without offering to enter, neither did I invite him at once, and then I explained to the gaping little crowd what had happened.

"What became of the one you knocked over, sir?" asked Groves, after the little chorus of wondering exclamations had subsided.

"There now, most likely," I answered, with a start. "I'd forgotten all about him."

We all trooped over to the spot and there he lay, doubled up in the underwood, his face drawn with pain, and still unconscious. To say that I was sorry for him would have been a lie; nay, if Rupert Devereux had lain by his side I should have been only the better pleased. But he lay so still and motionless that I stooped over him anxiously and felt his heart. It was beating, though faintly, and I felt distinctly relieved when I looked up again.

"He's alive," I declared, "but only just. Better get him some brandy."

They brought him some from the house, and I poured it between his lips. He revived at once.

"We'd a best take him up to the court, sir," remarked Groves. "You won't want him down here with only yourself in the house."

So they took him away and as the long streaks of red light in the east slowly deepened until the autumn sun rose up from behind the pine trees like a ball of glowing fire, I threw myself down on the couch and slept.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"Give Warning."

By 10 o'clock in the morning I had written a letter which had caused me a good deal of trouble and anxiety. It was to Sir Francis Devereux.

"The Cottage, Devereux, Wednesday Morning. Dear Sir Francis Devereux—You will, I am sure, agree with me that the revelation of last evening renders it imperative on my part to leave Devereux at once, or as soon as possible. I must ask you, therefore, to accept this note as an intimation of my desire to do so as soon as is convenient to yourself.

"No one could regret more than I do the necessity which has arisen, and I am deeply sensible of all your kindness to myself and to my sister. But, under the circumstances, it would be, of course, quite impossible for me to remain here as your agent, nor am I sure you would wish it. As to the other offer which you were generous enough to make, the answer which I gave you at the time is absolutely irrevocable.

"With regard to the attempted burglary here last night and assault upon Miss Devereux, I shall be prepared to give evidence when the man is charged. There are several matters connected with the estate with which I will not now trouble you, but which I shall be glad to lay before you or Mr. Benson before I go. My books I am prepared to hand over to my successor or to Mr. Benson at any moment.

"Thanking you again for the uniform and, I fear, undeserved kindness which I have always received from you, I remain yours obediently,

"To Colonel Sir Francis Devereux, Bart."

Having dispatched this, I ordered Black Prince and rode away to a distant part of the estate to superintend the felling of some timber. As usual, when going any distance, I took some lunch in my pocket and ate it on a stile while the men knocked off for dinner. Just as I had lit my pipe and was preparing to start work again—for I was not afraid of using my hands and used to take a pleasure in getting through as much as any of the men—I heard the sound of horses' hoofs on the smooth, wide, velvet sward and, glancing up quickly saw that the whole party from the court were close upon me, all except Maud and the elders.

I drew back indifferently to let them pass, and bowed to Lady Olive, who was riding by the side of Francis Devereux. She started when she saw me and detaching herself from the rest of the party, rode over to me.

"Fancy coming upon you, Mr. Arbuthnot, and hard at work. What are you doing?"

"Cutting down trees, Lady Olive."

"Well, you look a nice mess," she declared, frankly. "What do you want to work yourself for? It's a shame that you should."

I laughed at her indignation, thinking only that her flushed cheeks made her look uncommonly pretty.

"I like working," I answered. "What would you have me do? Shack about with my hands in my pockets all day?"

"I don't know," she said, hotly. "But when I think of that idle, lazy young Francis dawdling his life away, doing nothing except ape a man about town, and then of you working hard every day, and remember who you are, it makes me feel angry. Do you know, I longed just now to push him out of his saddle. It wouldn't take much, I don't think."

I laughed outright, but Lady Olive remained serious enough.

"Well, perhaps you'll be pleased to hear that I am going to give up working—here at any rate," I said. "Of course I can't stop now."

She looked steadily between her horse's ears, growing a shade paler, and I leaned against the stump of an oak tree wondering how a riding-habit could have been made to fit so well, and admiring her dainty little figure.

"When are you going?" she said, suddenly.

I shrugged my shoulders.

"As soon as Sir Francis will let me. I have 'given warning.'"

She looked down at me and spoke a little hurriedly, but with a frank, sincere look in her flushed face.

"Mr. Arbuthnot—I suppose I must call you Mr. Arbuthnot—I think yours is the saddest story I have ever heard. I want you to let me tell you that I feel for you, as much as anyone possibly could do, and I think you are behaving splendidly, just as I would have my own brother behave if he were in the same position."

I felt more moved even than I should have cared to own, for I was just in that mood when kind words are sweet, and I had always liked Lady Olive.

"You are very good," I said, warmly. "Believe me, it is a great pleasure to me to hear you say this."

"Have you any idea yet where you are going?" she asked, "or what you are going to do?"

I shook my head.

"To London, first, and then I shall try and discover my father and get him to let me throw in my lot with his. Somehow I think that I shall end by being a soldier. It's in the blood, I suppose."

"Mr. Arbuthnot," she said, frankly, stretching out her hand, "may we not be friends? I have never asked so much of a man before, but, but——"

I took her little hand, and did not at once release it.

"I shall be always glad to think of you as such," I said, warmly, "but I'm afraid it isn't very likely that we shall meet again after I leave here. My life and yours will lie very far apart."

"I'm not so sure of that," she answered, with an attempt at gayety. "I'm going to travel about a good deal next year and—and, Mr. Arbuthnot," she added, coloring a little deeper, "I know you'll forgive me for saying it, but my father—he's ambassador at Rome now, you know—has a good deal of influence in London, and especially at the foreign office, and if there was anything we could do for you—oh, you know what I want to say," she broke off suddenly, and looking away that I might not see the tears in her eyes. "You may want to try and get some appointment abroad or something, or even if you decided to go into the army he might be useful to you, and he would do anything I asked him. He is very kind and—and it would make me very happy to feel that we were helping you a little."

Was it so great a sin that for a moment I longed to draw that tearful little face down to mine and kiss it? I had never been in the least danger of falling in love with Lady Olive, bright and fascinating though she was, but at that moment it occurred to me that the man who won her would be a very fortunate man indeed.

"Lady Olive," I said, earnestly, "I scarcely know how to thank you. I cannot tell you how much I feel your kindness. I shall take you at your word and write you if ever I need any help, and if I do not I shall always like to think of your offer."

She smiled down at me beamingly.

"I am so glad you're not offended. Of course I shall see you again before you go, and I will bring you down a card with my address in London. Good-bye. No, au revoir."

She touched her horse with the whip and galloped away after the others, and the bright winter's day seemed to me less bright when she had gone. I watched her out of sight, and at the bend of the grassy road she turned round in her saddle and waved her whip. I returned her farewell with my hat then, when she disappeared. I went back to my place among the men and worked till the perspiration streamed down my face, and I was obliged to take off my coat and hang it on a branch of a fallen tree. But I feel all the better for it, for it has always seemed to me, as it did then, that [illegible] physical labor is the most magnificent relaxation for an overwrought mind. When the last [illegible] work was over I was stiff and my arms were sore, but my heart was lighter than [illegible] my pipe and [illegible] I remain while one of the laborers [illegible] gone for [illegible] horse, until he, too, followed the others and I was left alone.

At least I thought so, but I was mistaken. A voice, croaking and weak, almost at my shoulder, suddenly startled me and I turned round to find an old woman bent double, leaning on her stick, with her hawklike eyes fixed upon me.

"Who be'st thou?" she said. "Be you him as they call the agent?"

I acknowledged that it was so, and that my name was Arbuthnot.

"It's a lie," she answered, deliberately. "Dost think that Sarah Milsham knaw'st not a Devereux when she sees'st one? Be'st thou Muster Herbert's son? God bless him."

I looked around anxiously, but there was not a soul in sight.

"Thou be'st a son o' my Mr. Herbert," she muttered. "I knaw'st thou be'st so [illegible] that I thought thee was a ghost, boy. What be'st thou a doing here? Where's't thy father?"

"Abroad, mother, since you know me. Who are you?"

"Who be I?" she laughed, a mirthless, unpleasant laugh. "Why, thee hasna' heard of Sarah Milsham? I nursed your father when he were a baby. What be'st doing here, boy? Hast come to kill Rupert Devereux?"

"He deserves it," I cried hotly.

"So afore God he does," cried the old hag, tremulously, "and die he will, for I ha' seen the mark o' death upon his forehead. But it'll be no' by your hand, no' by your hand, boy. What be'st a doing here? Go to thy father, boy! Why hast left him alone?"

"I am going," I answered. "Please God I shall be with him before many months."

"Ay, go, boy, go," she quivered out, "and tell him this from me. Tell him that sure as Devereux Court is built upon a rock, I, Sarah Milsham, shall live to see him here again. Sure as that limb of hell, Rupert Devereux, bears the seal of death, so sure the day will come when the whole country shall welcome him home again, and old Sir Francis shall be proud t' own him for his son. Tell him Sarah Milsham said so."

She hobbled away into the wood and commenced picking up sticks. I would have followed her, but she held out her hand to prevent me, and would not answer me when I spoke. So I mounted Black Prince and galloped away homeward.

When I entered Marian's room I saw that she had a visitor. Sir Francis Devereux was leaning back in my easy chair, laughing at one of my sister's quaint speeches, and she was handing him a cup of tea.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Sir Francis Devereux's Appeal.

Of all the contingencies which had occurred to me, this was one which I had not considered, for only once since I had been its occupant had Sir Francis called at the cottage. But his greeting was even a greater surprise to me.

"Hugh, my boy," he said, rising and holding out his hand, "I have come down to have a chat with you, and Miss Marian has been giving me some tea."

Something in his look, his accent and his words warned me that the battle of last night would have to be fought over again. But for a while he talked of nothing, save of last night's strange adventure and minor matters connected with the estate, of the turnip prospects and the timber felling, until Marian left us to change her frock. Then, after opening the door for her with his usual stately courtesy, he returned to the hearth rug, and with the firelight playing round his tall, slim figure, and with a soft almost appealing light relaxing the hard lines in his face, he commenced speaking.

"Hugh," he said slowly, "they call me a proud man, but I have come here to beg a great boon from you. Nay, let me go on," for I would have interrupted him. "Let me say outright what I have come to say," he continued, stretching out his hands as though to silence me. "I want to tell you a little of my history.

"You know, perhaps, that I was married twice. To you I do not mind admitting that my last marriage was an unfortunate one. Your grandmother was the only woman I ever loved, and it was her son who took her place in my heart—not Rupert's mother, much less Rupert himself. Perhaps I am much to blame, but none the less it is a fact that the death of my second wife gave me little sorrow, and I have never been able to feel toward Rupert as a father should feel toward his son. And since that day when I knew that it was his evidence (although he was right to give it) which had brought irretrievable disgrace upon the name of Devereux, I have never been able—I say it to my shame—I have never been able to bear the sight of him."

Sir Francis walked restlessly to the other end of the room, and then returning, took up his old position.

"For twenty years, Hugh, I have been a lonely, unhappy man. Gradually I began to lose all pride and interest in our family name, and even the court itself, every stone of which was once dear to me. Everything that had made life endurable for me and pleasant had gone. My pride in and love for my son who had gone away with my blessing to be where a Devereux should always be, in his country's battles, was suddenly blasted forever. He disgraced our long list of ancestors, disgraced himself and me, and instead of falling on his sword, as he should have done, came home here, turned out of the army—a Devereux turned out of the army, to beg for my forgiveness."

My heart was burning, but I judged it wisest to hold my peace. He had thrown his head back and his eyes were sparkling with anger. His frowning face was as stern and hard as marble and, old man though he was, he looked terrible.

For a moment there was silence and then he went on—

"Enough of him! If it had been Rupert I might some day have forgiven him. But Herbert, my eldest son, who at my death must be the head of the Devereuxs—oh, it is a cursed, cruel thing!"

He turned his back upon me and I heard a sort of gasping sob. I made a pretense of stirring the fire and when I had finished he was himself again.

"For twenty years," he went on, "I have lived alone with a leaden weight of misery dragging me down almost to the grave. And yet I have struggled against death for the simple reason that the thought of that disgraced man who was once my son calling himself the head of the Devereuxs, and lying down to rest within the walls of Devereux Court, has kept me hanging on to life. My son a coward! My God, what had I done to deserve this?"

"He was not a coward," I interrupted, passionately. "Rupert lied! I knew he lied! He was jealous! John Hilton has confessed to me!"

Sir Francis shook his head sorrowfully.

"The word of a servant discharged without a character is worth very little, especially when it is directed against his master," he said. "No, Hugh, my boy, if you had lived as long as I have, and had been a soldier, you would know that a court-martial never errs. It never convicts except on overwhelming evidence, and its judgments are absolute. General [illegible] when he returned to England, and from [illegible] I learned the [illegible]"

I remained silent. One might as well have talked to the Sphinx as to this [illegible] old soldier.

"I have come to make you an offer, Hugh," he went on in an altogether different tone of voice, "or rather to make you a request, and I beg you to remember that it is one which lies very near an old man's heart. I am childless and lonely, and weary of seeing none but girls' faces around me. Come and live with me as my grandson. Let that subject, on which we can never agree, be buried between us. Why should you go away on a wild goose chase? Devereaux Court is your natural home. Come and live there."

I stood up and faced him. He was very much in earnest, I could see, for the long white hand which rested upon the chimney-piece was shaking and his eyes were eagerly searching my face for its answer, but what they read there could not have been encouraging, for I never wavered for an instant.

"Sir Francis," I asked firmly, "does a Devereaux ever break his oath or neglect his duty?"

He shook his head.

"Never!"

"Neither will I, then," I answered; "my duty would never urge me to renounce my father, whose innocence I firmly believe in, and if I did I should break my oath. Sir Francis, I feel for you, and I love Devereux, but what you ask I distinctly and absolutely refuse."

He walked to the window, and stood there for a moment gazing across the park, with his hands behind him. Then he turned round suddenly and commenced drawing on his dogskin gloves. He held himself up in his usual stiff, soldierly manner, but I could see that he was hurt and deeply disappointed.

"More than I have said I cannot say," he remarked, quietly. "Good-by, Hugh; make my apologies to your sister."

I walked with him to the door, and watched him walk across the park with head bent more than usual, and slow, weary footsteps. Oh, that I could succeed in my life's desire and bring him home the son he loved! What would I not give to attain my end! And yet, save through my Uncle Rupert, how could I possibly succeed? My Uncle Rupert! Was it not strange that Maud's father should be the man whom I hated more than anyone or anything on earth!

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Good-by to Devereaux Court.

Mr. Holdern dined with us that evening, and when he and I had the table to ourselves, and little clouds of blue smoke began to curl upward to the ceiling, he made a sudden request of me.

"I want you to let me have Marian at once," he said. "Why not let us be married before you go away?"

I raised but few objections, for the plan suited me. But Marian, when we told her, protested that a month was much too soon. Strangely enough, however, when I took her view, and rescinded my consent, she went over to the other side; so I gave in, and it was settled as they wished. An aunt of Mr. Holdern's was written for, and arrived in a few days in a most excited state, with two tin trunks and a box of caps. A dressmaker took up her abode in our other spare room, and peace at the cottage was at an end. Even in my sanctum I was never safe, for Marian would keep waltzing in with her mouth full of pins and her hair all disarranged, to beseech me to give my opinion as to the draping of a gown, or to inquire shyly, with a blushing face, whether I thought Charlie would like this or that! Altogether those few last weeks at the cottage were not quiet ones.

Lady Olive came often and assisted eagerly at the grave consultations. But I saw her only for a moment or two now and then, for there were many things on the estate which needed my attention just then, especially as I was going so soon, and I was out most nights till long after our usual dinner hour.

Once Maud came, but I did not see her, and I was glad of it. If it had been possible I would have left Devereaux without another word with her. But that was not to be.

On the morning before the wedding I saddled Black Prince myself and took him out for a farewell ride. I would sooner say farewell to a man than a horse any day! The Black Prince had been my chief companion at Devereaux, and a very beautiful one too. He had never been the same to anyone else, they told me; in fact, he had got the name of being a brute, but whenever I entered the stable he would whinny and rub his head against my coat sleeve, holding it there sometimes, and looking up at me out of his mild, brown eyes as though imploring me to take him out. And now I was riding him for the last time! For the last time I watched him stretch out his legs for a gallop, and felt him bound away under me as he thundered over the turf. For the last time he picked up his legs as clean as a Leicestershire hunter, and flew over the park railings like a bird. And then who should we meet, as though to spoil our ride, but Maud and her father cantering over the moor toward us, Maud with flashing eyes and a color springing into her soft cheeks as she waved her whip ever so slightly, with a half-imperative gesture. But I would see none of it. What had Black Prince and I to do with them? Nobly he answered my whisper and cleared the high stone wall which separated us, and left them on their way to the house, whilst he and I flew on toward the desolate moorland, heedless whither we went, so that we were alone.

Three days more and I shall be away—out of temptation, out of Paradise, alone in the world, with my life's work before me. What matter! Banish such thoughts—away with them! Away with that sweet, sad face, with its proud lips and sorrowing eyes! What are these to my Prince and I, whilst we fly across the moorland, over hedges and fences, with the earth skimming beneath and the wind-swept sky clear and bright above! Live the present! Bury the past! Welcome the future! Regrets and haunting memories are the plagues of the devil. The Black Prince and I will have none of them.

Ah! that was a wild ride. The wonder to me now is that we ever reached home safely. But we did, and when we got there I led him into the stable myself, and took the bit out of his mouth, and the saddle from his back. I watched him munch his corn, and daintily thrust his nose into the bucket of chilled water, and when I turned away and walked into the house there was a lump in my throat.

A gentleman was waiting to see me in my study, I was told—and without asking his name, and with very little curiosity, I crossed the hall and entered the room. Then I gave a great start, and my fingers closed upon my riding whip, for upon the hearthrug, hat in hand, stood my Uncle Rupert.

Had he not been Maud's father I should have taken him by the neck and thrown him from the house. As it was I stood waiting with the door in my hand and an angry sparkle in my eyes.

"You are not pleased to see me, Mr. Arbuthnot," he began, nervously. "I did not expect that you would be. But my daughter tells me that she has scarcely thanked you for your gallant behavior the other night, and [illegible] her father I [illegible] that I might be permitted to come and offer you my most heartfelt thanks."

And this was my Uncle Rupert! this tall, thin man with the eager eyes and nervous manner, and [illegible] tone. For, though I hated him I could not help noticing that I had never heard a man's voice more pleasant to listen to. Whence had come the affected manners and thinly veiled snobbism of my cousin Francis? Not from his father.

"I fear that Miss Devereux, in her very natural terror, has exaggerated the service I was fortunate to be able to render her," I answered coldly. "I trust that she has recovered from the shock."

"Quite, thank you, Mr. Arbuthnot, there was another reason which brought me here. All through my life—which has been a most unhappy one—I have constantly been troubled with the reflection that though innocently (that you will not [illegible]) of poor Herbert's—your father's trouble. If I could render his son even the slightest service it would be a great happiness to me. You are going to London, I hear. You know no one there, and you have no friends. Could you not make my house your home? You will not take the name of Devereux, I hear, but Mr. Arbuthnot would always be a welcome and an honored guest."

"You have a conscience, then, Rupert Devereux?" I said, quietly.

He looked at me appealingly, flushing to the very roots of his hair.

"I scarcely understand," he began, hesitatingly.

"Let me explain, then," I said, looking at him steadily. "It seems to me that, having wrecked my father's life by a deliberate conspiracy, you are now seeking to expiate that most damnable sin by conferring favors upon his son. It will not do, Rupert Devereux!"

I should have pitied him had he been any other man, for he stood there looking distressed and disappointed. But, remembering who it was, I watched him with a bitter, sneering smile.

"Then there is nothing more to be said, I suppose," he remarked, with a sigh. "I had better go."

"You had better go," I echoed. "The only words I shall ever care to hear from your lips will be a confession of your villainous lie. I cannot believe that you will have the courage to die with that foul sin on your conscience."

He moved his position, and then for the first time I remarked how like he was in the outline of the face and the features to Maud. But the likeness softened me not one whit toward him, whilst it made me feel harder toward her.

He moved toward the door with a dejected gesture.

"You are very hard," he said, in a low tone, "very hard for one so young. But I dare say that, according to your view of the matter, you are right, quite right. If you won't let me help you in any way, you won't. It's only another disappointment in a life of disappointments. I must go, then, Mr. Arbuthnot. But if at any time you should change your mind, come to me. I live in Mayfair, London."

He walked out, and, without answering his farewell, I opened the door and let him go in silence. This was my first interview with my Uncle Rupert.

On the morrow Marian was married to Mr. Holdern. It was a very quiet wedding down at the village church, but it went off very pleasantly, and Marian looked charming in her plain white satin gown and simple veil. As we were entering the church I had a great surprise. Sir Francis Devereux, in a black frock coat, and with an orchid in his buttonhole, called me on one side for a moment and asked for permission to give away the bride. I would have preferred refusing such an unusual request—unusual, at any rate, as it would seem to those who knew us as Mr. and Miss Arbuthnot—but he looked so much in earnest that I could not find it in my heart to hurt his feelings. So, in ignorance of what they were beholding, the villagers of Devereux saw Sir Francis give his granddaughter away, while I, his grandson, stood a few yards behind.

A woman once told me that she always felt inclined to cry at weddings and laugh at funerals. I can understand it. There is something in the former exquisitely, though covertly, pathetic; while in the latter case tears are so obviously the correct thing, that sometimes they absolutely refuse to come. I feel certain that the tears were not far from Sir Francis' eyes as he shook hands with us in the churchyard. Perhaps they were not far from mine.

There were presents from nearly every one at the court and a sealed envelope from Sir Francis, which, when we opened it, contained a check for a thousand pounds. I had offered to make over to Marian half of my little income, but Mr. Holdern was resolute, and even peremptory, in his refusal. They would have a good deal more money now than they could spend in their quiet country home, and eventually, feeling that Holdern was sincere in his refusal, I had given way. Money would certainly be useful, nay, necessary, for me in carrying out the course of action on which I had decided. And so I kept it.

One day longer I had to spend at Devereux, and a dreary day it was. All the morning I was busy balancing accounts with the solicitor to the estate, and in the afternoon I finished packing. In the evening after dinner I wrote a note to Sir Francis, bidding him farewell. He would understand, I said, why I did not come to him personally. An oath was not a thing to be broken, and I had sworn that over the threshold of Devereux court I would not pass, save with my father. So I was compelled to write him instead, but I did my best to make my letter as cordial and grateful as possible, and within an hour an answer came back, short and informal.

"Farewell, Hugh, my boy. God bless you, wherever you may go, and remember always that though you may call yourself Hugh Arbuthnot, you are still a Devereux of Devereux, and this place is your home whenever you care to make it so. Ever yours,

"FRANCIS DEVEREUX."

Through many lands and many years I carried with me that half sheet of thick, heavily-crested note paper. And, yellow with age, it reposes now in the secret drawer of my cabinet.

I sent no farewell to Maud. It was better not. My Maud she could never be, though never another should take her place. Me she would soon forget. I was not vain enough to think otherwise for a moment. Only yesterday I had seen her riding with that ill-bred [illegible] Lord Annerly, the son of a lawyer peer, with all his father's innate vulgarity and never a feather's weight of his brains. [illegible] her have him if she would, him or any other—or let her flirt with him, lead him on by the beauty of her dazzling fair face and the glances of her deep blue eyes. Let her flirt with him and then throw him over with a light laugh as very likely she would have done me. A fig for all women! An ounce of philosophy would weigh them all down to the scales of reason. But at 24 that ounce is hard to get!

Famous Authority on Physical Culture Declares Dancing Is the Best Form of Exercise for Hips and Lower Limbs

Dr Roller, in the following article, discusses pics suggested in letters from readers. He will deavor to answer through these columns all telligent and sincere inquiries pertaining to alth and physical betterment. No personal di- noses will be made or prescriptions given, and pics discussed will be those of general interest the public.

By DR. B. F. ROLLER.

I HAVE had a number of requests for special directions to develop the lower limbs The business and social habits of modern times, which have in their curriculum such a small and limited space for exercise, require many men and women to sit in the office all day long and often in the theatres and cafés most of the night.

They ride in elevators, taxicabs in cars even to the gymnasium. I am not sur- ed at anxious inquiries about the much neglected rthermore, there has been but little opp r y for the public to learn accurately and scien- ally the kind of exercise which develops the r limbs, or, for that matter, any other part of body. The directions usually published, at least it has been my misfortune to observe, are more ently wrong than right. Imagine a woman in with her shoes on trying to show invalids and old e how to exercise! How can one develop the by twisting the legs into a letter "X" or take off y punching himself in the face? Picture a big with a pink rose baby ribbon tied around his swinging his gigantic foot to develop the legs hips.

fellow asked me to recommend an exercise for loping his legs, and I told him to run upstairs said he had been advised that that was the most erous exercise in the world; that one should run upstairs, but that he might run down- provided he held on to the rail. Running down- holding on to a railing may be a beautiful diver- in an old ladies' home, but as an exercise it is a e. Nobody can run downstairs all the time, besides, you would have to run downstairs about y miles to get enough exercise to make you he fast.

nning upstairs is one of the best exercises I of. Of course, no one would prescribe that sort ing for a person with heart disease any more he would a balancing exercise for a patient with ose veins or a broken leg, or a clawing exercise inflamed eczematous face. All exercises should carefully chosen, properly prescribed and done a definite purpose.

No one is competent to prescribe exercises y more than medicines unless he has a medi- education, and it is to be hoped that the pub- will soon recognize that fact.

oose your athletic adviser as carefully as you d your physician, and studiously avoid the ks, who sell their names and pictures, but hire body to write their stuff.

ancing and swinging exercises are, as a rule, to booed. To increase your thigh one-sixteenth of ch you would have to swing your foot long gh to wear out a sun dial, and you would get ose veins without fail. Besides stair running rope jumping there are several good exercises veloping the lower limbs. One of the best is quatting exercise illustrated in one of my recent es for boys. Another was the stationary run —I included in the business man's article. An- is the standing foot extension exercise (Figure the exercises for girls, which was also printed s series.

The best of all to develop the lower limbs, to educe symmetry of the entire body from the st down, as well as agility and grace, is ncing.

eople over forty as a rule do not care much to ease the dimensions of the legs. They will find articles already published in this newspaper x of exercises to keep that group of muscles in condition.

younger people, however, and those anxious velop and improve the hips and legs, dancing ises will do more than all the rest combined. are hundreds of movements and positions in ic and aesthetic dancing, a few of which are shown. Clog dancing is excellent. The ordinary dances, however, are no good at all, except the step and the tango, which, if properly executed, not only pretty and pleasant, but highly bene-sthetic dancing fifteen minutes a day, with ing exercises and a few movements for the and neck, will be sufficient for most anybody as general exercise is concerned. But for the opment of the hips and limbs, the figure below hest, as well as for culture in grace and move- nothing equals the aesthetic dance.

Exercises to Increase Height.

following letter has been weeks on the road Asia:—

B. F. Roller:—

ar Sir:—I am twenty years of age, height five and one-quarter inch. I realize that one's suc- depends upon his personality. Will you kindly me the address of experts who know the art of it increasing? B. B. ADVANI.

arachi, India, Bundar road."

re are no experts in that particular art outside legitimate medical profession and that of the ical culturists. Statistics by Dr. D. A. Sargent, n in Rone and Romin's "Hygiene," state that the ar setting up exercises used by the United s army, according to Upton's "Infantry Tactics," ced an average increase in height of six-tenths metre (a little more than one-half inch) in two red young men, average age 18.3 years in Bow- College in six months.

These are the simplest calisthenic exercises and may be used either with or without apparatus such as dumbbells, Indian clubs, wands, &c. Such exercises are now used in some, and should be used in all, colleges and common schools. Professor E Hitchcock, formerly of Amherst College, gives six tenths of a centimetre as the average increase in height of two years' classes in gymnasium under the regular college physical culture course My own results in a table of 2,000 students in the University of Washington in two years' classes show an average increase of nine-tenths of an inch, but the students in that university were comparatively young. Rohe and Robin, leading modern authorities on hygiene, though not specifying height, say:—

"Tobacco smoking has a decided deleterious effect on physical development."

It has been said that the hanging exercises, in which one is suspended by the head or the upper limbs, are especially productive of an increase in height, though I confess I have never seen a conspicuous, practical demonstration of those results. It is difficult, however, to get people to persistently follow that sort of exercise for a sufficient length of time. The administration of certain drugs of extracts from certain internal secretions, which naturally control the growth of the long bones, are productive of the best results. Any good physician can give you the necessary prescription for those things. This or any other treatment, however, will prove of little use when one is at or beyond twenty years of age.

One's height depends upon the growth of the so-called long bones, such as the tibia, or shin bones, and the femur, or thigh bone. Those bones during the growing age are made up of three parts, the two ends being connected to the central portion by soft junctions, known as epiphyses. It is from the epiphyses that long bones grow and increase in length, but practically all of those junctions become ossified or hardened and lose the function of growth at or before twenty-one years of age. After that has taken place it is practically impossible by any method to increase the length of a bone. Until ossification of the epiphyses has set in, however, appropriate exercises, many of which I have given in the articles published heretofore in this newspaper, along with the appropriate glandular extracts which may be obtained from any good physician, will produce wonderful results in obtaining the desired height.

I may add, as a matter of interest and verification, that the Agricultural Bureau of the State of New York in their experiments along this line by using the pituitary bodies, which are small glands found in the brain cavities of animals killed at any abattoir, has been able to raise chickens almost as large as turkeys.

No Medicine Will Produce Muscle.

A girl from Vermont has written asking if there is any medicine known to the profession which will produce muscle. Let me say emphatically in answer to this question that there is positively no medicine which will produce muscle Any time you see or hear of a medicine advertised for that purpose put it down as a quack nostrum intended and promulgated to get the people's money. Let them alone! If they don't do you positive harm they will certainly do you no good, so you had better save your money.

Those medicines which have to do with the proper regulation of the physiologic functions, particularly the building up process which is called anabolism, the tearing down process, called catabolism, and the excretion or the elimination of waste products, facilitate nature in building muscle, when properly used. That is, they have the tonic effect of stimulating cellular activity. By the activity of the cell protoplasm several things are accomplished which have to do with the growth of muscle For instance, those medicines which increase the production of red blood corpuscles tend to produce muscle, because it is the red blood cells which carry both food and oxygen to the muscular tissue. Those medicines which stimulate the emunctories tend to produce muscle because they help to rid the body of poisons, which prevent the growth of muscle. Some nerve medicines stimulate the growth of muscle by waking up the trophic nerve, and others by their effect on the vasomotor nerves, which regulate the supply of blood to a part.

Exercise especially tends to produce muscle because it increases the flow of blood, and therefore the amount of both food and oxygen with which the muscle is supplied recreates the whole nerve system and at the same time greatly facilitates the elimination of waste products and poisons as well. So far as medicines are concerned in the building of muscle, practically the only benefit to be derived from them is either their laxative or their so-called tonic effect, which I have already described. The building of muscle depends primarily upon exercise, which should be supplemented, of course, by good hygienic habits of diet, sleep, ventilation, bath and mental control.

How Much a Little Exercise Will Do.

In my mail was a letter enclosing a circular from a certain gentleman advertising a device of his own invention. In the circular was a photograph of his Apollolike (?) figure, clad in trunks, labelled "Seventy-two Years Young." Underneath the photograph he states that the incentive for his circular was Dr. Roller's articles, and says.—"How the inventor got health without outdoor exercise." The respected gentleman also asks my opinion on his philosophy.

He has preserved himself rather well for a man of seventy-two, but while a great many things may be responsible for his health and condition it would certainly seem to require a ridiculous stretch of the imagination to attribute any part of one's health, development and preservation to a total lack of outdoor exercise. In the first place, I do not believe it would be possible for any man to live seventy-two years without going outdoors occasionally. In the second place, if one goes out of doors at all he is sure to exercise a little. No exercise at all would mean absolute immobility, and it would seem to me impossible for any one to lie perfectly still and live seventy-two years. The mythological Rip Van Winkle tried it for twenty years, but, judging from all the pictures I have have ever seen of that interesting character, he was a wreck at the end of the time. No animal of any known species can live long without moving.

Movement is exercise, and, while no two individuals may require the same amount of exercise to preserve an equilibrium of health yet in the last analysis it is exercise of some sort in a varying degree that keeps every man alive.

Nowhere in my articles have I suggested that hard, laborious, time consuming exercises are advisable, except in special cases. I have constantly argued in favor of a reasonable amount of muscular activity, varying in kind and amount according to the needs of each person But temperance and moderation are my slogan always, and in practically every article I have cautioned against too much exercise. In my directions to the business man I said:—"Presuming that a man is already in condition, to stay that way fifteen minutes of calisthenics a day will suffice, and while there are literally thousands of exercises out of the few good ones and all of the slush that has been published six exercises are sufficient."

A very small amount of exercise may sometimes be amply sufficient, but that amount is none the less necessary. The gentleman in this case may be one of those fortunate individuals If so, he might much more truthfully have stated his case had he displayed his apparently commendable condition as an example of how much good even a small amount of exercise has done for him. The teaching is bad, because man, beast and machine must either be active or decay. There is no rational argument against exercise.

"Twilight Sleep" Is Unnatural.

"In reading your article upon the growing girl I was especially interested in what you said concerning twilight sleep" I always have been in perfect health and never spent a day in bed until my baby was born, five months ago. I had followed devotedly one of the best authorities on prenatal care, but my little girl, weighing six and a half pounds, was born after twenty-four hours of agony untold. She is perfect in every way, and I want more children, but it seems to me that the stronger women have harder times than the weaker ones. Even after five months that awful suffering is fresh in my memory. If doctors can lessen the suffering at this time I see no reason why they should not do so."

In the article to which this letter referred I said that childbirth was intended to be more or less painful in order to impress upon the minds of parents the great responsibility they assume in bringing offspring into the world. I said, however, that childbirth never was intended to be as painful as we find it to-day, and that it would not be had society not cultivated an unnatural and an artificial civilization. I ventured to predict also that if people would remember the primitive and the natural and maintain more reverence for health and common sense and less for conventionality such unnatural things as "twilight sleep" and the volumes of silly speculation which is provoked would be unnecessary. Certainly the letter here quoted is vivid proof of my assertions. No one could imagine such suffering as this poor woman endured to be natural in discharging the most important and the noblest responsibility of humankind. Such suffering as that should be a lesson to humanity.

Not that women should fear or shrink from motherhood, but that they should realize the burning truth of the things I have said. They should stop chasing the vain delusions of convention'ity, look back to the primitive and live more natural lives One woman in one lifetime cannot change the habit of a race which has been produced by generations and centuries of unnatural living. It is true that even strong women, in order to enjoy motherhood, must undergo the most terrible suffering sometimes But such suffering is not natural.

AROUND the LIBRARY TABLE by MOLLIE E. CONNERS

CALIFORNIA owes a deep debt of gratitude to the Paul Elder Company for the splendid series of books on the Exposition, books which will grow more valuable in the passing years. Every library in the land should give an honored place to these books, telling the story, as they do, of the greatest exposition of modern times.

The third book of the series, "The Architecture and Landscape Gardening of the Exposition" is at hand. It completely illustrates the Exposition in its many different aspects—the gardens, panoramas, buildings, avenues, fountains, courts, colonnades, portals—all are given in an arrangement which makes a natural tour of the Exposition. The introduction is by Louis Christian Mulgardt, who designed the Court of the Ages—one of the finest courts of the Exposition.

The Paul Elder Company announces:

We now have in preparation the companion book on "The Sculpture and Mural Decorations of the Exposition," with an introduciton by A. Stirling Calder. When this is out the four books, including those by Professor Eugen Neu-Laus, will make a comprehensive and virtually complete survey of the beauties of the Exposition.

Up to date, without any doubt, far and away, the best volume that has appeared concerning the Exposition is this latest from the Paul Elder Press, "The Architecture and Landscape Gardening of the Exposition."

Mr. Mulgardt's dedication is as follows: "To the spirit of Community Loyalty by which greatest results are accomplished. To generous Collective Energy which unites the world's people in universal kindliness."

An initial chapter by Mr. Mulgardt entitled "Reflection," is very charming indeed. For it tells us of the "Phantom Kingdom"—which commands the Spirit of Beauty, of Refinement, of Education, of Culture and of Frolic. And this Phantom Kingdom contains many palaces and [illegible] decorated [illegible] painting.

"Such a kingdom exists within a wonderful valley bordering on a great sea, it is surrounded by high mountains of fine contour and by many real cities. As the people look down on this phantom kingdom from the hilltops or from ships sailing on the water, they see architecture nestling like flamingoes with fine features unfurled within a green setting. People who could Phantom Kingdoms look hopefully for universal approval by all mankind."

A short dissertation is given of almost every leading point of interest in the great Exposition, and the illustrations are so well done that they delight one's heart. They are specially well chosen also. The frontispiece represents the Rotunda of the Palace of Fine Arts: A View by Night. The closing picture is the Zone Salvo of the Exposition fireworks.

All the palaces are specially illustrated and the book is of special value, for the many rare architectural details represented—as the south portal Palace of Education, portal of the Court of Palms, Italian Tower from main portal, a corner in the Colonnade, The Tower of Jewels by night. The illustrations of the Court of the Ages, or the Court of Abundance are among the most successful of any that have been presented heretofore to the public. The Fountains of the Rising and of the Setting Sun are admirably given, and perspections of the many colonnades are wonderfully fine.

Our [illegible] the literary merit of the text. It explains the historical architectural immortalism and the symbolism in a most wonderful way and it makes of the book a treasure dear to the hearts of all who have loved the great Exposition, of all into whose lives it has carried a message.

This series of three well known California publishers will spread California's message to every quarter of the globe, and it will find a welcome and an abiding place in the great libraries of our land.

ARTS PALACE DESCRIBED BY MAYBECK

A charming little brochure is the Karnak edition of the "Palace of Fine Arts and Lagoon" by Bernard Maybeck, the architect, who designed the now famous palace. Mr. Maybeck is a Berkeley man, and the delightful introduction to the book is by Frank Morton Todd, also from Berkeley.

In this paper, Mr. Maybeck, discusses the Palaces and the Lagoon, not from the physical but rather from a psychological point of view with reference to the effects of architectural forms on the mind and feelings, and analyzes the various elements which influenced the composition of the architecture and landscape.

The prontispiece is a reproduction of the marble by Edward Berge, "The Muse Finding the Head of Orpheus" as placed under the Acacia tree in the Peristyle, accompanied with lines by John E. D. Trask, director of the Department of Fine Arts. There is also an illustration reproducing a photograph by William Hood, of the Lagoon.

Frank Todd is a clever writer well known in the world of journalism. And he has given an introduction to this fairy Palace of the Fine Arts full of spiritual insight.

After the little, breathless shock that follows the first vision of perfect loveliness, half the world and his wife looking across the Fine Arts Lagoon in San Francisco, ask:

"Who did it? Where did he get his inspiration? Why have we had to come here to see the most divinely beautiful building ever reared in America?"

The Karnak volume tells the story.

Mr. Todd writes in his introduction:

"In the Palace of Fine Arts and the Lagoon that is part of the composition, Mr. Maybeck has gone back to the classic age for his elementary forms, standing where a young Greek would have stood; and he has come forward again to the present, putting his building on the edge of a tarn and giving it the melancholy of old ruins by a landscape treatment intended to throw it into the background.

It is across water from the Avenue, partly veiled in trees, remote, mystical, unspeakable, neither to be touched nor told. Of a misty evening, when the pool first begins to reflect the delicate silver film the searchlights put on the fluted columns, its frosty and unattainable perfection moves one like a vision of the Innnite.

If we only knew it was well based, and built of hard, well-jointed stone, we should know it had added importantly to the world's imperishable beauty. If it could stand there a hundred years while swamp growth swathed its piers and plinths, while willows and acacias choked its portals, grasses dug into its urns and ivy over-ran its cornices and dimmed its lines, posterity would revere it above all other physical possessions.

It is on its way to the land of dreams and memories. But while it stands it is Karnak, and ghosts of old Rome, with the passionate spiritual ardors of the Middle Ages bursting through the classic chrysalis. For, in spirit, Maybeck is a medieval monk. In his scholastic idealism and detachment, is the secret of the Fine Arts Palace.

"GOD'S MAN;" NEW HOWARD ROMANCE

A book striking a great intellectual note—"to his one between the eyes"—is "God's Man," George Bronson Howard's great story of New York. It has the power of Tolstoi, the attention to detail of Balzac and the gloomy, pessimistic outlook of Zola. And it holds in its heart the fascination of all three. It is a book with a grip in it; there is an intensity that never lightens. There is a force that drives a problem home and leaves one breathless "on the cruel waste of lives and souls." It is a big canvas on which he paints, and he lays on his colors with all the intensity of a sincere passionate appeal.

Arnold L'Hommedieu gives the name to the book, for his French name translated means Man of God, hence "God's Man."

The story begins with the unjust expulsion from college of three New York boys, because they punished a rascal for cheating a fellow student. And the three are full of great dreams of social reform. They cannot go home disgraced, so they are thrown into the heart of great New York. The bravest spirit of the three is Arnold, whose ancestors for years have been preachers. He takes up journalism and succeeds until he is obliged to save his friends at the expense of his story for his paper. This ends his career, and one finds him in the depths of the East Side life.

Archie is the second member of the group. His career is meteoric. He is engaged to a girl of the climber class who wants nothing but money. One of the most vivid discriptions of the book is that which compares the climbers to the lizards, which the author once watched climbing a cliff to get at some purple flowers thereon.

"Purple poison—no fragrance, nothing—yet I saw one little lizard make the top of the cliff while we were there—come dragging his tired little body over to those flowers—couldn't wait—had to get into that purple poison and die.

And so Archie lives among the lizards, and that means a life of wild extravagance, with taxicabs and midnight suppers, and theater boxes, and "special brands of cigarettes for the chaperons." And for the last time Arnold helps his friend from that precipice where he means to take his life. When one reads about the brainless girl to whom Archie is engaged the American woman is hit hard, for Arnold cries out:

"What starts most of this graft and dishonesty? 'Dearie' wants to move into a better neighborhood. 'Dearie' wants a motor car like Mrs. Blank's. 'Dearie' must dress like Mrs. Dash, must go to Europe like Mrs. Dot, must take a summer place like Mrs. Dumb. 'Dearie'—damn 'Dearie'—the whipping-post for 'Dearie'! And then they talk about the coarse men who do the coarse work that gets the coarse money that buys their delicate, refined good-breeding! Why, we're a joke, we American men!"

It is an innumerable procession to which Mr. Howard introduces his readers. There are girls from the underworld; men in shady business; women grading their husbands for money to spend; unhappy girls and boys all taking their way down what the author calls "Madman's Lane."

And he sums up his case by calling our civilization a false dawn, because we have not learned that perfection of mind is not enough. It cannot offset greed and hate.

"The greed of the rich—without rhyme or reason—there is enough for all. The hate of the poor—how can poor men learn not to hate when the weak and ignorant are murdered or brutalized by unceasing toil? And for what? To make vicious women and degenerate men! There is no need for the men of bigger brains and greater hearts to be caught in this maelstrom of commerce and finance that takes all and gives nothing. It is whirling our civilization around and around until we are so dizzy and dazed that we cannot see that it is also driving us upon the rocks."

While one cannot agree with the final summing up of the book—nor with much that is pessimistic in it—it still remains a splendid literary effort—one of the strongest, most sincere and most powerful novels of the day.

Among the books of the month sent out by the Frederick A. Stokes Company are two of special interest, "Off Sandy Hook," by Richard Dehan, and "Making Money," by Owen Johnson.

"Off Sandy Hook" is a collection of short stories, wonderfully witty, with a refreshing humor not often met in novels of today. Richard Dehan is a woman who writes under this nom-de-plume, and she has written novels notable for their cleverness and strength.

In the short stories there are humor, irony and pathos, and the stories are very distinctive.

Can you imagine an elephant crossing the ocean first class attended by a pretty trained nurse? This was the story told to the ship reporter in "Off Sandy Hook," which is developed to a remarkable climax; but poor Jumbo did not die—even on reaching New York.

In another story we are told about the invention of a wretched playwright to make his audiences fall into convulsions of laughter.

The story of "Freddie," the poor but aristocratic Englishman who shocked his mother by opening a millinery shop and the surprising circumstances that followed.

The troubles of the great tenor who was tricked into eating too much spaghetti by the jealous prima donna.

"A Dyspeptic's Tragedy" is immensely amusing and the scene is laid in upper class England. All through the story one finds exeedingly clever paragraphs:

"Two years ago," murmured Mrs. Tollebranch, Willibrand became bitten with the Golf Spider. He is as wild about the game today," she added, 'as ever.'

"There is a proverb, 'Once a golfer, always a golfer,'" put in Lady Millebrook. 'I believe that to play the game successfully requires a vast amount of thought and judgment, which insensibly diverts a man's mind from less harmless topics, and that it entails an invigorating and healthy action of the arms and legs, soothing to the nervous system, and improving in its effect upon the temper. Were I asked by any married woman of my acquaintance whether she should encourage her husband in his devotion to golf, or dissuade him from it, I should advise her to encourage the fad. The game, unlike others, can be played all the year round, in sunshine, rain, or snow.'"

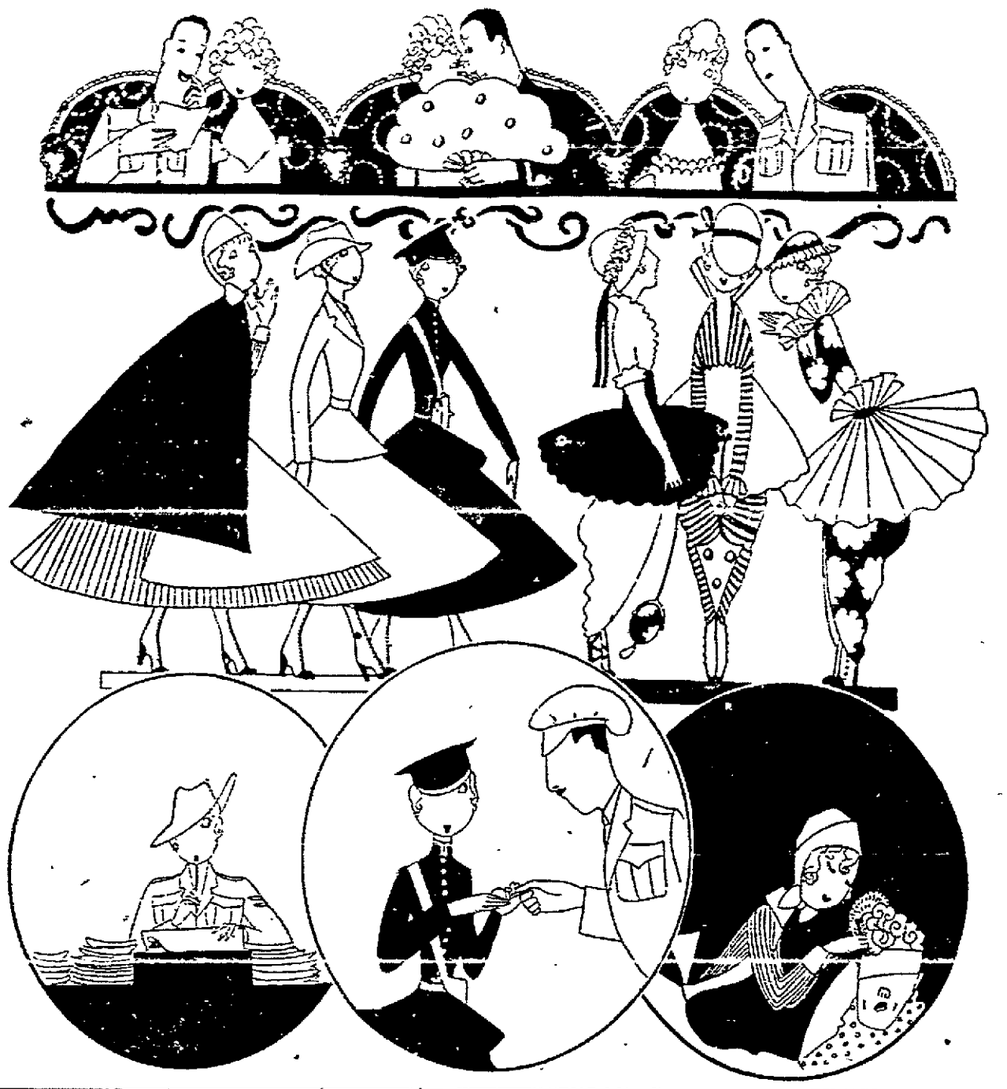

It might be remarked in passing that the hero of the story acquired his dyspepsia through eating a love letter which fell into the golf stew—into the "mutton, oniony, carroty, potatoey mess."

"What would get my letter in his gravy, amongst his vegetables? Would it be illegible by grease, or would it not?"

We are told the full nobility of the hero's nature came to the surface—the letter was ladled to him. He ate it! The lady was saved.

WOMEN INVADE MEN'S OCCUPATIONS

LOAN BANKS WILL BE DISSOLVED AFTER WAR

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—It is announced that the loan banks that were organized at the outbreak of the war in order to facilitate the raising of the huge sums needed to carry it on will not be wound up immediately after the conclusion of peace. This announcement has been made from a semi-official source for the purpose of encouraging the people to make liberal use of the banks in raising money to buy the new bonds now offered for subscription. It was feared that people would hold back from borrowing at the loan banks upon the assumption that they would be promptly closed at the termination of the war, and that in the liquidation of their affairs all outstanding loans would be called in at once.

The public is now informed that the banks will continue in existence for some time after the war, and that they will deal in a liberal spirit with borrowers, extending loans from time to time as may be found necessary.

These banks have not yet been called upon to lend money to anything like the extent that had been contemplated when they were organized. While they have the right to lend to a maximum of $714,000,000, their actual loans outstanding at this moment are only a little more than one-third of that amount. Still more surprising is the fact that the great loan of last March was floated with very little assistance from these banks. The total amount of that loan, now all paid in, was $2,164,000,500 (at the normal rate of exchange), but the amount of it now held against securities hypothecated at the loan banks is only $70,000,000, which is less than 3½ per cent of the total. It is probable, however, that the new loan now undergoing subscription will cause greater pressure upon the loan banks than the two already brought out.

MONARCHY SUGGESTION MEETS WITH POOR FAVOR

HONGKONG, China, Oct. 16.—Hongkong papers are pessimistic in their discussion of the proposed change of the Chinese republic into a constitutional monarchy, as suggested by the Peace Preservation society.

The South China Press says: "It should be time enough, five years hence, when the republican system has had a fair trial, to discuss such a dangerous topic. It is fully realized that the reforms promised by the new administration have made slow progress. It could not be otherwise. This has been due more to the feeling of the insecurity following a period of strife, to the magnitude of the reforms themselves and to the ignorance of the masses than to any fault of the president and his loyal adherents in office.

"No matter how good their intentions—or otherwise—it cannot be said that the promoters of the Peace Preservation society have selected the most suitable time to start their propaganda. Conditions throughout the world are so far from settled that China cannot expect to receive at this time the benefit of strong outside support for any radical change. But apart from this China's revolutions are of too recent date for the advantages or disadvantages of the new system of government to have been proven. Chinese newspapers, published in foreign concessions, where greater liberty of expression is enjoyed, are almost entirely opposed to the proposal, chiefly on the ground that they fear ultimate dismemberment of the republic and absorption by a foreign power which has greater ambitions in this country."

Siberian Expedition Returns With Data

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The last members of the Siberian expedition promoted by the Oxford University's school of anthropol and the Philadelphia University museum have returned to London with a rich collection of material and new information about a strange region.

Miss M. A. Czaplicka, a native of Russian Poland, was the leader of the party, assisted by H. A. Hull, of Philadelphia, as ethnologist; Miss Curtis, an artist, and Miss Haviland, an ornithologist. They set out from London a year ago last May.

The most curious tribe met in their travels was the Tungus, a primitive nomad people of the Mongolian type, who live apart to themselves, have only vague notions about the Russians and the Czar and no system of writing. They live in wigwams and have no occupation other than the breeding of reindeer and the hunting of white foxes. Their religion is a belief in good and evil spirits.

A large collection of costumes, weapons, implements and copper and iron ornaments were brought home by the expedition.

OFFICERS DETAILED.

TOKIO, Oct. 16.—Lieutenant Commander Denzo Mori, staff officer of the fourth battle squadron, has been ordered to Washington and Lieutenant Commander Chusuke-Shimomura, adjutant of the naval department and private secretary to the minister of marine, to England. The two officers are to study naval affairs in the United States and England respectively. They will be unofficially attached to the Japanese embassies. They are both able officers of the service.

MANY TRADES SEE FAIR WORKERS

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The American copette has been outclassed—and by staid old London. There are tramcar conductors here, commissionaires, policewomen—and half a dozen trades, more or less of them women. There are woman fire fighters and woman chauffeurs.

It's mostly on account of the war and the scarcity of men in London. Other women are taking it up as a step toward suffrage.

Many Organizations for Relief in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 16.—There are now in the district forming the entrenched camp of Paris 1448 charitable organizations working for the relief of victims of the war and more than 400 hospitals, which afford accommodations for about 40,000 wounded.

The four regular military hospitals, the most important, have now forty annexes. The Red Cross hospitals number about 300 and there are 28 convalescent establishments, 5 independent hospitals, American, English, Japanese and Russian.

The workrooms for unemployed women have multiplied to a greater extent than the hospitals, now numbering 520.

There are 228 different societies looking after the needs of refugees, 69 employment offices, 15 free dispensaries and 195 various organizations for the distribution of clothing and for lodging and feeding the needy.

Besides these organizations for material relief there are numerous groups, not registered, whose purpose is to provide cheer and comfort to soldiers at the front.

Scientists Bring Back Rich Collection

They live in wigwams and have no occupation other than the breeding of reindeer and the hunting of white foxes. Their religion is a belief in good and evil spirits.

A large collection of costumes, weapons, implements and copper and iron ornaments were brought home by the expedition.

BUREAU IS FORMED.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The "Bureau of Successions," specially organized for the purpose in the Rue de Vaugirard, has now administered the estates of 150,000 deceased soldiers. A force of 1200 men of the auxiliary service is employed examining and classifying the belongings of dead soldiers sent from the front or from the hospital and preparing the necessary papers.

PICKWICKIAN CRAZE DESCRIBED

In regard to literature, one of the most interesting interviews of recent months came from Will N. Harben, who has recently gone to live in New York. He is the noted Georgian author, whose novels have been so successful in recent years. Mr. Harben writes with regret the decline of the vogue of the modern novel.

"You have read," he said, "of the tremendous vogue of 'Pickwick Papers' when it was first published. No work of fiction since that time has been received with such enthusiasm.

"In London at that time you would find statuettes of Pickwick, Mr. Winkle, and Sam Weller in the shop windows. There were Pickwick punch-ladles, Pickwick teaspoons Pickwick souvenirs of all sorts.

"Now, when you walk down Broadway, do you find any reminders of the popular novels of the day? You do not, except of course in the bookshops. But you do find things that remind you of contemporary taste. In the windows of the stationers and druggists you find statuttes not of characters in the fiction of the day, but of Charlie Chaplin.

"Of course the moving picture has not supplanted the novel. But people all over the country are becoming less and less interested in fiction. The time which many people formerly gave to the latest novel they now give to the latest film.

"And the moving picture is by no means the only thing which is weaning us away from the novel. The automobile is a powerful influence in this direction.

Mr. Harben thinks Mr. Howells best expresses modern life in his novels. And he thinks that Howells' novels will be valuable to people who read them a thousand years from now to get an idea of how we live. Unless thought transference may become as common a thing as telephony is now, and if this comes to pass, nobody will read."

NEW LONDON TALE TO BE PUBLISHED

Among the new books for the autumn the Macmillans promise for this week Jack London's "The Star Rover," which tells of the efforts of a man unjustly condemned to life long imprisonment to free his spirit from his body and of the wonderful adventures which came to him in consequence.

This week also this house will bring out Zona Gale's "Heart's Kindred," in which the interest has a double centre, and Algernon Blackwood's "The Extra Day," the joyous story of how a group of children learned to gain an extra day for themselves.

At the end of this week the George H. Doran Company will bring out "Spragge's Canyon," by Horace Annesley Vachell, a love story of California; "Nobody," a story of adventure and romance in New York, in which a working girl breaks into the smart set, and Will Levington Comfort's "Hot & Company," which deals with the adventures, material and spiritual, which awaited a young man when he recklessly embarked upon a voyage to the South Seas.

Charmain London (Mrs. Jack London) has written her own account, from the woman's and wife's point of view, of the voyage which Jack London described in "The Cruise of the Snark," and it will be published this fall by the Macmillans under the title "The Log of the Snark."

CHURCH MOBILIZATION PLANNED IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Oct. 16.—"Mobilization" is the motto of the Free Church movement in England, which has been planning to prevent overlapping in the rural districts. The following thirteen denominations are co-operating: Wesley Methodists, Congregationalists, Baptists, United Methodists, Calvinistic Methodists, Presbyterian Church of England, Wesleyan Reform Union, Independent Methodist Church, Countess of Huntingdon Connection, Moravian church, Churches of Christ, Disciples of Christ and Society of Friends.

Delegates recently met and passed this resolution which suggests the spirit of the movement

"That this conference composed of the specially appointed representatives of the Free churches of England and Wales, is deeply convinced that there is urgent need to promote closer union between the Evangelical Free churches of this country in order to increase the effectiveness of their spiritual witness, to prevent overlapping, and to make more adequate provisions for the needs of great populations; the conference, therefore, appoints a provisional committee to prepare a report setting forth the facts and suggesting the preliminary steps that should be taken in regard to the whole subject, the report to be presented at a subsequent meeting of the conference."

Some of the foremost leaders of the Evangelical churches are devoting great efforts to this movement which in a way is akin to the movement which resulted in 1908 in the union of the Free church and the United Presbyterian church of Scotland.

OAKLAND PLAYGROUNDS

News of the Great Outdoors.

BUSHROD NOTES.

Rugby football still maintains its grip on the athletes of Bushrod Playground.

Two important games were played there last Saturday afternoon, which were witnessed by a large and appreciative crowd.

In the first game Haywards High met Richmond High and Richmond won by a score of 5 to 0.

In the second game the Stonegate Club, reinforced by five of the Bushrod first team players, met the Bushrod second team and the junior lads and the Stonegate boys 12-5. This was a fast game, wherein the light fast Bushrod backs ran around their heavier opponents.

DE FREMERY NOTES.

De Fremery and Prescott met in one of the most exciting soccer contests that is likely to be held this year at De Fremery and at Prescott last week.

The boys were 70 pounders, and first met at Prescott where they played a scoreless tie. Next they played at De Fremery and at the final whistle the score was given 0-0. They were allowed to play 10 minutes longer to play off the tie, but there was still no score, so the boys were forced to quit at a deadlock.

Next time they meet the fur is sure to fly.

Teddy Lee starred for De Fremery on the offense and each team collectively was very strong on the defense.

GOLDEN GATE NOTES.

Pies and cakes, not to mention other good things like mother makes, were in array yesterday, Saturday, October 16, at the food sale given by the Chrysophylae Camp Fire Girls of Golden Gate. A goodly sum was realized for the treasury, which was recently depleted by the purchase of the ceremonial gowns of the Camp Fire Girls.

MELROSE NOTES.

Melrose Playground now has a Camp Fire Group. It was organized October 1, and eight girls over 14 years of age made earnest promises to be loyal members of this most popular organization.

The officers selected were: Alma Faveto, treasurer; Violet Malone, secretary; and Edna Thorston, wampum maid. The other members are Bertha Poulsen, Helen Bradshaw, Agnes Wahlum, Caroline Knudsen, and Annie Hoist. The girls are now planning an elaborate entertainment from the proceeds of which they hope to be able to pay their charter dues.

ADDITIONS TO SCHEDULES.

No. 130, East Oakland, handball—Elmhurst vs. Allendale, fix own time; Elmhurst vs. Garfield, fix own time; Elmhurst vs. Melrose, fix own time; Elmhurst vs. Hawthorne, fix own time; Elmhurst vs. Intermediates, fix own time.

No. 130, Elmhurst vs. Allendale, fix own time; Elmhurst vs. Melrose, fix own time; Elmhurst vs. Hawthorne, fix own time; Elmhurst vs. Intermediate, fix own time. J. B. Nash.

PRESCOTT NOTES.

The Prescott 100-pound soccer team succeeded in trimming the Poplar team last week by the narrow margin of a 1-0 score.

The game was very hotly contested and much enthusiasm was shown by the boys. The victorious Prescott team lined up as follows: A. Madeiras, center; Luther Graven, forward; J. Gordon, forward; W. Gordon, forward; H. Gordon, forward; William Swift, left half; William Kane, center half; L. Brown, right half; W. Williams, full back; G. Bradley, full back; Mike Babica, goal tender, and G. Ross, sub.

These boys are enthusiastic soccer players and hope to emerge victorious from the playground league games.

EMERSON NOTES.

A great deal of interest is being shown in the handball tournament at Emerson and spirited contests are on to determine the school representatives in the various weights.

The University School Girls are practicing basket ball on the playground Monday and Thursday afternoons. They are turning out quite well and expect to soon begin playing match games.

On Saturday afternoon the Senior Girl Athletes' Club went on a swimming party to Cottage Baths, Alameda. They swam all morning and returned to the playground in the afternoon where they all played games.

HAWTHORNE NOTES.

Saturday the Snow Drop Club of little girls had a party in the assembly hall. The first part of the afternoon was spent in a very exciting game of baseball, after which refreshments were served and each little girl did some stunt to entertain the others.

The Wild Rose Club held an initiation and took in four new members. The Hawthorne Club has decided to spend half of their afternoon in making Christmas presents, after which all play basketball. Each girl was very busy with her needle and some very pretty things were started. The California Poppy Club issued an invitation to the Wild Rose Club to a Hallowe'en masquerade party on October 23.

POPLAR TEAM WINS.

The Poplar Girls played the Longfellow team a game of German bat ball with a score of 11 to 7 in favor of Poplar. The line-ups were is follows:

Poplar—Elizabeth Tavis, Lillian Sheehan, Clarice Hogan, Bernice Hogan, Marion La Ponte, Minnie Somers.

CLUB ENTERTANS.

The Blue Bird Club of Poplar Playground had a shadow play on Friday, entitled "The Courtship of Mary Jane and Benjamon." The cast follows:

Mary Jane, Ida Costa; Benjamin, Marjorie Farenti; Mortimer, Lucile Latorn; Pattie, Josephine Williams.

VISIT EXPOSITION.

The girls of Poplar Playground had a trip to the Exposition on Saturday, September 25. They started from the playground at 9:30 carrying their lunches and supper. They visited all the principal palaces and the California, Italian, Portuguese, French and Canadian Buildings. The evening was spent enjoying the fireworks and illuminations. The girls taking the trip were Thelma Coleman, Lucile Latorn, Lena Maestretti, Hazel Wynn, Ida Costa, Marion La Ponte, Rosie Lewis, Evelyn Jones, Bella Pobella, Vera Viana, Marjorie Parenti, Carol Latour, Leota Latorn, Ethel Vile and Frances Gleason.

MELROSE.

Through the efficient work of their speedy backfield the 85-pound Rugby team defeated the 100-pound team by the score of 12 to 6.

The showing of the 85-pound team was distinct surprise. It must be said that the 85-pound scrum was heavier than that of the 100-pound team but the greater part of the work was done by the backfield. Harry West and Jesse Silva starred for the 100-pounders, while Charlie Stultz, Gene Davidson and Charles Wacker starred for the 85-pound team.

ELMHURST NOTES.

Elmhurst, throughout the forenoon of last Saturday was the scene of many lines of all sizes and paper bags of all descriptions, piled up in the Baseball as during the noon hour the supervisor had promised the girls that she would take them for a "noon hour" picnic in the hills and far from the school. At 12 o'clock all the children were to meet at the front all merry and happy and ready for a jolly time.

After a short hike the bunch arrived at a place known as Silver Creek, all shady and cool, with a babbling brook tumbling along. Everyone was hungry and sat down at once for "eats" and [illegible] were cracked of with great relish. Much merriment was caused while eating, as there were a few bees around who seemed that they would like some of the "eats" too, consequently many apples, sandwiches, etc., were dropped on account of a bee who persisted in having a taste. Finally the conferes were told to stand still and not to aggravate the bees by running, slapping at them, or dropping food, and much laughter was caused by the behavior of both bees and children.

After lunch it was time to start back to the playground, and all arrived after enjoying a delightful refreshing noon hour.

HIGHLAND DAY.

On every Friday afternoon the girls from the Highland school come to Elmhurst for games and fun, and many are very enthusiastic, and are now anxious to organize into a club, and choose a club name. Anyone who is interested is cordially invited to come on Fridays and join in the fun when the ground is closed.

CAMP FIRE.

The Sequovah Camp Fire of Mosswood held a ceremonial meeting in the lodge room Wednesday afternoon.

Felice Nichols expressed her desire to become a Camp Fire girl and was welcomed into the circle. Plans were made for HaHowe'en festivities and reports given.

BASEBALL AND FOOTBALL.

Baseball and football are the two main sports at Mosswood now. Baseball is gradually wearing out in interest and football and basketball are making corresponding gains in popularity.

"Originals" Continue to Practice at Mosswood

The Oakland Original football team still continues its night practice at Mosswood, and whether or not the association means anything they have lost but one game this year, which was to the U. C. Varsity by the narrow margin of one touchdown to nothing.

This team is one of which Oakland can justly be proud. They won the state championship last year from such teams as the Marylands, the Centurys and many other formidable organizations.

The Mercury basketball team, which also claims Mosswood as its hang-out, is in the market for unlimited games, and bars no team. They have lost but one game this year and are a mighty tough bunch to defeat.

Also Mosswood has a 110-pound basketball team, lead by Johnnie Evans and Clarence Chantler and they wish games any night or afternoon from teams not over 115 pounds in weight.

The Sacred Heart School's baseball team has recently played several games at Mosswood. They recently were presented with suits and present a fine appearance on the field of play. Joe Cronin and Arthur Harrington do the bulk of their pitching.

Notice Is Issued to Playground Enthusiasts

Now that fall is close upon us and the weather has begun to turn colder, it is time for the playgrounds to change with the seasons.

We are now to take up the games of rugby, soccer, handball and basketball. Of all these games basketball is probably the most important and probably most stress should be laid upon it, and above all the team work connected with it, for a basketball team without team play is indeed hopeless. The function of the playground is to teach cooperation and team play, as well in the games as in general conduct, and individual stars are not to be sought for.

It is now time for the attention of the boys to be diverted from baseball to the more strenuous sports, those which make the blood red and cause it to race through the veins. With colder weather, it becomes more and more difficult for the growing boy to tear down those tissues which must be demolished in order to allow newer and stronger and better tissues to replace them.

Let us all get together and go into our fall sports with vigor, determined to make every game we play a model for clean sportsmanship and diligent application to the study of the games themselves. After all, athletics is as much to be studied as any other phase of our daily existences. The rules must be learned and the better they are learned the more valuable is the player, hence application is required in this respect.

The old saying "What is worth doing is worth doing well" is a true one. So, now, boys, let us all pull together to make this coming fall season a banner season for playground athletics.

Handball Games Are Attracting Big Interest

The handball tournament held at Hawthorne caused a renewal of interest in the game and brought out many players. Over 50 boys took part in the tournament, being divided almost equally, among the classes from 70 to 130 pounds. Both singles and doubles were run off in all classes, the games being played under the new rules. Considering the fact that the boys had but a few days to practice the new rules the games were excellently played and afforded much close competition.

Hawthorne won all the games in the 85-pound class from Intermediate. Haley and Austin played excellent ball and were never closely pressed.

Allendale won the 100-pound class but were in turn defeated by the Hawthorne 115-pound. A rowing club is being organized among the boys to row every Friday afternoon on Lake Merritt. If possible, two teams will be formed and will practice together.

A Remarkable Marksmanship Feat by Soldier

VIENNA, Oct. 16.—A remarkable feat of marksmanship is reported from the southwestern front, where many of the famous riflemen are fighting against the Italians. A troop of the so-called Kaiser Light Infantry, which was fighting on the Doberdo plateau, got into a most precarious position in advance of the Austrian lines. They could not retreat, as the ground over which they would to run was fully covered by the Italian guns. They held their ground for several days while suffering greatly for lack of food and water.

The Italian artillery was playing upon them with accuracy, being directed by means of a post of observers on higher ground than that held by the Tyrolese. It was regarded as necessary to get rid of that post, which consisted of eight Alpini. A soldier who had made a reputation for himself in the Dolomites as a highly expert poacher, volunteered to undertake the difficult task. Climbing stealthily by night, as if hunting chamois, he reached a hiding place in easy shot of the post, and when the eight Italians began to stir the next morning he quickly picked them off one after the other.

French and American Styles Show New Contours and Bright Colors

Chinese embroidery is used in delightful fashion in this frock, which is composed of a blue and black satin skirt of Chinese embroidery, a very wide girdle of blue chiffon velvet and black lace sleeves and under skirt. Bands of metal galoon edge the decollete and form shoulder straps.—From Frederick Loeser & Co.

Fur capes after many seasons have definitely returned to style. Mademoiselle Delsaux wears a skunk fur cape, the upper part of which is of the black and white variety. The muff is composed of the pelts and heads posed diagonally.—Meiser Mullion.

Bright colored blouses replace those of white and delicate tints. This blouse of deep old rose colored Georgette crepe has tassels instead of buttons used in conjunction with the button holes.—From Alice Maynard.

Mademoiselle Mona Delza wears a silk afternoon frock which shows a new and particularly practical form of the new gigot sleeve. It is cut very large at the top and the fulness is gathered in by shirrings to give the sleeve the dropped shoulder form.

By BLANCHE G. MERRITT.

ENOUGH resemblance in the contours of fashionable garments and accessories is found to make a definite style silhouette. This is already familiar to most of us. The crinoline-like flare of the short full skirt, the high boots, the fitted coat or corsage, the attractive new sleeve fulness and the tall crowned hats all blend into a charming whole that is distinctive of this particular season.

Diversity of detail in this new silhouette is a striking characteristic in these new models. In the morning blouse to wear with the tailored suit it is the brilliant coloring and odd fastening that is the great style change from the preceding season. Made of velvet, satin, faille, Georgette crêpe or taffeta, it matches the petticoat or its new rival—pantalettes, of the same material, generally a kid-like finished satin. The blouse and pantalettes are now attached to each other. The pantalettes, which are made on masculine trouser line as to width and general shape, are no longer than the short skirt worn over them. The hem of the skirt, undulating or falling in points, partially conceals the pantalettes or delusively gives them the appearance of a tight drop skirt. Sometimes the pantalettes are drawn in like bloomers. More frequently they are edged by bands of fur. The lacy pantalettes of last season of the old fashioned kind and longer than the skirt are almost never seen now.

In the evening gowns the pantalette is confined to the charmeuse drop skirt, which is almost lost to view under the diaphanous outer skirts, long and short, that hang over it. This pantalette drop skirt is pretty because it indicates the long, slender lines of the limbs more than a mere drop skirt would and gives the same appearance without shackling the wearer's movements.

A clever arrangement of light and dark material transforms a quiet looking velvet tailored suit into a restaurant dress suited for those who have no time to go home and make a change of evening toilet. This idea is not exactly new this season, as Paris has already shown us this type of three piece suit. Such suits are now perfected in design so that their use is not so ostensibly apparent. On removing the very long redingote coat a white or pale colored silk dress is revealed. What was apparently the velvet skirt turns out to be a hem band on this light dress, which is just deep enough to be covered by the bottom of the redingote coat. Some of these transformation dresses are rather simple in cut. One which opens in front invisibly is a one piece affair—long, straight and unfitted, were it not for a narrow belt of the same material, that when pulled in about the waist at a slightly high waist line shapes it into a semblance of the feminine contours underneath.

Such costumes must be worn with a hat that has at least a facing of the color of the dark skirt band, as the lighter upper part of the gown has no dark touches.

Sleeves with their new fulness are so varied in design that one might say that there are as many different kinds as there are gowns and suits. The leg of mutton shape is the most favored, arranged so the fulness commences at an old fashioned 1830 curved drop shoulder seam. This same contour is also attained by shirring the upper part of the sleeve to this same drop shoulder depth, as pictured here.

The bishop sleeve, with its tight fitting cuff, combined with a drop shoulder seam, is still another type. The middle part of this sleeve—that is, the full part—is sometimes of lace or net.

Even the angel sleeve hangs from the drop shoulder seam, as may be seen pictured here. In one dress, a real novelty, seen at the recent Whitney Fashion Show, the daytime dress of plaid showed on removing the little dark velvet coat a waist that was low necked and almost sleeveless, excepting for a short puff that hung from a drop shoulder seam. "Don't laugh," cautioned Mrs. Whitney to her audience; "your great-grandmother and my grandmother wore just such a dress!" At any rate, this little frock had all the charm that something really new in style has for those who always look ahead for a trace of coming styles.

Coat linings and blouses that match are again seen in this season's style. Plain taffeta is used or stripes or checks. Where even the coat linings this season take on bright colors it is hard to realize that across the sea black must of grim necessity be the vogue and color the exception.

While skirts are short and full all about, it must be noticed that the fulness is not disposed of evenly all about the figure. In almost all the imported costumes the skirt is almost flat in front. There is at the most little fulness beyond that made by the gored flare. Many of the skirts show their greatest fulness at the flare and at the sides.

In some imported evening dresses a rounded apron shaped panel of silken material is posed back and front, allowing the net or lace underskirt to escape only at the sides in filmy flare. In the thicker silk dresses the fulness is arranged so there is the most at the sides, with a very little less at the back. All skirts made of wide materials are cut gored or circular, so that they fall in deep godets. Some of the silk dresses have a back drapery that gives them the bustle contour or "pouff," as it is now called. This, however, so far has been seen only in the more elaborate costumes.

Lace pelerine capes hang down the back of evening gowns to or just below the waist. While they are too lacy to change the contour of the silhouette they add a great deal of delicacy to the robe.

Fur sets are the hit of the hour. They are especially nice, as a set of light furs will dress up a dark suit, while the dark set saves the nicer one and is better and more appropriate for all around wear. The sets are of two types—the choker collar, cuffs and round muff, and the cape sets, which are even newer. Some of these fur capes are already so long that a slip is made for the arms.

The animal boa, of course, is still worn. It is simply not as new as the choker and the pelerine. These boas are worn so they give as much of the choker effect as possible, the head and tails hanging down the back or a little to one side.

A typical evening frock, diaphanous at the top and the skirt hem, has an over draping of lovely loops of silk. This gown is of turquoise taffeta and layers of filmy lace and tulle, pearl ornaments and festoons on corsage.—From Stern Bros.

The tailor made fur set of the season consists, like the one pictured, of a neckpiece, cuffs and round muff. This set of beaver fur has jaunty beaver Pierrot buttons.—From R. H. Macy & Co.

Fashion Notes.

THE fur-trimmed gown is infinitely becoming and not necessarily expensive, for all sorts of unexpected furs are being called into service this autumn. The material of a lovely model seen recently was fine serge in a soft shade of periwinkle blue and the bands of fur which trimmed it came from the homely weasel.

Weasel fur is very popular just now. It is soft and easily managed and its peculiar color gives it the charm of novelty.

The single corsage of this model was sleeveless and was worn over a tight blouse made of blue satin, a darker shade than the serge. There was a folded sash, with long ends tied at the back, of the same satin, and also a small sailor collar.

This model would be lovely in golden brown cloth, fitch and dark brown satin, or in navy blue serge, imitation skunk and very dark crimson faille. Indeed, it embraces endless possibilities.

Many of the new Paris models are trimmed with comparatively inexpensive furs, such as marmot, chevrette, weasel, dyed squirrel, imitation skunk, and so on.

House frocks in the popular pinafore form are specially attractive when trimmed with narrow bands of fur. Seen recently was a gown of this order which was made of mouse gray velours de laine and trimmed with bands of natural squirrel.

On the hem of the dress there were some effective embroideries worked in fine wools, the colors being dull red, blue, white and invisible green. These embroideries looked like Roumanian work and they could be easily executed with the aid of an iron-off pattern.

Free Your Feet From Folly

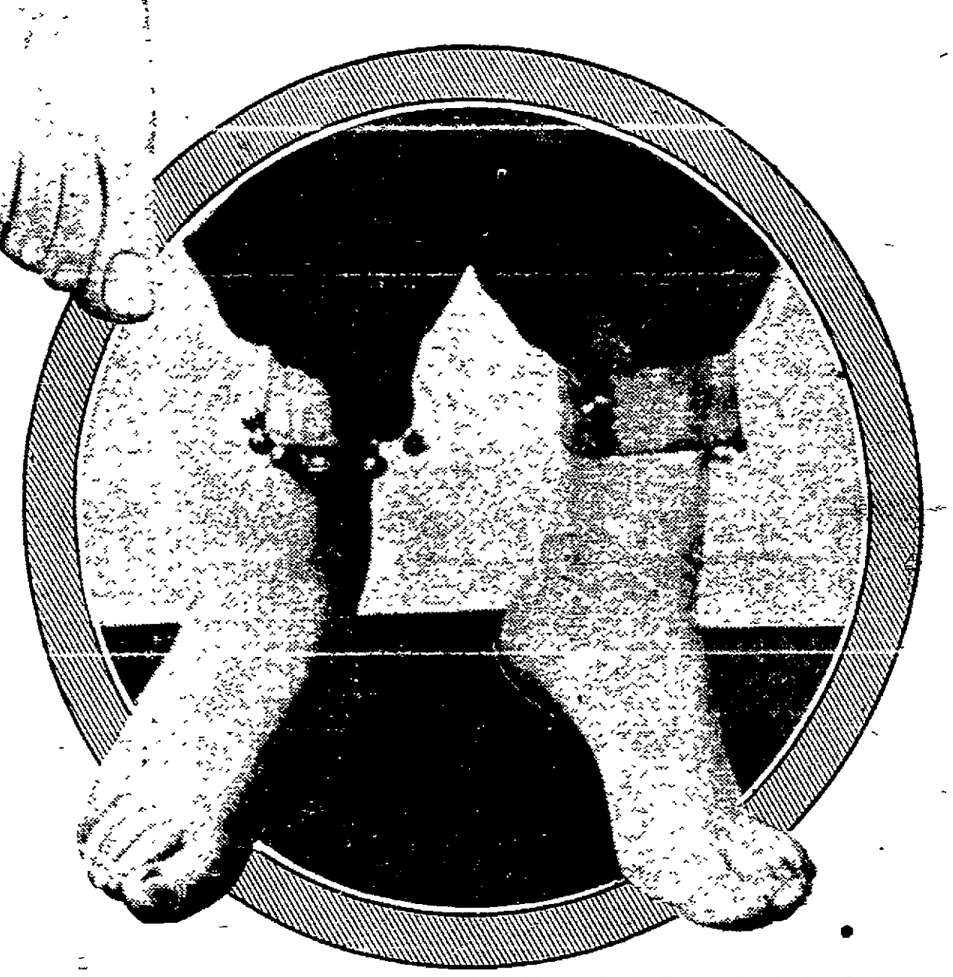

To Be Considered the Acme of Beauty a Woman's Foot Should Have Toes That Are Regular, the Heel Narrow and Non-Protruding and a General Outline That Is Long, Slender and Graceful.

The Foot at Home Should Be Sandaled and Comfortable. An Ill-Fitting Shoe, Too Large or Too Small, Is Always Dangerous

By Lillian Russell

Beautiful Feet Are Neither Small Nor Large. They Should Be in Proportion to the Stature and Weight and the Instep Should Be High and Arched.

THE human foot is a wonderful piece of organic mechanism composed of many bones, ligaments, muscles and tendons—associated with arteries, veins, nerves and other vessels.

In order to secure in the foot the requisite firmness in standing, it is articulated with the leg at right angles so that the heel and toe touch the ground and the joint is placed nearer the posterior than the anterior part of the foot so as to increase the base of support in that direction towards which the body tends to fall. Besides this the weight is here received on the inner side of the foot, where it is most arched, offering not only the advantage of a strong support but one which is highly elastic, yielding without injury in alighting on the feet and acting as a spring in progression.

A beautiful foot is one which is neither small nor large. It should be in proportion to the stature and weight. The instep should be high and arched. The waist, or portion under the instep, should be hollowed and well raised above the level of the sole. The toes should be regular, the heel narrow and non-protruding and its general outline long, slender and graceful. A woman's foot possessing these proportions is considered the acme of beauty.

The agility of foot and pedestrian powers of the individual—other matters being equal—are in exact relation to the degree in which the above-mentioned qualities are present.

The protruding heel is a deformity which renders its possessor clumsy in gait and incapable of freedom in walking and dancing. The health and beauty of the foot is promoted by exercise, easy-fitting and appropriate boots and shoes, and absolute cleanliness. To preserve the feet in a thoroughly healthy and comfortable state, the first object of attention should be cleanliness.

When the feet are soaked frequently with warm water in which is dropped a handful of plain washing soda, thoroughly dried and rubbed with a pumice stone, they will be free from callouses, corns and tender joints. The majority of people who live in cities suffer from tender feet because their feet seldom touch the real earth, but must needs tramp upon hard, heated stones continually.

It is a great privilege to be permitted to walk with bare feet upon a soft green lawn, for the lubrication it gives to the feet is wonderful. It is only to be compared to the comfort of loosening the hair and letting it fall freely, or that enjoyed after removing a hot and tightly-fitting corset. Children should be allowed this privilege occasionally all through their young lives.

Some women will say that barefoot walking broadens the foot. That is not true. In countries where women wear no shoes at all the feet of the majority are narrow and beautifully shaped. The sandaled feet are probably the most beautiful and comfortable. Many women affect the sandals for home wear. They are attractive to look upon and offer untold comforts. Nothing is more ruinous to a healthy foot than an ill-fitting shoe, too large or too small. Both are equally dangerous.

When you realize how much responsibility rests upon these two comparatively small objects, and that your poise, figure and peace of mind rest with their condition, you will give them the consideration they demand. All indifference and even bad treatment considered, the feet have been a wonderful standby, and it is not remarkable that they rebel at being pinched, squeezed or allowed to slop about in ill-fitting shoes. The proper foot dressing is not a high, tightly-laced or buttoned boot excepting for extremely cold weather. Nature gives strength enough to the ankles for use normally, and nature should not be abused.

Women who are obliged to stand for hours require support of their ankles. Standing is far more tiring to the feet and ankles than walking.

There is nothing so beneficial to the feet as a good long walk when the feet are incased in comfortable low shoes and a pair of woolen stockings are worn. The woolen stockings cause the feet to perspire freely. Such perspiration is most healthy, while perspiring feet without the exercise of walking is most unhealthy.

It should be remembered that the feet, forming with the legs the instruments of locomotion, are in constant requisition and are most intimately and constantly connected with our personal convenience and enjoyment in a variety of ways, whilst their exposure, neglect and mistreatment are each capable of affecting the general health of the body and that to an extent which is always serious, and not infrequently dangerous.

In Countries Where Women Wear No Shoes At All the Feet of the Majority Are Narrow and Beautifully Shaped.

Lillian Russell's Beauty Answers

FLORENCE—With a plump face you should arrange your hair to give length to it. If you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope I will answer the questions regarding the eyelashes and will send you some eye exercises, which I feel sure will benefit you.

R. K. P.—I think that massage will help to reduce the size of the end of your nose. I am sorry that I can give you no information in regard to the formula you mention for the removal of superfluous hair. I have no knowledge of it whatsoever.

MAY—The measurements for the height that you give should be thirty-six bust, twenty-six waist and about thirty-two hips.

I cannot tell you the size shoe to be worn by a woman who weighs 135 pounds. The size of the foot depends upon the height of the woman and the size of her bones, and not upon the weight she carries.

B. T. I.—I should advise a good skin food of some kind to make your face plump. If you will send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope I will give you a formula which will benefit you.

J. R. M.—You should see a physician in regard to the dark rings around the eyes; they are caused by some internal disorder and cannot be removed by outward application. Nothing is better to prevent a shiny nose than to use a little powder upon it.

MISS A. Z.—If you will send me a self-addressed envelope I will send you several formulas which will help to reduce your flesh. I believe in diet and exercise more than anything else. It is not necessary to starve yourself, but to know what you can eat which will not produce flesh. The hot and cold showers should be taken after exercising.

America in Throes of a Stock Gambling Craze

Nothing Like It Has Been Witnessed Since the Great "Trust Formation" Period

NEW YORK, Saturday.

"I'LL make a fortune over night!"

The public is invading Wall street.

Thousands of men and women throughout the country are taking part in a wild scramble to buy "war stocks."

From the stories which the whirlwind of speculation is blowing around brokers' offices it would seem a simple matter to find the rainbow's end and pick up a pot of gold.

Profits of fifteen, thirty, fifty or a hundred thousand dollars have been made on the purchase of a small lot of Bethlehem Steel, General Motors or any one of a number of other stocks which have advanced anywhere from fifty to five hundred points.

Brokers' books show an aggregate of these small winnings amounting to millions of dollars.

Will these "paper profits" be converted into more substantial forms of wealth or be dissipated in a frenzied effort to acquire additional winnings? That's the question professional speculators are asking, but the public has no time to parley with professional speculators. While old time operators in Wall street have been standing on the side lines shaking their heads disparagingly the public has taken the market by storm.

Buy! Buy! Buy!

What is the use of wasting time talking when there is money to be had by action?

Buy! Buy! Buy! The profits will take care of themselves.

Such is the stock gambling craze sweeping over the country. Nothing like it has been witnessed since the great bull market which marked the "trust formation" period, about fifteen years ago.

On that occasion the people rushed to buy the stock of this or that company on the rumor it would be taken into one of the great industrial combines then in process of organization, just as in the last few weeks they have bought up the stocks of concerns which are reported to have been favored by large orders for munitions and war supplies.

It is the same now as it was then. Wherever you go, wherever you chance to be—riding in the subway or in a Pullman car, dining in a fashionable uptown tea room or in a downtown lunch club where pretty young girls employed in nearby office buildings congregate for their noonday meal, in the cafés as well as the lounging rooms of millionaires' clubs—everybody is talking "war stocks." Women as well as men are discussing the merits and financial prospects of industrial concerns of which they knew nothing a few weeks ago, whose existence they probably never even suspected.

It is surprising how much knowledge has been accumulated in such a short time. The affairs of these companies are now discussed familiarly by thousands who are expecting to make fortunes in "war stocks." This concern has received an order from the Allies for millions upon millions of dollars' worth of shrapnel, this one a huge contract for gun barrels, and still another for hundreds of automobile trucks. The profits arising from these colossal transactions, presumably amounting to many millions of dollars, have been figured down to a nicety, and the fact that some of the stocks which have advanced in the most sensational manner pay no dividends does not in the least seem to dim the lustre of their possibilities as investments in the eyes of those who are buying them.

In the same way fifteen years ago, when the Flower interests, the Morgan interests, the Moores, John Gates, Daniel Reed and other members of the "tin plate" crowd were buying up steel mills, paper mills and various other industrial plants over night and making them units of great industrial combines, the public seemed to get the inside track of these deals and speculated on the outcome furiously and recklessly. Then it was largely a case of following the movements of men who were doing big things in an industrial and financial way; now it's a case of following war orders. The market has no leadership.

Excitement in Brokerage Offices.

Step into any one of the large brokerage offices in the Wall street district and the excitement attending the public's wild plunge into the stock market immediately becomes apparent. The reserve and dignity maintained in times of calmer markets have been taken off, rolled up and put away in cold storage.

The office manager is running from one telephone to another, orders are shouted across the room to the man in charge of the private wires, the telegraph instruments are running a neck and neck race with the ticker, both seemingly imbued with the importance of the message they are carrying to thousands of anxious, half crazed speculators.

The board "markers," nimble as they are in slipping into place the little numbered cards that indicate the upward or downward trend of prices, frequently fall behind the tape and call out the quotations.

"Baldwin Loco. now 101, 102."

"What's that?" some one yells, and for an instant all in the room are at attention. In another moment some other stock forges to the front, eclipsing Baldwin Loco., and so it goes all through the five hours of trading.

Over in one corner of the room a number of customers are seated around a table, in the centre of which is a ticker housed under a rounded glass cover such as protected the wax flower group on the parlor mantel in the old homestead. They are too impatient to wait for the board "marker." With heads close together they are bent low over the mysterious little piece of mechanism which has such power to fascinate and rob people of their common sense. Every now and then a trader who has put in an order to buy or sell a certain stock almost tears the tape out of the ticker in his eagerness to learn how the market is going.

A study of the faces of those who throng the customers' rooms of the brokerage firms these days shows plainly enough that the public is in the market. Slouch hats and clothes cut by tailors who make no pretence of keeping up with the latest Fifth avenue styles reveals the presence of the "outsider." But these outsiders are not to be judged financially by their appearances, because most of them have picked up a small fortune in "war stocks" and have come to New York "just to see how things are moving in Wall street."

Activity of the Curb Market.

All that is necessary to convince them that things are moving is a trip down Broad street to where the "curb market" holds forth. Several of the stocks which have advanced most conspicuously in the present wave of speculation are only traded in on the "curb," and for weeks the curb brokers have been fairly swamped with business.

The "curb" embodies the spirit of reckless speculations. When one pauses to watch the windy gesticulating crowd of men who each day gather in one of New York's principal streets, blocking traffic and rending the atmosphere with their deafening clamor, one of the first thoughts that comes to mind is that here restrictions are few and opportunities many.

The manner in which orders for "war stocks" pouring into Wall street from all parts of the country are executed on the "curb" is one of the wonders of the present day. A sign language almost as bewildering as wireless telegraphy has been developed and serves as a means of communicating the orders received over the telephones located in the front offices of the buildings on either side to the brokers in the street.

A young man pops his head out of a window, makes a few rapid and seemingly unintelligible signals with his fingers, then disappears. A like performance is enacted at dozens of other windows at the same time and is repeated constantly throughout the trading hours. The whole queer proceeding recalls the activities of a flock of busy swallows which nest in holes bored in banks of sand.

If the man out in Iowa could see how his order to buy a thousand shares of Electric Boat was filled on the "curb" he might well ask, "What is the meaning of it all?"

On the New York Stock Exchange proper the result of the war stock craze has been to swell the volume of business until "million share" sessions have become common. The work of clearing trades has been made more difficult by the fact that most of the orders are for small amounts of stock. Clerks employed by scores of the large private wire concerns have been forced to work in relays throughout the night in order to get trades in shape to clear the next day.

And a year ago Wall street was the most desolate spot in the country. The Stock Exchange was closed, the "curb market" was out of existence, hundreds of clerks were without employment and brokers generally were struggling under the burden of meeting expenses without any income.

The wonderful change now observable in that quarter is largely due to the big commissions the public is paying for the privilege of trading in "war stocks."

The Public Pays Well for Privilege.

The public pays well for the privilege of trading in "war stocks," and the harvest of commissions which the brokers are now gathering will more than compensate for the unusually lean business last year. Already those employed in the financial district see visions of well filled Christmas boxes. Brokers are becoming more generous with their tips. The husky individual who acts as "official" street cleaner for the "curb" brokers sings while he sweeps.

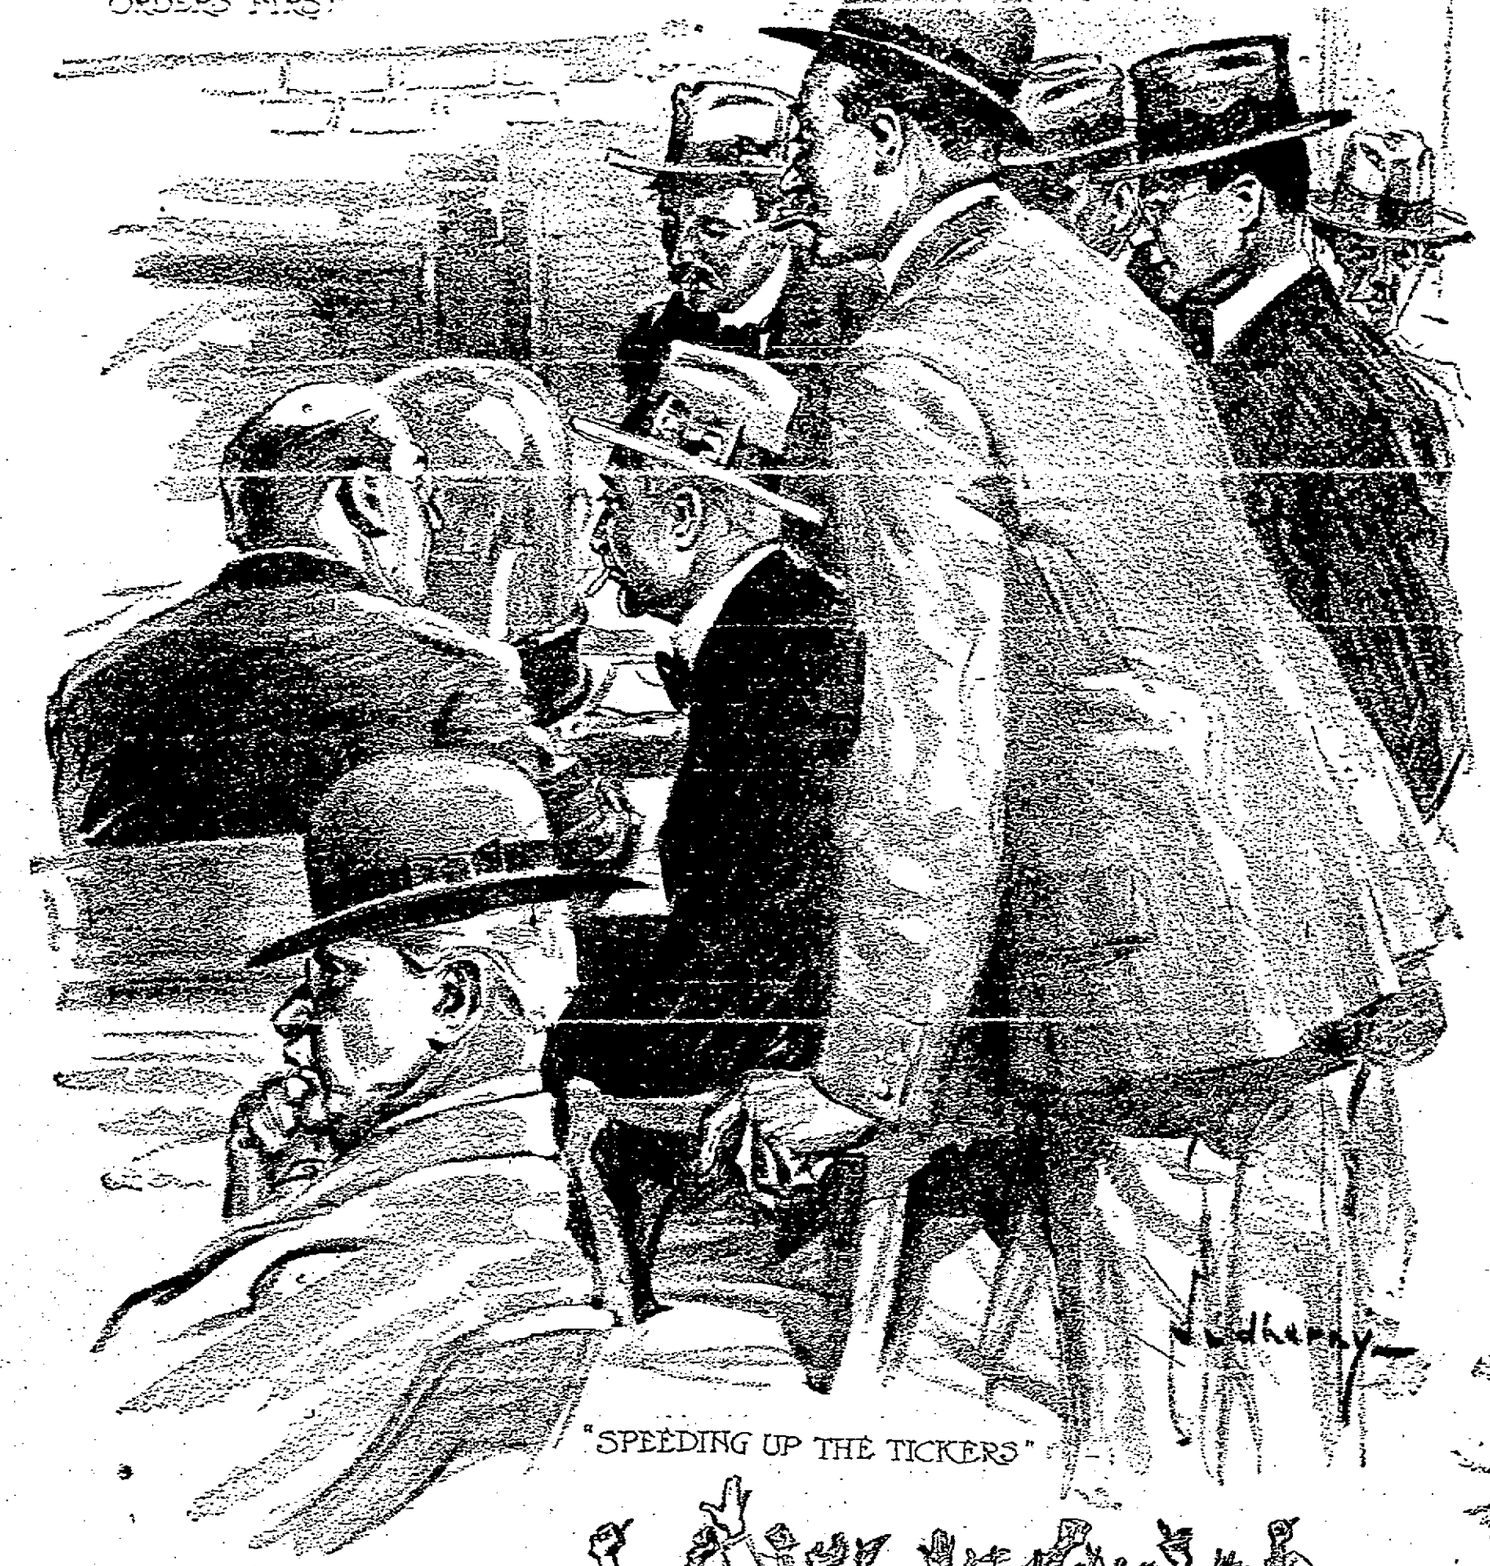

Brokers, well aware that the price structure that has been reared to such towering heights in the course of the present excitement might come crashing down at most any moment (it trembled violently when the news of the sinking of the Lusitania was received), have taken precautions to protect themselves by calling upon their customers for margins running up to as high as fifty per cent of the market value of certain of the more inflated stocks, while some issues are no longer bought on margins but must be purchased outright. This policy makes it harder for the small trader to get into the market, lessens the opportunity for the messenger boy to buy a few shares and make a small fortune, but has been without appreciable effect in restraining the activity of the market.

"How do you account for this remarkable outburst of speculative activity?" a leading broker was asked.

"Nerve and money—that's all there is to it. The tremendous balance of trade in favor of this country has brought so much money into the country from abroad that the people don't know what to do with it. The banks all over the country are full of money, and while the bankers, as well as every conservative broker in the street, have been trying to restrain recklessness, it is nevertheless true that the present situation is one bordering on a riot of speculation, inflation and exploitation.

"The stocks of these concerns which have been getting the huge orders for war supplies, as might be expected, have appealed to the popular imagination as attractive investments, and the public has bought with a confidence unbounded, and seemingly justified by the enormous profits which have piled up on such purchases. There are plenty of buyers now for any stock that promises a quick rise whether there is any chance of a dividend or not. So far it has been a waste of time to make this new crop of speculators who have taken possession of the market see any merit in the standard dividend paying stocks. That is one of the strangest features of the market."

The Lost Indian Boy and the Good Bear

By GEORGENE FAULKNER.

ONCE upon a time there was a little Indian boy who was very anxious to do as the braves did and go hunting in the forest. So his father made him a bow and some arrows and taught him how to shoot, and every day the little boy went out to the forest to hunt.

"I wish I could kill a deer or a fox, or maybe I could shoot a wolf or a big bear," said the boy as he looked with pride at his bow.

One day the little boy went out to hunt and he forgot to follow the path through the forest, and after a while he wandered so far away that he lost the trail. The night was coming on and the little boy did not know which way to go. All the tall pine trees looked just the same to him, and the white birch trees seemed to stand like white ghosts, waving their branches like long arms and beckoning to him, and he did not know where to turn.

"Boo-hoo-boo-hoo-oo! I want to go home!" he cried.

"Whoo-oo-whoo-oo," called an owl, as though he was mocking the lost child.

Great storm clouds blew across the sky and the wind howled and moaned through the tree tops. The little boy began to run, but he did not know where he was running. He called loudly for his father, but the thunder seemed to drown his voice, and he could see by the flashes of lightning that he was nowhere near the Indian settlement. Then the rain came down in torrents and the boy crawled into a great hole where some porcupines lived.

"I will stay here tonight and then I will take some of these young porcupines home with me in the morning."

Just then there was a rumbling sound and the dirt fell into the hole behind him, shutting him in with the young porcupines. The poor little Indian boy cried himself to sleep, for now he knew that his father could not find him.

In the morning when he awoke he looked into the eyes of the mother porcupine and she looked to him as big as a squaw. She felt sorry for the boy and gave him some food, but it was so bitter that the boy could not eat it.

Then the porcupine said: "I will call a council of all the forest animals and see who can take care of you, for I do not know what to give you to eat."

The young porcupines were sent out as messengers to all the forest people, and when the boy saw how they tried to help him he was glad that he had not hurt any of them.

The council was held in the woods near by, and all the wolves, foxes, bears and deer came at the invitation of the porcupine.

The mother porcupine stood up in the council and said: "I have found this little man-child in my home. He was frightened and was crying. We gave him shelter for the night, but he is hungry and he cannot eat what my little porcupines eat. Tell me, good friends, what shall be done for him and who can provide for him, so that he may live."

A great gray fox then rose and said: "As you know, I live upon geese and ducks and the birds of the forest. He is the child of the redman. The redman lives upon geese and game, but he has fire and clay and cooks his food. I do not, so the redman's child cannot live with me."

The council agreed that the fox could not take care of the boy.

Then the wolf stood up in the council and growled out, "I have many cubs in my den. They are always hungry and I am always hungry, and it is better for the boy never to see our den, for who knows what might happen to him?"

And the council agreed that it would not be safe for the wolf to take the boy.

Then the deer spoke. He shook his head with the tall antlers and looked with his big, sad eyes at the little man-child. "I have hidden my fawn in the thick bushes so that it will be safe while I am in this council. We feed upon the tender leaves of the trees and on wild grass and the green tops of the ground pine, but I am afraid this man-child would not eat these things. We are gentle and we love one another, but there are many who do not love us and who hunt us, so that we are obliged to run swiftly to save our lives. We have four feet and this child has but two feet. He could not run with us. Our eyes are large and we see many things. Our ears are long and we hear every sound. This child cannot see and hear as we do. He cannot live with us."

The council said: "The deer cannot care for this boy."

The bear then rose on his hind legs and said: "I feed my little cubs on nuts and sometimes we have honey to eat. I take good care of my cubs, and they are always warm and never hungry. Give me this man-child and I will do the best that I can for him."

The bear said: "Give me this man-child and I will do the best that I can for him."

The council agreed that the bear was very wise and that the little lost boy should go home with him, and that all the other animals should help to gather nuts for him to eat.

Then a squirrel came chattering up and said: "Cheep, cheep, cheep, I have nuts to eat. Cheep, cheep, cheep." And the squirrel promised to bring some of his nuts to the bear's home for the boy.

"I know where there is a honey tree," said the deer, "for the other day as I walked through the forest nibbling the green leaves I was stung by a big bee and, looking up, I saw many bees buzzing about. If you are not afraid of being stung, Brother Bear, you can get the honey for the man-child."

Then the council was over and each animal went to his own home. The bear took the boy home to his hole in a hollow tree, where the mother bear and the cubs all welcomed him, and the little boy was happy. He did not cry himself to sleep that night, for the little bears rolled him over and romped with him. Then they gave him some nuts to eat and then they tumbled each other over and over and cuffed each other, quite like little boys at play, and when they were tired the cubs and the little boy curled themselves up snugly by the father and mother bear and went sound asleep.

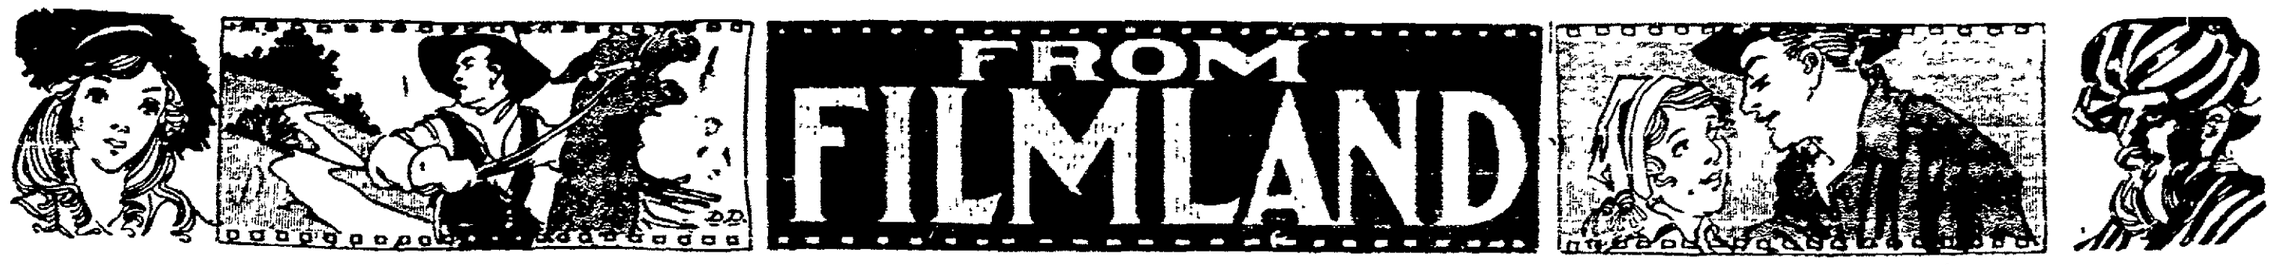

The little boy lived with the bear family for many moons. He learned to talk as the bears talk, and to walk as the bears walk, and he was just like a little cub.

One day some Indians were out hunting and they saw the big father bear and they chased him to his home, and when they found the mother bear and the cubs they killed them all. The little boy was so terrified that he tried to climb up higher into the hollow tree and hide, but the Indians found him and with a shout they dragged him from his hiding place and took him away. He was very wild. He walked and talked like a bear and he hated these people, for they had killed his bear family.

By and by the Indians told tales of the boy who was like a bear cub, and his own father came to see him, and when he found that his lost boy was alive and well he was so happy that he gave all the Indians a great feast.

Then he carried his son home to their own wigwam and the boy learned the ways of his people again, but never in all of his life did he shoot or trap a bear.

How to Become a Movie Star

By Louella O. Parsons

If You Would Win the Kindly Regard of Photoplay Director Study the Secret of Dressing Well, a Big Factor in First Success—Strive to Be Attractive Without Being Conspicuous and Remember Your Worth May Be Measured by the Number of Questions You Do Not Ask.

ONCE inside the magic studio you have received a start. What to do next, how to make a right beginning, is the question that will confront the new extra girl. As an extra girl you are entitled to very little attention, and to give your best it is essential to be alert.

You will be given a dressing-room with other girls who, like yourself, are at the studio for one particular picture. Do not monopolize the entire room, but hang up your outside wraps and do your share toward keeping the place neat and orderly. Do not post yourself before a mirror and sit before it throughout the entire day. Remember you are only one of many, and all those other pretty girls have a right to use the dressing table.

The director to whom you have been assigned will tell you what costume to wear. If it is a fancy dress, colonial, lady in waiting to the court, or ante-bellum days the dress will undoubtedly be furnished by the motion picture company. You will be sent to the mistress of the wardrobe, who will take your measure and tell you what is necessary to complete your costume.

If the scene in which you are to make your screen debut is a modern dancing scene your own party frock will be used. There will be no one to tell you about the photographing of colors, and because so much depends upon that first appearance I think you should know what colors to wear and what to avoid.

Alice blue, rose, gray and purple photograph soft colors. Light brown is a color much affected by Miss Ruth Stonehouse and is found to be a good photographic shade. The only difficulty lies in the fact that many living-rooms are decorated in shades of brown. If the director has chosen a brown background do not wear a gown of the same shade. You must have contrast in order to stand out clearly in the picture.

Black is always good; white is very poor. For some reason white looks blurred and is seldom used. Yellow is frequently substituted for white, and it is no uncommon thing for a scene to be photographed in which the curtains, maid's apron, men's collars and even the bed linens are dyed yellow.

If your first appearance calls for a maid's apron ask the director if he does not want you to wear a yellow one. He will undoubtedly tell the woman in charge of the wardrobe to give you a yellow apron, but in case he has not thought of your badge of servitude it will please him to know you are "on the job."

Pink is good. Blue is fair. Pink is better than light blue, because it is softer and warmer looking. Red photographs black, and will register the somber color worn by widows and older women.

Velvet and satin show their fabric and are very successful from a photographic standpoint. Laces and furs are also effective.

Francis X. Bushman is a great admirer of velvet as a screen garment and has frequently worn a purple velvet lounging robe and a smoking jacket of the same color and material.

It is a wise plan for you to walk down and look at the settings on the studio floor before you decide on the frock you expect to wear. Get a dress that is in keeping with the furniture in the room—a contrasting color and something that harmonizes with the period of the furniture used.

Do not get a striking dress that you believe will outshine every other extra girl's gown. Keep within the bounds of good taste. Any overdue demonstration in dress will be termed freakish and will perhaps subject you to comment.

If you are slender ruffles will look well on you, but if you are as plump as a partridge avoid ruffles. They will make you look fat, and the slender girl is in vogue just now.

Study yourself and make the most of your own particular type. Do not wear long earrings that make you look like a Russian dowager or an Italian princess if the part calls for a simple American girl. Avoid extremes in every article of clothing and jewelry. See that your frock is clean. If it is of light colored material the spots will show in the picture.

I remember a pretty girl who came to a certain studio to pose. She photographed well, was a good type and made an impression with the director. He was so pleased that he gave her a bit to do in his next picture. She had a scene in a ballroom with the star. Just a brief scene, but important because it brought the little extra girl into prominence with the leading man.

She was supposed to wear long white gloves and dainty slippers. Her gloves were dirty and the soiled, rumpled fingers stood out with startling conspicuousness in the "close-up." Instead of the white slippers she wore heavy shoes, which spoiled the effect of her otherwise dainty outfit. The director was furious. It meant a retake of the scene. The leading man was away on another picture and the retake could not be accomplished for three weeks. The picture was held back and the director was censured by the manager for his failure to get the picture ready in time for the weekly release. Needless to say pretty Miss Brown was not wanted at the studio again.

Perhaps you think all detail of personal apparel should come under the direct supervision of the director and that it is not necessary for you to use your gray matter in helping to carry out the idea of the character described in the scenario. Some directors watch every detail of their production, while others give the players credit for some intelligence and expect them to do their part in making the picture a success. It behooves every player to feel a responsibility and to make his costume as nearly perfect as possible. See to it that your frock is clean and that your gloves and slippers are immaculate.

The scene in which you make your bow to filmland may not call for an evening frock. You may be cast in an afternoon scene. In that case see that your costume is also in keeping with the occasion. Mend any torn bit of lace, see that your gown is properly pressed and that your petticoat is of the right length. These suggestions may all sound trivial, but it is the right beginning, no matter how unimportant it may seem, that leads to the bigger things.

If possible get a scenario of the picture in which you are to appear and study the story. It will interest you to know the plot and will give you advance preparation. In some studios a scenario is furnished the extra people, while in others no thought is given beforehand of the emotions the people outside the stars are expected to register.

Be guided by the studio in which you are working. If you are in a place where only the leading characters are expected to read the script of the story do not force yourself forward, but abide by the existing conditions. You will have a chance to find out what you are expected to do when you go on the studio floor.

Have your eyes and ears always open and keep patient and sweet tempered.

The worst pest known to studio life is the borrower. Every one dislikes the girl who borrows everything from hairpins to clothes. The wardrobe mistress holds up her hands in horror when this girl approaches her with a request for stockings, shoes, petticoats and every other necessity known to the feminine wardrobe.

Be sure and provide yourself with enough hairpins, pins and other toilet accessories. Do not come to the studio without a white petticoat or a pair of silk stockings if your costume calls for such.

Make a list of everything you will need. Pack your bag or suitcase with great care and see that you have every necessary article of wearing apparel. It is a good idea to put in a sewing bag with needle, thread, scissors and other things in case of an accident. The girl who keeps in the background and does not make a nuisance of herself by borrowing or speaking in a loud voice is the sort that the studio manager keeps in mind. The quiet, refined little girl, never in the way, but always on hand when wanted, has made a record for herself even before the camera grinds out a foot of film.

Forewarned is forearmed, and I want to say that I have seen many girls lose an opportunity by allowing themselves to become too conspicuous. Keep always in mind that the director wants the credit of discovering his own material and he will fail to be impressed by any insistent claims on your part.

If your features are good, if you have a distinct screen personality and wear good clothes with ease and grace, it is, of course, in your favor. But let the man behind the throne find out all these attributes himself. No one likes to have a fact thrust upon his vision forcibly. He likes to gradually absorb a condition, and you will find this is especially true of the producer of motion pictures. He is a man of artistic temperament, as a rule sensitive and keenly and vitally interested in his people, his sets and his scenarios. He studies each one with minute care and feels a certain pride in discovering new material.

You are that new material, and if you come up to his specifications your first big obstacle is overcome. You are on the high road to fame from the moment the director has passed upon you and found you photographically and artistically correct.

Marguerite Courtot's Story of Success

I CAME into the "movies" when I was only 15 years of age. I had been posing for a firm of photographers for some time. One of the firm suggested that I was a good type for motion pictures. My hair is auburn, my eyes grayish blue and my features are regular. At first my mother was opposed to a profession that was a sister to the stage, but I pleaded and begged and she allowed me to go to the Kalem company as an extra girl.

I worked very hard for four months. I was very young and, of course, enthusiastic. My director cast me in "The Octoroon." I had the role of Zoe, which is highly emotional. That was my first big picture, and since that time I have never played any but leading roles. I have stayed with the Kalem company because they were the first to give me a chance and I feel that whatever measure of success I have accomplished I owe to their helpful suggestions.

I think there is a place for every ambitious girl who has talent. I advise every girl who can register expression, who can face a camera and, most of all, who can forget herself, to work hard to get into the "movies." It is the most fascinating profession in the world, and one that is a constant compensation for every ounce of hard work and worry expended in its behalf. I am in favor of young girls without experience, because I think they can be molded to the director's idea more easily, providing, of course, they have ability and common sense, both of which are absolutely essential in winning fame upon the picture screen.

MARGUERITE COURTOT.

Miss Parsons' Answers to Film Fans

JITNEY FAN—I cannot see what connection a jitney bus and a movie fan have, but I am mighty glad you enjoyed my lesson, on the writing of photoplays. In a two-reel synopsis it is advisable to write the action that takes place in the first reel and call that act 1. Then to write the action that takes place in the second reel and call it act 2. The Photoplay Clearing House is located at 175 Duffield street, New York.

ORA—It is not necessary to send your photograph to me. My ideas might not be the same as the film company. Send it to the film company in which you hope to make application. I am grateful to you for your confidence and I shall hope to have you write to me again.

O. K. M.—The questions that you wish to know on scenario writing are all answered in the book I have recently had published. The title is "How to Write for the Movies." I could not begin to answer all of your questions in one letter.

B. B.—The accomplishments you mention should be of value to you as a picture actress. Riding, swimming, dancing and out-of-door exercise are all important assets to success. Many pictures call for scenes where riding is essential.

ANNA—If you have acted on the stage and were a success in the different roles you were called upon to portray I see no reason why you could not get into pictures. Actual stage experience is a very easy mode of access to the film studios. The girl who has had a stage career naturally has a better chance than the amateur. Good luck to you.

NADINE—If you feel that your weight is a drawback in getting you a position as a movie actress why don't you diet? A girl of your age should exercise and avoid an excess of fat. Naturally a slender girl with a graceful figure has more of a chance to get into the movies than a girl who has allowed herself to become too stout. I have only your word for it that you are too stout, for I do not know how much you weigh.

HELEN—I should like very much to see your picture. Your type as described sounds very promising. The combination of brown eyes and light hair is usually very attractive. Thank you for your interest in our picture page.

D. N. M.—College theatricals, I have no doubt, have helped you, but just to what degree the movie companies will feel this experience will qualify I am unprepared to say. There is always some difference of opinion in every line of business.

SERBIANS STRUGGLE IN DEATH TRAP

German Foes Tighten Grip Around Tiny Domain

SERBS HURLED BACK

Victory Over Bulgarian Hordes at Dorian Claimed

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The war office at Petrograd announced today that a British submarine had sunk five German transports and driven another ashore in the Baltic Sea.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Serbia's foes strove tonight to complete and tighten the steel circle they had already drawn nearly quite around King Peter's domain.

Bloody fighting raged north, south, east and west.

On every point of the compass the enemy was within the little kingdom's frontiers.

But the progress the invaders were making was not swift. The Serbians contested every inch desperately. The allies estimated that they had killed 26,000 Germans and Austrians. Many Bulgarians have fallen.

The Serbians themselves, however, were losing heavily and were gradually losing ground.

AID EXPECTED SOON.

Their only hope is in help very soon from the allies. They are receiving a little already near their southern frontier from some of the French and British who recently landed at Salonika, had pushed north and were aiding them to resist and attack the Bulgarians who are marching between Volondovo and Hovodovo, twenty miles north of the Greek frontier, to destroy the railroad from Salonika to Nish—a line the allies will have to use if they are to intercept the Austro-Germans on their way through Serbia to Bulgaria and Turkey.

The Bulgarians are across the border also in the east and have taken the eastern forts at Zaichar, forty miles from Nish, with which it is connected by rail.

FIGHT ON TO JOIN GERMANS.

Still worse, a Bulgarian force has taken Negotin and Strumka in extreme northeastern Serbia and are fighting their way across a twenty-five mile triangle to join the Germans and Austrians in their drive through the Moravia valley.

This drive is continuing slowly but remorselessly. Berlin accounts, believed to be accurate, state that the Teutonic troops had taken Vranova, south of Semendria, Berg Mountain, east of Pozaverac, the village of Smoljinac and the mountain east of Semendria.

Nish advices said the Serbians had repulsed an attempt to encircle their wing, before Semendria, driving the invaders back in disorder and killing large numbers, but it was recognized that they were heavily outnumbered and could not continue to fight indefinitely unaided.

Austrians Repulse Serbs

BERLIN, by wireless via Sayville, Oct. 16.—Austrian troops have thrown the Serbians across the Bollcica near Vinca, the Vienna war office announced today.

Bulgars Are Driven Back

ATHENS, Oct. 16.—The Serbians are gradually beating the Bulgarians back in fierce fighting at Dorian, Southern Serbia, close to the Greek frontier, according to dispatches tonight from Nish, where it was said 400 German prisoners had already arrived.

Italian Attacks Failure

VIENNA, via Berlin and Sayville wireless, Oct. 16.—All Friday's Italian attacks on the Austrians failed, the war office announced today.

Germans to Clear Baltic

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 16.—Germany was reported concentrating a naval force today, presumably preparatory to an attempt to clear the Baltic of the British submarines, which have destroyed practically all German ships in that quarter or forced them to take refuge in port.

Allies May Change Attack

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The Balkan situation was believed to be the topic of negotiations tonight by diplomats here and in Paris, Rome and Petrograd.

Certain English, French and Italian military men were known to favor dropping the Dardanelles campaign, withdrawing troops from Salonika and landing both forces, with strong reinforcements, at Dedhagatch, southern Bulgaria, for a drive due east through Bulgaria and Turkey on Constantinople.

They argued that it was an easier way to reach the sultan's capital than via the Dardanelles, and would cut the Germans out of the city equally well.

Russia, which wants to help Serbia, is understood to object. It was not believed the Serbians were being consulted.

Navy Will Be Second Largest

REVEAL DEFENSE PLANS

Citizen Aid to Army Is Asked

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Details of the administration program for national defense became known officially today. They include a six-year program, which in that time will bring the American army with reserves up to 1,260,000 trained men, and a naval building program to add sixteen capital ships—ten dreadnaughts and six battle cruisers, eighty-five submarines, fifty destroyers and fifteen scout cruisers in five years, with proportionate increases in personnel and officers.

Estimates or appropriations needed to begin the national defense program are placed at $182,000,000 for the army and $216,000,000 for the navy. President Wilson has approved the program as submitted by Secretaries Garrison and Daniels.

FIRST YEAR PROGRAM.

In the first years' program, Secretary Daniels has recommended the building of two dreadnaughts, two battle cruisers, twenty-five coast submarines, five ocean-going submarines, twelve destroyers, three scout ships, with an increase of 8000 enlisted men and legislation for the appointment of 250 more midshipmen to the naval academy.

For the army $72,000,000 more than last year will be asked and for the navy a $63,000,000 increase, making the total increase for defense over last year $14,000,000.

The combined estimates of appropriations for national defense will be between $398,000,000 and $400,000,000, the latter figure being the estimate that has been kept in mind from the beginning as the limit for expenditures.

Secretary Garrison's plan to increase the regular army from 87,000 to 140,000 men under a six-year enlistment, requiring two years of service and four years in reserve, will give about 300,000 reserves in six years, according to War Department calculations. The continental army which is to be created by means of a six-year enlistment, of two months each year for three years with the colors and three years of reserve subject to call, will at the end of the six years give a total of 800,000 men. This trained citizen army, together with the regulars, will give, with the 425,000 national guardsmen, a mobile army of more than 1,200,000 in six years.

SECOND LARGEST NAVY.

The United States navy—the second largest in the world.

By 1922 the army is planned to comprise 1,542,000 men, consisting of 400,000 active and 400,000 reserve "continentals," or citizen soldiers; 140,000 active and 280,000 reserves in the regular forces and 125,000 state militia.

This far-reaching plan for the nation's defense is contingent, of course, upon both public approval and Congressional enactment. Strong and determined opposition to the plan, both without and within the Democratic party, was already evident today.

An aeroplane corps equipped with fifty aeroplanes and dirigibles is planned. A volunteer army motor corps, enlisting private individual cars for defense, is another plan.

Enlargement of the present government arsenals to make more rifles, field and coast artillery, ammunition and other munitions is also planned. Secretary of War Garrison will not recommend establishment of any new arsenals.

Resent Plan to Abandon Gallipoli

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Lord Milner's suggestion, made last Thursday night in the House of Lords, that the peninsula of Gallipoli be evacuated by the entente allied troops, is causing anxiety in Australia, according to a message received by the London Evening News today from Sydney, N. S. W.

The Sydney Telegraph says Lord Milner's declaration opens a question regarding which it is difficult to think calmly.

"The idea that so great and bold an enterprise and upon which such courage and so many valuable lives have been spent," the Australian newspaper continues, "should be abandoned at the first opportunity as impossible from the outset, is enough to make the men killed in the Anzac landing turn in their graves. Such a decision would be evidence of gross incompetency somewhere, for which hardly any punishment would be too great."

Terror Kills Many in Zeppelin Raid

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The medical evidence at the inquest held today on the eighteen victims in the London area of the Zeppelin raid Wednesday night disclosed that the death of half of them, the majority of whom were women, was due to heart failure or shock resulting from the terrifying effect of the exploding bombs and the sunfire.

One victim was an elderly woman who had sought refuge in her husband's arms. He had said to her: "Never mind; we will die together if the worst happens." He was not hurt.

Among those who died from injuries was a young man who was found sitting against a wall, his severed arm lying loose in his sleeve. To those who came to his assistance he said: "I am still sticking to it."

Suspected German Sloop Is Sighted

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—A small sloop, believed to have been the Eclipse, in which six German officers left the interned German vessel Kronprinz Wilhelm at Norfolk, passed Virginia Beach, Va., outside Chesapeake bay, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, according to a message from the Virginia Beach life-saving station to coast guard headquarters tonight. The message was immediately transmitted to the Navy Department.

The sloop sighted off Virginia Beach was headed southeast and corresponded exactly to the description of the missing Eclipse. No effort was made to stop the vessel, as the navy had not asked assistance at that time and had not made public the fact that the Germans had disappeared.

Says Rumania Is Bound to Russia

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Replying to a telegram from the Moscow Slav Committee, expressing the hope that Rumania speedily would come to the aid of Serbia, Take Jonescu, ex-minister of the interior of Rumania, according to a dispatch from Petrograd to Reuter's Telegram Company, replied:

"The interests of Rumania henceforth will be indissolubly bound to the interests of Russia. Like you, I am longing and striving for Rumania aid to enable Serbia to expel the treacherous attack. Bulgaria is guilty of the most shameful crime in history."

Find Body in Bay; Police Are Puzzled

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—The body of a Japanese, attired only in a suit of underclothing, and floating in a life preserver bearing the name of the Chenyo Maru, was found tonight in the bay off the West Berkeley wharf. The case is a mystery to the police, the theory being advanced that the dead man might have attempted to leave the steamer and gain the shore to avoid the immigration authorities. The coroner's office is investigating.

Italian-German Pact Emphatically Denied

ROME, via Havre, Oct. 16.—Existence of a secret Italian-German treaty was denied tonight by the Messagerio Italy, said the paper, is acting in perfect accord with the allies and if necessary will help Serbia and Montenegro.

Urges Merchants to Do Honor to Edison

Merchants of Oakland have been asked by Mayor John L. Davie to illuminate their stores Tuesday night, in honor of the arrival of Thomas A. Edison, the famous inventor. Mayor Davie suggests that every electric light in the city of Oakland should be incandescent when Edison arrives.

The mayor's proclamation follows:

"To the Merchants of Oakland: In honor of the arrival of Thomas A. Edison on Tuesday, October 19, every merchant of Oakland should make our city one grand display of electric illumination.

"As a welcome to the Pacific Coast for the man who has done so much for humanity every electric light should proclaim our welcome Tuesday evening.

"As chief executive of the city of Oakland, I hereby request every merchant to thus honor Thomas A. Edison.

"JOHN L. DAVIE,
Mayor of the City of Oakland."

To Start Campaign of "Drys" on Oct. 31

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16.—The statewide campaign for prohibition will be started actively in Sacramento and elsewhere in California Sunday, October 31, when the churches will make the first plea for "dry" votes in 1916.

From the pulpits of practically every church in the state, according to the plans of the prohibition workers, the proposed amendments to the constitution providing for the wiping out of all saloons and the placing of California in the dry column, will be read and petitions for signatures started.

For the purpose of waging the prohibition fight, the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U. and the Prohibition party have combined under the name of the California Campaign Federation. Dr. this D. M. Gandier is state superintendent. There is an executive committee of thirty of which fifteen members come from the south and the same number from the north of the state.

Fear Disaster From Salvador Volcano

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The volcano of Izalco in Salvador, which was reported yesterday morning to be in full eruption, probably will cost many lives, according to Victor M. Barahona, who arrived here yesterday on the Pacific Mail liner San Juan.

Barahona and two companions, Salvadore Silverstrucci and Victor Rojas, live within the shadow of the volcano, but left before the eruption.

They said the volcano when they left Salvador was showing signs of coming activity and many persons were nervous as to the possibility of a bad eruption.

Barahona said that no matter in which direction the lava might flow it would be almost certain to engulf a village, maybe several, in its track. There are many plantations and small farms and ranches in the danger zone.

Izalco furnished the passengers aboard the San Juan with a beautiful display when the liner passed the big peak.

Four Reported Dead; Three Hurt in Fire

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 16.—One man is known to be dead, three others are reported dead, three others are seriously burned by fire which raged through the Benzol section of the $4,000,000 by-products plant of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company at Fairfield tonight. A pipe blew out in a gas main leading to a tank where the benzol is converted from gas.

Tire Explodes; Breaks Jaw of S. F. Autoist

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—An auto tire is almost as deadly as a 75-centimeter shell, if properly used—at least Jacob Buttler, 203 Sixth avenue, thinks so, following an adventure tonight with one of his. He was pumping the tire when it exploded. His jaw was broken and he was badly cut about the face. First aid was rendered at the Central Emergency Hospital.

Bandits Kill Agent; Rob Money Drawer

PITTSBURG, Oct. 16.—Two bandits tonight shot and killed John C. F. Franks, ticket agent of the Pennsylvania railroad at Bridgeville, Pa., and escaped with the contents of the money drawer.

SECOND WIFE HALED FOR ALIMONY

Divorced Spouse Sues; College Dons Are Subpoenaed

Mrs. Walter Christy No. 2, several university heads and the executive officers and members of the executive committee of the Associated Students of the University of California, are to be haled into court next week to explain why Mrs. Walter Christy No. 1 isn't getting her back alimony.

Walter Christy himself was in court yesterday, when he appeared before Justice of the Peace James G. Quinn and was asked to tell where his salary was. It was wanted for purposes of being levied upon. After giving the court an involved statement as regards his finances, and exhibiting 60 cents as his sole remaining assets, he explained that he had no knowledge of the present whereabouts of three months' advance salary.

So Roscoe D. Jones, who is attorney for Mrs. Christy No. 1, is determined to learn just what has become of the missing salary and, to gain that end, will ask Judge Quinn to cite various and sundry persons, including the second Mrs. Christy, to come into court and add their efforts to the search for the missing salary of the veteran athletic trainer of the Blue and Gold.

HOW IT ALL BEGAN.

It's a long story and had its beginning a few years ago when the first Mrs. Christy—her name is Eleanor F. Christy—divorced the trainer. In a property agreement Christy signed a contract to pay his ex-wife $60 monthly alimony. The divorced wife returned to the home of relatives in Boston, Mass., and continued to collect her alimony each month up to last April. Then the payments stopped.

In the meantime Christy had remarried. He continued the alimony payments for several months after his marriage, but he changed his mind, his first wife declares, last April. She waited several months for the arrival of the money. It did not come, so she traveled across the continent to make her home in Oakland and to attend to the alimony collections in person. Attorney Jones was asked to take a hand and he secured, in rapid succession, two attachments against Christy's salary.

SALARY PAID AND SPENT.

The first attachment was for several months' back alimony. The second was for one month. Then Jones secured a third attachment a week ago. When he presented it to the executive committee of the Associated Student body for collection he was informed that Christy, who is paid $175 a month, had been given his salary three months in advance. So Jones secured an order of examination, calling Christy into court to explain what had happened to the $640 he had collected.

This was yesterday. Christy explained that he had given Mrs. Christy the second $500 and kept $140 for himself. This, he said, had dwindled away to the 60 cents which he exhibited in court. He was unable to say just what Mrs. Christy the second had done with the $500. That is the reason that Mrs. Christy the second is to be haled into court. She will be asked to tell what became of the $500. The Student affairs' officials, including Graduate Manager Johnny Stroud, will be asked to explain why they paid Christy three months' salary for work which he has not yet done.

This will happen during the coming week.

Prison Board Clash Does Not Materialize

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The clash in the board of prison directors, anticipated as the result of the order barring Charles Montgomery of the California prison commission from San Quentin prison, did not come off as expected, the prison directors attending only to routine business and ignoring the Montgomery matter.

Montgomery is the man who offered to take the place of Abraham Ruef in his cell if the latter could be permitted to attend his father's funeral. The offer created a furore around the prison, and Montgomery was not allowed again to enter its gates. The commission of which he is the head is a charity organization devoted to assisting ex-convicts.

Warden Johnston denied that Col. Dennis Duffy, formerly on the board, gave the order barring the charity worker, but states that the majority of the board made the request to him, stating that the man was "undesirable."

Claim Americans Dynamited Trains

GALVESTON, Tex., Oct. 16.—Dispatches received by the Carranza consulate here today from Mexico City say that Americans who joined the forces of Zapata some months ago are responsible for the recent dynamiting of passenger trains in Mexico. It is also reported that train service between the capital and Laredo was reestablished yesterday. General Arnumedo and Almazan, Zapata chieftains, are reported as having begun negotiations for surrender and amnesty.

Sir Lionel Carden Is Dead in London

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Sir Lionel Carden who was British minister to Mexico from 1913 until August, 1914, when he was forced to leave Mexico City by General Carranza after the overthrow of President Huerta, died in London today.

RECOUNT WON BY SCHMITZ IN COURT

Judge Crothers Orders Ballots Made Ready for Clerks

Atty. Matt Sullivan Is Amazed and Puzzled at Decision

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—After listening to arguments for two hours yesterday, Superior Judge George Crothers instructed Registrar Harry Zemansky to have the ballot boxes used at the primary election ready next Thursday morning to begin the recount of votes asked for by Eugene E. Schmitz.

Judge Crothers did not formally rule to grant the petition of Schmitz for the recount, as he extended to Matt I. Sullivan, counsel for Mayor Rolph, three days to file an answer.

The application of Schmitz may be denied when the answer to be made by Sullivan is filed Wednesday, but, judging from the attitude assumed by Judge Crothers during the arguments yesterday, this appears very unlikely.

Registrar Zemansky estimated that it will take at least nineteen days to complete the recount.

FINISH AFTER NOVEMBER 9.

As the recount will not begin until October 21, this means that it will not be completed by the general election to be held on November 9, because of the intervening holidays.

The general election will, of course, be held. Registrar Zemansky has already begun to send out the official ballots.

Clerical hire for the nineteen days will aggregate $3800.

Schmitz, as the contestant, must defray this expense. The $3800, however, does not represent the total expense of the contest. Schmitz is also supposed to pay his counsel fees. His attorneys will be Harry I. Stafford, who will have associated with him George Knight and Nathan Coghlan. Probably two other attorneys will also be employed.

"Who is standing for all this expense?" was the question that was being raised repeatedly yesterday.

SULLIVAN'S ARGUMENT.

In opposing the application of Schmitz for the recount, Matt Sullivan argued that the recent primary election was held under the provisions of the San Francisco charter and not under the primary law of 1913.

The primary law of 1913, Sullivan contended, by its very terms made it inapplicable to elections in cities and counties whose charters provide for systems of elections of their own.

Sullivan also pointed out that the charter makes no specific provisions for a recount at a primary election.

Judge Crothers admitted the contention of Sullivan about the primary law of 1913 being among the general election laws, but he said he did not see how the legislature had any right to exempt San Francisco from its provisions.

CRITICISES COURT.

Attorney Sullivan said after the proceedings that he was amazed at the attitude assumed by Judge Crothers. He declared:

"The terms of the law are so exact that they permit of but one interpretation.

"In holding as he does, Judge Crothers is usurping the function of a legislature and is virtually amending the charter. I am both puzzled and amazed at the construction he places on such a clearly written law."

Will Confer Pallium on Rev. Archbishop Hanna

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Pontifical high mass and elaborate ceremonies will mark the conferring of the Pallium at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning upon His Grace, the Most Reverent Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, at St. Mary's Cathedral.

This act will be the final one in the installation of the archbishop into his archiepiscopal office.

Ordinarily the archbishop could not have exercised the functions of his office until he had received the Pallium from Rome, as it is the insignia of his office.

Because of the European war Pope Benedict made an exception in the case of Archbishop Hanna, who has had complete power to exercise all the rights of a metropolitan since his appointment.

Is Thrown Through Windshield of Auto

Colliding with an automobile driven by William Conolly last night, Ernest McBride, a newsboy, was thrown from a motorcycle he was riding through the glass wind shield of the machine. The youth was frightfully cut and mangled by the broken glass, but his injuries, while painful, are not serious. C. W. Eads, who was in the automobile, was slightly cut. Both were treated at the emergency hospital. The accident occurred at Eleventh and Franklin streets.

Woman, Two Children Are Overcome by Gas

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Mrs. J. Cadigan, her daughter, Frances, aged 8, and her baby, Barbara, 1 year old, were overcome today by leaking gas in the bathroom of their home, 522 Fair Oaks street. They were rescued by neighbors and rushed to the Mission emergency hospital. They will recover.

Woman Acquitted in Murder Trial

VANCOUVER, Wash., Oct. 16.—Acquittal was the verdict returned by the jury this afternoon in the case of Mrs. Sophia Ludke, charged with being an accessory to the murder of her husband, Otto Ludke, a year ago. Ludke was killed by Edward Gall, now serving a life sentence in the penitentiary.

Leaps From 3d Story of Hotel

Asylum Helpers Chased Him, Man Thought

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Fearing that attendants at the Ukiah asylum, from which he had escaped, were trailing him, O. L. Polito, hiding in a Santa Rosa hotel under an assumed name, leaped tonight from a third-story window. He was badly injured and is in a dangerous condition.

The man made his leap just before the arrival of the police who were prepared to arrest him, under his false name, on a charge of issuing fictitious checks. Polito, on leaving the asylum, according to the officers, masked himself with an alias and financed his trip by cashing a number of checks.

Word of the accident tonight reached John L. Polito, a prominent realty broker, and brother of the injured man. Polito is now in a Santa Rosa hospital, awaiting word from the Ukiah asylum and his relatives.

KILLS PAIR; TURNS GUN ON SELF

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—While their two small children, in bed upstairs, slept through the murder, James Hansen, 333 Duncan street, and his wife, Mary Hansen, were killed, and Thomas O'Mara, a saloon man, who did the shooting, turned the fatal revolver on himself early this morning.

O'Mara died at the Mission Emergency Hospital about an hour later. The fatal shooting occurred shortly after midnight at a birthday party given at the Hansen home. That O'Mara was secretly in love with Mrs. Hansen is declared by the police to be the explanation of the tragedy. It is declared that he had been following her about for several days.

The murder and attempt at suicide occurred at the end of a merry birthday party, given at the Hansen home in honor of Mrs. Hansen's thirtieth birthday. The couple were killed on the back porch of the home, and the guests, thinking the shooting some joke, did not investigate for some little time. Only three shots were fired, every one striking a victim in the head.

Edward Hansen, 14 years old, of Oakland, one of the guests, was the closest witness of the tragedy. Terrified, he fled and was found later.

"Mrs. Hansen had left the dining room to get the coffee, shortly after midnight," he said. "Mr. Hansen was out on the porch fooling with the ice box. He fell, and she called to him to pick himself up. O'Mara came in, and asked her why she did not go to him. She told O'Mara to go himself. I went into another room, and then heard a shot. Then came a second, and I ran from the house."

A few moments later the guests found the three, lying on the porch in pools of blood.

O'Mara was 45 years of age, and lived at Ninth and Stevenson streets.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Hansen, 847 Talbot avenue, Oakland, and their son, Edward, aged 14. These are no relations of the murdered couple, but the Oakland woman was godmother to the two orphaned children. Hansen is superintendent for the Lundgren Co. Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Frank Perry, Mark Anderson and Mrs. Anderson, and Benjamin J. Parrott. O'Mara was rushed to the Mission Emergency Hospital. Attempts to gain a statement from him failed as he did not regain consciousness, according to physicians.

Former Attorney Is Arrested in Seattle

SEATTLE, Oct. 16.—George P. Rossman, 65 years old, a practicing attorney of this city until his disbarment eight years ago, was arrested by the police Saturday evening at the request of Postal Inspectors C. M. Perkins and Starr T. Pinkham in connection with charges alleging use of the mails to defraud.

BOGUS COIN CHARGE IS DENIED BY SUSPECT

EMPLOYS ATTORNEY

Rollie York Not Brought to City; Wives Are Hysterical

Maintaining a stolid silence, save to deny his guilt, Edward Karr, the former Oakland policeman accused of being one of the ringleaders in a counterfeiting plot that flooded the state with from $50,000 to $100,000 bogus five-dollar pieces, arrived last night from Cleveland, O., manacled and in charge of United States Marshal Davenny of the Ohio district. The man, who, with Rollie A. York, also a former Oakland policeman, left recently for the east, and who was arrested in Cleveland, is now in the federal section of the county jail in San Francisco. York, who was also arrested, will arrive tomorrow.

The prisoner was met at the Ferry building by his wife, and a tearful scene ensued. Later she rode across the bay with him and his guards. On the boat Karr laughed and joked with his wife and Mrs. Rollie A. York, wife of the other man accused with him of the crime, and who accompanied Mrs. Karr.

Karr refused to discuss the case until he has seen A. L. Frick of Oakland, whom he has retained as his attorney. "I am innocent, and this whole thing is a big surprise to me," he informed reporters on the boat. Later, asked by a reporter if he had anything else to say, he replied: "As far as I am concerned, you can go to h——!"

HAD CHANCE TO ESCAPE.

The prisoner was brought in on the limited, handcuffed, and in charge of the Ohio marshal and A. E. Crawford, former Ohio state printer, who accompanied the official.

At Benicia, when the passengers changed trains, Karr, who at that time was not handcuffed, gained an excellent opportunity to escape from the officer, from whom he was separated in the crowd. The former policeman hunted up Davenny, and boarded the train with him.

"Gee," he laughed, "I almost lost you that time. If I wasn't honest I could have escaped then without trouble." Davenny at once put handcuffs on the prisoner lest he decide to escape after all.

"I went east to find work," said Karr. "If I had known I was wanted here I would have come back of my own accord. That's all I will say until I see my lawyer."

He was lodged in the federal section of the San Francisco county jail, awaiting examination Monday. Federal Agent Harry Moffitt who traced the man, did not return with the prisoner, and local officials declare they do not know where he is. The fact that several detectives were sent to Oakland today is believed by other detectives to indicate that the alleged plant of the counterfeiters may be in Oakland.

WIVES ARE HYSTERICAL.

Mrs. Karr returned to the home of her mother, Mrs. Henry C. Poole, 1205 Poplar street, after leaving her husband at the ferry. She was greatly overwrought, and Mrs. York was also hysterical. Both insisted that they believed their husbands innocent and would stand by them.

The exact sum of counterfeit money passed in the coins, which have been the cause of concern to banks and merchants for months, may never be known. Some detectives estimate it at $50,000, while others declare that fully $100,000 have been issued. Other estimates have gone as high as $500,000. The banks have kept no accurate figures, but it is known that many of the coins were generally accepted be-

NEW SERIES OF ARTICLES ON HEALTH AND EFFICIENCY, OR HOW TO KEEP WELL

TO APPEAR IN SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE

Doctor Frederick Rossiter, a practicing physician of this city, who is to begin a series of popular articles on "Health and Efficiency" in The Tribune, beginning with next Sunday, will also conduct a "question and answer" department on health topics of more than general interest to the public. The writer of this series of articles on health has published two books on the subject of hygiene and health and has written extensively for some years, dealing with the different phases of the subject of health and the prevention of disease.

Doctor Rossiter's books are: "The Story of a Living Temple," a popular treatise upon the human body, written for the young especially, and a larger book for the home called "Practical Guide to Health." The latter has passed the 100,000 mark and complete translations have been made in four other languages—German, Spanish, Danish and Swedish.

For over fifteen years Dr. Rossiter has been in the active practice of his profession and so his writings deal with the very practical phases of promoting and maintaining health. He is a graduate of two of the leading medical schools of this country and has studied abroad, in Vienna and Berlin.

The first article of his series will begin with a discussion of "How the Human Body Defends Itself." His series of articles will deal with the prevention of disease and how best to care for the health. Questions regarding health, disease, hygiene, and preventive measures, will be handled through the question box in short articles once or twice a week. The general articles will appear on Sunday.

OFFICIAL WAR STATEMENTS

FRENCH

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The French have completely repulsed a new German attack in Bois-Sahe, west of Souchez, announced the Paris war office tonight.

"The Germans renewed their bombardment of our second line in Champagne.

"Bomb and grenade fighting occurred in the Argonne north of Houyette and Vauquois. In the Vosges we recaptured the summit of Hartmannsweilerkopf with the enemy's fortress and fifty prisoners.

GERMAN

BERLIN (by wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.), Oct. 16.—The Germans have reconquered the positions gained by the French and English in the great offensive, announced the war office tonight, referring to the allies' recent drive in northern France and Belgium.

"The English," continued the statement, "were thrown from their positions northeast and east of Vermelles, the only place they still occupy being a small trench west of the Gavelot.

"The attacks on our positions northwest of Souaine and north of Lemesil, where the enemy used gas grenades, failed, as did a French attempt to retake positions south of Leintrey.

"An attack intended to improve our positions east of Hartmannsweilerkopf was successful.

"Enemy attacks on the Schratzmanneil failed.

"On the east front Von Hindenburg repulsed Russian attacks south and southwest of Duneburg. Fighting still progressed northeast of Wessolowo, where our lines were entered.

"At Minsk, where German aircraft bombarded the railroad station while a big troop movement was going on, five explosions and an important fire were observed."

The statement referred to Teuton progress already made in Serbia and previously mentioned in reports from other sources.

Rockefeller Assists Mother and Child

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 16.—Shortly after noon today a poor woman and her daughter applied to the gateman at John D. Rockefeller's estate and asked if she could cut across to the railroad station, as she was tired and wanted to save the extra walk around of more than a mile.

Rockefeller said: "You bring her right over here and I'll take her up in my car."

Then she and her child got in and Rockefeller gave the chauffeur directions to drive slowly through the estate so he could show the woman and her child some of its features. He left her at the Pocantico Hills station, and as he bid her good-by he slipped a bill into her hand.

Bulgarian Minister to Russia Dismissed

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 16, via London, 5:52 p. m.—According to a semi-official Bulgarian announcement, M. Majaroff, who was Bulgarian minister to Russia until the diplomatic break between the two countries, has been dismissed from the diplomatic service. The dismissal, it is said, is because of his reported declarations criticising the actions of his government, recently published in the Russian press.

Sonoma Vineyardists to Raise Defense Fund

SANTA ROSA, Oct. 16.—The directors of the Sonoma County Grape Protective Association decided today to call upon grape growers to contribute 5 cents per ton of their crops to a fund to send a delegation of grape growers to Washington. The delegation will ask Congress to abolish the wine tax. Charles E. Humbert of Cloverdale presided at today's meeting.

FARMER FINDS BROTHER IN "GOSHAMITY" CITY

CHICAGO, Oct. 16. — Owen Jensen, farmer, accompanied by his son, Thor, walked out on the Northwestern station yesterday afternoon and stood for a moment squinting.

Finally the old man blurted out: "Goshamighty, but this town changes in forty years. Come on, son, let's find a policeman."

"I say, officer," questioned Farmer Jensen, "c'n you tell me where 'Happy' Jensen lives? He's my brother, an' I haven't seen him in forty years, an' I haven't writ' to him."

A city directory was called into use and the former glanced up and down a long list of Jensens.

"There ain't no 'Happy' Jensen in this list," he said.

"What's his other name?" queried the policeman.

SUCCESSFUL THIS TIME.

Again the directory was put to use. "John C. Jensen, 2410 Warren avenue," was found on the list.

The pair sought the Warren avenue address, and the result was a reunion of the brothers, who had not heard from each other for forty years.

Whitney Contest To Be Extended

Brother and Sister to Face Supreme Court

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The decision of Superior Judge Coffey denying the petitions of Parker Whitney and Mrs. Helen Beryl Wheeler, to distribute to them their proportionate share of the $2,500,000 estate of the late J. Parker Whitney will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Judge Coffey's decision was rendered several days ago when he overruled a demurrer of Attorneys William T. Plunkett, representing Mrs. Wheeler, and James P. Sweeney and Louis Crowley, representing Parker Whitney.

The formal order denying the petition for distribution will be made on November 11.

Parker Whitney and Mrs. Wheeler, who were precluded from ever having their share of their father's estate by the terms of his will which created their shares into a trust, attack this trust clause.

They claim that the trust is created to run for a longer period than is permitted by the laws of California and that it is therefore void. They ask to have one-half the estate distributed to their mother and the other half divided among themselves and their brother, Vincent Whitney. Under the provisions of the will Vincent Whitney will receive his share of the estate in two years, when he attains his majority.

Judge Coffey held in overruling the demurrer that the trust does not conflict with the state laws.

450 Kegs of Beer for German Sailors

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Four hundred and fifty barrels of beer destined for the German officers and sailors of the interned German gunboat Cormoran at Guam are included in the cargo of the schooner City of Papeete which sails for the little island early this week. Some weeks ago the schooner Annie M. Campbell made a trip to Guam to carry supplies to the interned Germans and the City of Papeete is the second vessel to make the special trip.

There is no regular communication with Uncle Sam's small island except by the transport which calls there on the way to Manila once each month, and so other means have to be found to send supplies to the interned men.

Crippled, He Loses Suit for Damages

STOCKTON, Oct. 16.—It required but four hours' deliberation for a jury in the Superior Court here today to decide against John M. Goins, plaintiff in a $100,000 damage suit against the Southern Pacific Company.

Goins, formerly a locomotive engineer, lost a foot at Lodi October 4, 1911, when the handhold on a car, which he was attempting to board, pulled loose, causing him to fall. The rear wheels of the last car passed over his foot.

The railroad made the novel contention that Goins deliberately planned the affair, unscrewing the handhold so that the accident would appear real. A desire to collect several insurance policies providing heavy indemnities for the loss of a foot was said to have been his motive.

Greek Request Is Met by Bulgarians

BERLIN (by wireless to Sayville), Oct. 16.—The Overseas News Agency says today:

"According to the Cologne Gazette, the Greek government has asked the Bulgarian government to permit the export of Bulgarian corn to Greece, and the request has been granted."

LITTLE GIRL A HEROINE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Rose Miller, 7 years old, daughter of Mrs. Mary Miller, of 309 South Fifth street, Brooklyn, is in a dying condition as a result of injuries suffered while trying to help two small boys across the street near her home yesterday. The little girl, in trying to dodge a street car did not see an automobile until it was almost upon her. Then she pushed her little charges out of danger's way and fell beneath the wheels of an automobile driven by James Blanchfield.

GREAT BATTLE NEAR IN MEXICO

NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 16.—Reports of an important battle between 8000 Villistas and 5000 Carranzistas at a point near Cananea is momentarily expected tonight. The latest arrivals from the troubled zone declared that two columns of troops, one led by Francisco Villa himself, were converging toward Cananea. General Gill, the Carranza leader, has 5000 men with which to oppose the advance. The battle will probably be almost enurely a cavalry affair.

Many Americans are crossing the border in every manner of vehicle. They believe most of the Americans will escape from the danger region before the fight begins. Several guns have been placed in advantageous positions around Nogales and old men and boys forced into the army.

VILLA SITUATION DESPERATE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Villa is in desperate straits. His army is disintegrating, breaking into bands of guerillas, his generals and soldiers deserting wholesale, and he is being forced back into the Sonora mountains.

This was the information before the State Department tonight, on the eve of formal recognition Monday of the Carranza government. The department had official and private dispatches presaging early collapse of organized revolt by Villa. Officials stated that Generals Felipe Angeles Maytorena, Chao and Raoul Madero have definitely, but not publicly, abandoned Villa. A stampede of Villa deserters across the border was also reported.

RECOGNITION MONDAY.

Only formal steps of diplomatic etiquette remain to accomplish Carranza's recognition. Secretary Lansing today called a fifth and probably final meeting of the Pan-American conferees for Monday afternoon at the State Department. They will formally announce Carranza's recognition for the several participating nations.

Eliseo Arredondo, Carranza's chief agent here, and prospective American ambassador, will be received by the delegates Monday and notified of the joint, simultaneous action.

Appointment of an American ambassador and consul-general to Mexico City at an early date will complete this government's recognition of the new regime.

AMBASSADORSHIP LIMITED.

Upon reliable authority it was stated tonight that the President's choice for the first American ambassador is limited to half a dozen men. Most prominently mentioned is Ambassador Morgan of Brazil. He has asked a different post and is known to be highly regarded by the President and Secretary of State. Also considered are Ambassador Frederic J. Stimson of Argentina, Henry P. Fletcher of Chile, former Governor John Lind of Minnesota and Consul John R. Silliman. It is stated positively that the ambassador will be selected from the present diplomatic corps. The Mexico City post pays $17,500 a year.

RETURNS TO QUELL REVOLT.

EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 16.—General Villa, reported killed in Sonora Friday, was said tonight to be on his way back to Juarez to quell what threatened to be a revolt of the entire military and civil government in the border city.

News of the defection of Mayor Monfort, Police Chief Morales and Miguel Pollas, chief of the secret service, following so suddenly the withdrawal of General Ornelas, commandant of the Juarez Villista garrison, precipitated a crisis which Villa's adherents in Juarez assert has caused him to abandon his intention of leading his troops into Sonora, to stem the tide of opposition in his main port of entry from the United States.

BLAME ON VILLA.

In a statement issued tonight, General Ornelas, who was in charge of the military of Juarez for two years prior to his desertion Friday, explains the reason for his flight. He blames the determination of Villa to keep himself a factor in Mexican politics, although it is rumored in El Paso that Ornelas had planned with the civil authorities to turn the town over to Carranza as soon as Villa got well on his way to Sonora.

"Being convinced of the absolute necessity of the Mexican people needing peace and protection, and wishing to assist in bringing them out of the misery and starving condition they now are in," said Ornelas' statement, "I decided, at the risk of my own life, to propose to General Villa that he retire as chief of the northern division and allow the rest of the principal chiefs to make peace propositions to the contending factions.

"On two occasions I tried to convince Villa of the absolute necessity of this step, but, unfortunately, failed in my good intentions. The bad element surrounding General Villa became informed of my act and accused me of being a traitor in order to flatter the 'boss' and merit his esteem.

CARRANZA PLANS TO STRIKE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Carranza is planning one mighty stroke to wipe out of Mexico the men who will be "rebels" when the United States and other nations accord him recognition.

Using this city as a base, the first chief is outfitting an expedition which aims to capture and control Sonora, Chihuahua and Lower California and break forever the waning power of General Villa.

Five ships, according to B. A. Almada, Carranzista special agent, have been chartered to take coal and munitions to Obregon's Carranzista forces and to be used as troop transports for the forthcoming struggle.

MONEY FREELY SPENT.

Three hundred thousand dollars has been spent in a short time in this work. Included in the orders is one for expressing here from St. Louis 30,000,00 seven-milimeter cartridges.

"We expect," said Almada, "to move against Villa with greater forces than ever before. We shall take thousands of men into northern Mexico and drive him from Sonora and Chihuahua, and after that we shall capture Lower California. La Paz and Guaymas will be our principal bases. We hold both of those ports and will land our men and munitions there. In a month the war will be over and General Carranza will be supreme. Of that I have no doubt."

INJURED IN FALL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Edward Gibson, an hotel man of Ninth and Mission streets, fell from a car early this morning. He sustained a fractured skull, it was stated at the Mission Emergency Hospital.

DETECTIVES SEEK BOGUS COIN GANG

Alleged Counterfeiting Plant Not Located: More Arrests Are Expected.

fore the sudden discovery was made that they were false.

Karr was captured in Ogden by Chief Callaman of the Ogden division, and Thomas Foster a San Francisco secret service man, and Chief Harry Moffitt of San Francisco apprehended York at Cleveland, O. Moffitt and his operatives took charge of the men for the return trip.

The operations of the counterfeiting gang, say the detectives, have extended over three years and have spread over the entire coast. Both the suspects were secretly indicted by the federal grand jury following the searching of the home of Mrs. Mary O'Connell, an aunt of Mrs. York, in Oakland. Mrs. York was living with her aunt during the absence of her husband in the East, and both deny any knowledge of the counterfeiting charge.

INDIGNANT AT CHARGE.

The men were first suspected following an altercation in a Stockton saloon, when they became highly indignant at the proprietor refusing one of their coins; stated that they were Oakland policemen, and finally left after the Stockton police had been notified by the saloonman. Following this incident the federal detectives traced the two men.

The pair were accepted as patrolmen by the Oakland police last January after taking the civil service examinations. Neither stayed long in the service, but left to operate jitney buses, and quit Oakland. Kerr married the daughter of Henry C. Poole, an local business man.

The trials of the two men will take place in the San Francisco federal courts.

Women Fight for Life in Wreck

Thirteen Killed in Train Accident in Kansas

MANHATTAN, Kan., Oct. 16.—In a temporary morgue here lay the bodies of ten persons who went to their deaths when Union Pacific motor train No. 579 plunged into Fancy Creek one mile south of Randolph, Kan. Three other bodies are in the submerged baggage car. Thirty-six persons were badly cut and bruised.

Unable to stay his train before reaching the yawning chasm worn in the embankment by the swollen waters of the creek, the motorman set his brakes and then leaped into the torrent. The combination baggage and passenger coach plunged into the water, but the trailer, containing a party of school teachers, stuck to the rails.

Physicians near the scene are attending Mrs. Robert Smith of Seattle, Wash., and her daughter Emma, who were badly injured.

A wild fight for life followed the plunge of the motor over the embankment. Women broke the glass of the windows with their bare hands, while others struggled to get through the opening. Many in the motor car clung to the window ledges until rescued. Others leaped into the water, to be rescued when aid came from Randolph.

Helen Taft After Degree From Yale

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 16.—Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the former president, is another member of the Taft family to become connected with Yale university. She has announced her intention of taking a doctor's degree, and has joined the first year students in the Yale graduate school. Miss Taft received her B. A. from Bryn Mawr last June. During her college course she displayed ability for writing, and she probably will take her degree from Yale in literature or history.

Armenians Thank Wilson for Efforts

PETROGRAD, Oct. 16, via London.—John A. APPROVES PLAN TO SAVE TRACKS

Army Board Makes No Recommendation on Palace of Arts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Secretary of War Garrison today approved the recommendation of the board of officers appointed recently to meet at San Francisco to look into the question of retaining [illegible] of the exposition buildings [illegible] Presidio and Fort Mason. This board was composed of Generals Bliss and Bell of the general staff and General Aleshire, chief of the quartermaster corps.

The action of the department was wired to General Murray this afternoon.

The following statement was given out:

"The board recommend that the following mentioned buildings, which were found suitable for use by the military service, be returned by the war department:

"Trotting track and fence inclosing same.

"Aviation field.

"Athletic field.

"Circular se[illegible]

"Polo field—all within the trotting track.

"Grand stands.

"Cow s[illegible] [illegible] track.

"Poultry building, dairy building, mess hall pertaining to the Marine Battalion camp.

"The board found that none of the buildings, other than those here enumerated, because of their character or location, or both, would be of use in the military service to the extent that the war department would be warranted in retaining them under the provision of the joint resolution of February 16, 1912."

The board does not include in its recommendation the Palace of Fine Arts or any of the buildings that San Francisco is working to retain.

Gregg Heads Fageol Motor Train Project

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Kept secret for weeks, the identity of the men who have formed a corporation to take over the patents on the Fageol trailers, which have been operating at the exposition, and to run them in competition to the street railways, became known yesterday.

The corporation is headed by Wellington Gregg Jr., cashier of the Crocker National Bank. Associated with Gregg are S. F. B. Morse, manager of the Pacific Improvement Company, and Roy N. Bishop, assistant to the president of the Palace Hotel Company.

CHICAGOANS GIVEN 'COLD SHOULDER'

Chilled Snub for Mayor Thompson and Party in Jewel City Is Charged.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—That Mayor Thompson of Chicago was openly snubbed on his recent visit here, that the women members of his party were ignored in the exposition entertainments and that city and state officials "ducked" after promising to participate in "Chicago day" exercises, were the charges laid today against San Francisco by John P. Garner, who was in charge of arrangements for the Thompson party.

"Of all the frosts I ever ran into this was the worst,' he said. "The hospitality we expected was missing."

No delegation met the mayor on his arrival, and the party is said to have walked or ridden to the Palace hotel as the members saw fit.

Garner adds that they waited around the hotel lobby until a room for the mayor was obtained and headquarters established on the second floor.

When arrangements were made for luncheon at the California building only three members of the city council were invited aside from the mayor. Doubtless all of them were hungry.

A meeting was held in the mayor's room, presided over by Oscar De Priest, negro councilman from the Second ward. Much feeling was created by the selection of these three members, one of whom was De Priest.

De Priest attended the luncheon, but older members were overlooked.

NO OFFICIALS THERE.

When Chicago day was observed at the fair, the officials, inclusive of Mayor Rolph and Governor Johnson, are accused of having respectfully dispatched their secretaries and others to represent them.

The mayor was at his ranch in Santa Clara county to recover from the strain of his campaign. Governor Johnson was probably campaigning for the non-partisan election.

They close their case by reminding San Franciscans that an automobile ride through the city was planned for the party on Sunday, the closing day of the mayor's stay, but no automobiles were provided.

Defends Rich Man Then Marries Him

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Not quite five months ago Miss Claribel David, the charming young Portia who, in the last seven years or so, has been a prominent figure at the San Francisco bar, defended S. Martin Bachelis, a New York diamond merchant, who was arrested for speeding during a visit to the exposition. She secured his acquittal in jig time.

Last week, according to her sister, Miss Elsie David, of 505 Fourth avenue, she returned from a trip into the interior, wearing a wedding ring, and announcing that she had taken the opportunity to make her former client her husband. The news of the elopement did not leak out until yesterday, when members of the family found it too great a strain to keep the secret longer.

Warship Sinking Is Denied by Germans

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 16, via London.—A semi-official telegram from Berlin states that nothing is known there of an engagement between German warships and a British submarine off the Island of Moen, in which a German torpedo boat was reported to have been sunk.

The telegram suggests that the explosion of a mine probably led to the report.

NUMEROUS DINNER PARTIES PRECEDED BRILLIANT BALL

The annual fete for the Baby Hospital closed in a blaze of glory last night, when 5000 guests danced at the ball in the Civic Auditorium. It was a socially brilliant affair as far as the boxes went, and socially interesting in the mingling of sets on the floor, where informality of costume and a carnival spirit reigned.

It recalled the ball that opened the Auditorium last spring. There were the same glittering lines of boxes and the same merry crowd on the floor. It was a wonderfully well-managed crowd that danced without serious collision under the direction of a floor committee of fifty, headed by Fred Sherman.

The "hot dog" man from the Zone, who dispensed his wares during the evening, was one of the popular figures of the evening, and there were a number of other original details of a menu that was served continuously instead of at a stated supper hour. Many of the visitors who had helped make the bazaar a success on Friday evening and yesterday afternoon remained for the ball, among them the picturesque fortune-tellers and "Little Elizabeth," the human doll, who had received juvenile society of Oakland in the afternoon.

The smart sets of Oakland, Piedmont, Berkeley and Alameda seemed to be present en masse. Surely few were missing and there was much visiting among the boxes. Scores of dinners had preceded the ball, a number of them taking place at the Hotel Oakland, where Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hamilton Brown entertained. Their guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sharon, Miss Phyllis Lovell, Miss Helen Downey, Roger Hayne and Spencer Brush.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Lundborg also gave a dinner at the Oakland for some San Francisco friends, who later attended the ball with them, and Miss Stebbins was another dinner hostess at the hotel.

MANY GIVE DINNERS.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Heron were among those who gave dinners at the Oakland, where they entertained Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Walsh, Miss Elinor Parker and Dr. Massesser of San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McDuffie entertained at a dinner at their home in the Tunnel road in honor of Miss Daisy Polk.

Members of the Piedmont set were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Engs, who had thirty guests at their home in Piedmont. Later the party drove to the ball in a cavalcade of automobiles. In the party were: Mr. and Mrs. Wickham Havens, Mr and Mrs. George Wilhelm, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Murdock, Mr. and Mrs. Challen Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Havens, Walter Leimert, and others.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Sharon had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lovell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farr, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Norris, Miss Esther Sharon and Jack Norris.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hogan, Jr., gave a dinner at their home in Lerida avenue, going later with their guests to the ball. In the party were were Mr. and Mrs. James McCandless, Dr. and Mrs. Philip Bliss, Lieutenant and Mrs. Fred Seydl of Fort Scott.

Mrs. Andrew Davis and her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Nahl, entertained the following guests at dinner at their home in Berkeley and later at the ball: Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Peixotto of San Francisco, Mrs. L. R. Webster, Mr. Otto Wadstedt and M. Guillaume, commissioner to the exposition, and Lieutenant Commander Clark Woodward.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Rawlings gave a dinner at their home in Chetwood street for Mr and Mrs. Isaac Upham of San Francisco, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Upham.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Knowland gave a dinner before the ball, and in their box later were Judge and Mrs. Randolph Weinemann. Mr. and Mrs. John Ralph Wilson. Miss Rose Mears, Miss Eleanor Knowland, Frederick Harrison, and one or two others.

Mrs. John Newton Porter had a box party including Mrs. Joseph Zeigenfuss, Mr. and Mrs. James Porter (Arvilla Zeigenfuss), Mrs. Samuel Altman, Miss Grace Zeigenfuss and Mr. R. E. Porter.

OCCUPANTS OF BOXES.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mott had friends in their box, among them Mrs. Samuel Hubbard and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hubbard.

Others who occupied boxes and their guests were as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. William Ede—Mr. and Mrs. Burr Eastwood, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dibble, Miss Marguerite Ross and Mr. Lesley Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Veitch—Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sutro, Mr. and Mrs. Houghton Sawyer, Mrs. Charles Parcells and Eugene Blanchard.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newell—Mr. and Mrs. Percy Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Bonestell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lovell.

Mr. and Mrs. William Creed—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Starr, Miss Pussy Creed, Mr. Clarence Creed.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Walker—Mr. and Mrs. Willard Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Hume—Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Searles and several others.

Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Grissim—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shockley and others.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson Cushing—Mrs. D. A. Foster of New York, Miss Alfreda Wright, Miss Carmen Ghirardelli, Messrs. Kinsey Miller and Jack Hampton.

The James K. Moffitt box—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fore, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Stroud, Miss Natalie Fore, Miss Genevieve Fore.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville Abbott—Mrs. George Uhl of San Francisco, Miss Marcella.

(Woman Beautiful.)

By no means use a heated iron. It makes the hair dry and dead looking, giving a most unkempt appearance. After brushing the hair thoroughly, just dip a clean tooth brush in a saucer of plain liquid silmerine and run it through the parts of the hair to be curled. Do this at bedtime and you will be quite surprised when you behold yourself in the mirror next morning. The hair will be beautifully wavy and curling and the effect will appear altogether natural.

You will have no trouble doing up your tresses in the style you desire and they will look and feel fluffy and comfortable. You need not hesitate to use pure liquid silmerine, which you can procure at any druggist's, as it is perfectly harmless and will leave no greasy, gummy or streaky trace. A few ounces will last for months. —Advertisement.

MURDER TIPS LID FROM UNDERWORLD

Graft Charges Come Out of Mysterious Death of Chicago Jeweler.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—The mysterious midnight murder of Harry Phillips, jeweler, in his bachelor apartment in the Burkley building, Friday night, by tonight had tipped the badly balanced lid over Chicago's sordid underworld and a veritable stream of rumors of police graft, murder, tangled love affairs and secret disposal of burglars' loot came pouring out.

The police tonight held three theories of the Phillips murder. They were:

Phillips was slain by an enraged husband or a jealous lover of one of the many women who frequently visited him.

Phillips was slain by some habitue of the underworld who feared recent trips to the state's attorney's office of Phillips and his brother, Elick, who was convicted Thursday of receiving stolen property, might mean "peaching."

Phillips was slain by a man who was connected with the robbery and murder of a lake boat captain in Cleveland.

Detectives working on the first theory developed a vast deal of evidence of the Lothario role Phillips played. In his apartment were found numerous letters from half a dozen women.

THEORIES CONVERGE.

The second and third theories, the police said tonight, tend to converge. This is the story, told by State's Attorney Michael F. Sullivan, that tends to support clews which developed these propositions:

Two years ago a boat captain was murdered and robbed of $3000 worth of jewelry in Cleveland. Tom Walker, then chief of detectives in Cleveland, arrested two men here. One was convicted and hanged and the other sentenced to prison, chiefly on testimony of Phillips, in whose possession some of the stolen jewelry was found.

Through the case, according to the story Phillips is said to have told at the state's attorney's office, three police officials suspected Phillips of conducting a "fence" for stolen property. These men were accused of "shaking the jeweler down" as a payment for not arresting him. Sullivan said tonight Phillips told him he paid money to the police for protection.

Then came the arrest and conviction of Phillips' partner. Phillips went to the state's attorney's office Friday. He was to have gone before him again next week. The police believe persons who feared what might transpire at that meeting decided them to put Phillips out of the way.

In the meantime the police are anxious to find the man who was sent to jail in Ohio for two years, in February, 1913, in connection with the murder of the lake captain.

Auto Overturned; Nebraska Judge Hurt

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 16.—Judge E. C. Strode, a prominent attorney of Lincoln, Neb., was severely injured tonight when the auto in which he was riding overturned near St. Helens when it skidded in soft dirt.

Three other occupants of the car were either scratched or badly shaken up.

CASHIER OF W. O. W. SHOT BY BANDIT

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 16.—William Henry Smith, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, national cashier of the Woodmen of the World lodge was shot and killed by a masked bandit in Omaha tonight. Smith was walking home from the Billy Sunday meeting with Miss Grace Slater, 21, a clerk in his office.

For an hour the bandit walked the girl around, robbing her and threatening to assault her. Meantime Smith was dying, a bullet having severed an artery.

Police had searched for the murderer for an hour before a crazed young woman called police headquarters saying she had just been given a nickel and put on a car by a man who had shot her escort. It was Miss Slater. She was taken to headquarters where she told the story of the holdup. Police believe her story.

ARREST SAN FRANCISCAN HERE

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Chester S. Harris, a physician, was brought here on a warrant tonight after having been arrested in Oakland on a charge of disturbing the peace. He was released on bail.

HILLSTROM MUST FACE FIRING SQUAD

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 16.—The state board of pardons refused today to commute the sentence of Joseph Hillstrom to life imprisonment and terminated his reprieve after an all-day session. Hillstrom will be taken into the District Court and resentenced to death. This must be done at once, and the death date will fall between thirty and sixty days of the date of resentence.

A letter written by Hillstrom to William D. Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the I. W. W., was intercepted by prison officials. It led to the discovery of an old intimacy between Hillstrom and another convict whose name is withheld. This convict revealed Hillstrom's crime record. Hillstrom, he says, was lieutenant of the I. W. W. invasion of Mexico, to loot Tia Juana. He escaped arrest. He also was involved in a dynamite conspiracy at San Diego and planted cynamite under Spreckels' theater. This was revealed to authorities in time to prevent an explosion. Hillstrom also is charged with the murder of a policeman at Long Beach, Cal., and with the robbery of a street car crew at San Diego, in the convict's story. Hillstrom served a jail term at San Diego but the evidence in the street car case was not sufficient to hold him.

SWEDISH MINISTER UNCONVINCED.

W. A. F. Ekengren, the Swedish minister, telegraphed to Governor Spry, before the board session as follows:

"Through the courtesy of granting a postponement of the execution of Joseph Hillstrom, sentenced by the courts of your state to be executed for murder, I have had the opportunity to carefully study not only the opinion of the Supreme Court but also the stenographic records of the proceedings before the lower court, together with other available documents in the case and through the information thus obtained I have been only further confirmed in my opinion that the evidence against the accused does not warrant a capital punishment.

"I am well aware that from a technical point of view a new trial is out of the question as the matter now stands, but considering the weakness of the evidence which at best is only circumstantial, I herewith venture not only on my own but on my government's behalf to address a most earnest appeal with a view to obtaining a commutation of sentence for my unfortunate countryman if for no other reason at least for the sake of humanity and comity usually practiced between friendly nations."

Schooner Puritan Signals Distress

SEATTLE, Oct. 16.—The Booth Fisheries Company's schooner Puritan is flying signals of distress fifteen miles west of Estevan Light, on the Vancouver island coast. The coast guard cutter Snohomish has sailed to help the Puritan. The Estevan wireless station sent out a call for aid, which was repeated to the coast guard in Seattle.

Mountaineer Drops Dead on Cattle Range

SAN JOSE, Oct. 16.—Martin Fenton, brother of Mrs. W. P. Dougherty of this city, and a picturesque mountain rancher, dropped dead at his cattle range in the Blackbird valley today. Fenton was a leading figure in the recent trial of Henry Lafrens of San Francisco, accused of the murder of Alonzo Withers, Fenton's former partner.

Wilson Out of 1916 Pre-Convention Work

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—President Wilson plans to take no active part in the 1916 pre-convention campaign, but will spend the summer at Shadow Lawn near Long Branch, N. J. Later he may write a number of letters on issues. The president expects to go to Shadow Lawn immediately after the adjournment of Congress and before the conventions are held.

SOCIETY WOMAN MISSES RING.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—While shopping in the retail district on Friday, Mrs. Charles S. Wheeler, a San Francisco society leader, missed a valuable diamond and sapphire pin. The police have been notified.

Family in Tangle Over Cazadero Property

SANTA ROSA, Oct. 16.—Henry E. Watson followed up his appointment as special administrator of the estate of his father, Captain G. Watson, Sonoma and Marin county pioneer, this week by today filing an action against his brother, Charles N. Watson, and his mother, Mrs. Sarah T. Watson, charging them with unduly influencing Captain Watson, whereby he executed a deed conveying the big Watson ranch near Cazadero to them.

GIRL WHO SCORNED MEN DECIDES TO MARRY ONE

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Miss Eleanore Flowers, formerly of Tennessee, whose scorn of men was openly voiced in the Washington square artistic set, of which she was a member, will marry D. Gregory Mason, a writer for musical magazines.

Miss Flowers, 24 years old, vowed some time ago that she would never go back to her Tennessee home to live because she considered Southern men too polite and chivalrous.

"I do not want to be supported, waited on, protected, safeguarded or sheltered," she said. "I consider myself more than a match for some of the men I know, physically and every other way. I have always got along without their aid and protection and I do not need them now."

FINDS STRANGE FRUIT.

LAKETON, Ky., Oct. 16.—A. W. Lewis tells about a strange discovery. He says:

A few days ago I found, near here, some miniature trees, resembling the willow; from which I picked some fruit that had the fragrance and taste of pineapples, and which looked like pineapples, although no larger than ducks' eggs. The little trees were bearing profusely. I brought some specimens away, and wherever I showed them they attracted great attention. No one appears able to classify the fruit.

BLIND MAN REGAINS SIGHT.

PENDLETON, Ore., Oct. 16.—Carl Guiott, a musician, today is enjoying the recovery of his sight in one eye after a period of complete blindness lasting fifteen years. He suddenly regained his vision while walking and he rushed to his home to behold his wife and child, neither of whom he had ever seen. Although blind, Guiott teaches piano playing and is a member of an orchestra.

FAIR CANOEISTS WILL RACE; MOTORBOATS TO CROSS BAY

Motor canoe enthusiasts of Oakland spent the last night tuning up their engines and overhauling a score of trim little crafts which today will participate in a spectacular twenty-one-mile sprint in open water. Lake Merritt's fleet of motor canoes has been growing steadily, until it has reached formidable proportions. It takes some daring and skill to venture on the rough water of the bay in a cockle shell of a boat that weighs less than the navigator, but the thrill is half of the fun, and today's race will bring out a large number of entrants.

The little boats will race from Lake Merritt to the Exposition yacht harbor and back again. The course is expected to be covered in a little over two hours.

Frank Schager, a local canoeist, who recently accomplished rounding the Cliff House rocks in a motor canoe, is one of the entrants.

Not all the motor canoe pilots and enthusiasts are of the masculine persuasion. Many canoes boast feminine pilots and assistants. Miss Loretta J. Voorhies is the lucky mascot of the "Chicken Coop."

Those who have entered the race are W. Curnow, H. Mann, J. Egenberger, H. Garwood, C. MacDonald, H. Patchen, L. Ward, S. Vincent, Otto Wise, R. Davison, H. Seagraves, U. Murcell, S. Meyer, J. Devereaux and F. Schaffer.

PRISON REFORMS TO MAKE HISTORY

Results of Oakland Convention of Greatest Importance, Says Expert Sehon.

The convention closed this week at the Hotel Oakland was the largest and most important in the history of the American Prison Association, and will result in more lasting good to the world at large than any other similar gathering of the past, in the opinion of George L. Sehon, general secretary of the big association of penologists, who will leave today for his home in Louisville, Ky.

The five principal things, said Sehon, which shall stamp this convention as one of great importance in the history of American prison reform, and which will be put into effect throughout the country generally, are:

1. The honor system.
2. A system of remuneration for convict labor.
3. A greater perfection of the parole and reform systems.
4. The spread of the pardon system.
5. A more general establishment of open-air farms for misdemeanor offenders.

ALL BIG THINGS.

"These are all big things," Sehon said last night. "There were men and women from all parts of the United States present at our convention. The great majority of them are recognized the country over as expert penologists. The men and women who discussed subjects and read papers during our sessions knew what they were talking about. New ideas in prison reform—everything that goes toward the betterment of prison conditions as well as working toward the solution of the big problem of crime and criminalists—were discussed from every viewpoint.

"These men and women will return to their institutions, and in many instances the new ideas given out by this congress will be put into effect. The honor system will spread, the old system of placing convicts at work without remunerating them will take its place with other things which have long since been relegated to the dark ages; pardon boards will be more conscientious and do more real good to the prisoners; open air farms will be established more generally, that misdemeanor offenders may be given an opportunity to build up properly, morally and physically, and a score of other good things will happen because of this prison congress which has just closed."

SAN QUENTIN IMPRESSIONS.

Sehon gave his impressions of California's chief penitentiary, that at San Quentin.

"San Quentin," he said, "has too much idleness about it. It struck me, and scores of others of us, as well, that the inmates were not given sufficient or proper employment; that the system in vogue there is a relic of the past, or should be, and that the prisoners are given too little opportunity to cure their moral diseases that they may return to the world as good citizens."

For the first time in history the Prison Association adopted resolutions endorsing a hotel at which a convention has been held. This was done in the case of the Hotel Oakland, the management and appointments being praised in a formal resolution adopted by unanimous vote of the prison congress delegates.

POLICE KEPT BUSY OBSERVING RULES

Sacramento Force Is Given a New Set of "Don't" Strictures by Chief.

Policemen must not carry canes.
Policemen must not lean on walls.
Policemen must not unbutton their coats.
Policemen must not talk.
(Sacramento Police Rules.)

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16.—A policeman's life not only is not a happy one, but it's not going to be a sporty one in Sacramento any longer. A policeman who walked into the central station with a white hat and yellow cane caused the trouble.

There'll be no more canes, and, incidentally, Commissioner of Public Health and Safety E. G. Simmons took occasion to put through a few more rules. Policemen must salute the commissioner as an army officer is saluted. They can't play cards any more in the station house or drop into theaters by showing their badges. No policeman can enter a saloon. He must also salute members of the city commission, and cannot recommend attorneys to prisoners.

At night policemen can unbutton their coats, all save the top button; but in the daytime they must button up and walk like soldiers.

Government Inspects Chicago Steamboats

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Five supervising steamboat inspectors, composing a special commission appointed by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, conferred here today after inspecting passenger steamers in the Chicago harbor. The committee has been investigating the steamboat inspection on the Great Lakes for three weeks and has inspected vessels at several other ports.

No suggestion of the outcome of the inspection trip was made by the commission. It was said the investigation might result in a reorganization of the steamboat inspection service which was subjected to much criticism after the Eastland disaster.

Answers Suit for Support of Daughter

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Minnie Gray, widow of the late George Gray, the contractor killed by Joseph Lococo in a wage dispute and who filed suit against her first husband, Gabriel Berger, demanding back alimony, to support her daughter, met with legal difficulties today when Berger filed an answer. He states that as his daughter had been supported by Gray for years he is not compelled to pay any back alimony. The case was put over.

POSTOFFICE INSTALLS TWO-DIVISION SYSTEM

Reorganization of the Oakland postoffice under the new "two-division" system, has been completed by Postmaster J. R. Rosborough. The new system divides the postoffice into departments of finance and of mails, one having charge of delivery and care of mail, the other of the business end of the office and the government's funds.

Division of Finance—William W. Robson, superintendent of finance; Arthur L. Martin, cashier (postal); Moltke A. Schafer, cashier (money order); E. Todd Buck, bookkeeper; Herbert E. Bovenizer, finance clerk, Thore A. Netland, chief stamp clerk; Carlton W. Seely, examiner of stations.

Division of Mails—Ralph J. Faneuf, superintendent of mails; Simon P. Wagner, assistant superintendent of mails (delivery); Chester F. West, foreman; George T. Sullivan, foreman; Genevieve T. White, foreman (registry); Eugene B Barr, foreman (night shift); Arthur Petty, foreman (roundsman).

WOMEN REPUBLICANS TO DISCUSS AMENDMENTS

Women of the bay districts will be given the opportunity Monday of hearing discussed by well-informed persons the proposed amendments to be voted upon at the coming election. Particular emphasis in the debate will be placed on the so-called non-partisan measure, a subject to be touched upon by Milton Schmitt, J. C. Montgomery and others. The meeting is to be held at 2:30 o'clock in the ballroom of the Hotel Oakland and has been arranged by the Women's Republican Club of Alameda county.

COLONEL DUTTON DEPARTS.

Col. J. W. Dutton, poet, paragrapher and philosopher, formerly a resident of this city, who has been spending a pleasant week with old-time Oakland friends, has returned to his home in Yolo county, near Woodland.

LIVED IN STORAGE ROOM WITH RATS, SAYS WIFE

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Declaring that she was forced to live in a storage room, rampant with rats, exposing her children to the danger of frequent bites from the rodents, Mrs. Minnie Maywald filed suit for divorce today against Charles Maywald, an express contractor.

That 10 cents a day proved insufficient for her needs and that her husband had plenty of money to give her if he desired were the allegations in a divorce action begun against John E. Van Brunt, proprietor of two Fillmore street candy stores, by his wife, Minnie, today.

Demand for Wooden Limbs Boosts Lumber

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 16.—As a result of the big contracts for artificial limbs placed in this country by the allies, acres of yellow willow in this section have become valuable. While heretofore not a dollar has been realized for the wood here, several carloads now leave daily for artificial limb plants in different parts of the country.

EDISON TO BE GUEST HERE AT BIG ELECTRICAL BALL

Brilliant lights, especially designed for the occasion by the best electricians of the bay region, and special events, all in honor of Thomas A. Edison, will mark the big ball to be given on the evening of October 23 by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workmen. The affair will be held in the Auditorium. Special invitation to the "wizard of electricity," who is to be an Exposition visitor, has been sent by the committees in charge.

Wonderful color effects in lights have been planned by the men who handle deadly current and the great hall will appear as a grotto of fire. A bank of twenty spot lights will cast their beams about the hall and a number of special decorative lighting arrangements have been constructed. A brass band will furnish the music.

Women Grape Packers Earn $1250 Daily

LODI, Oct. 16. — Among those employed in the grape packing houses are quite a number of young women prominent in society circles who work to have a few dollars extra. A business man of Lodi figures the women of this city will earn $75.00 during the packing season.

The present season has been favorable to growers, and those working in the packing houses have no lost time. There are 500 engaged in packing grapes. They will work 60 days each, and the average wage is about $2.50 a day, making a total of at least $1250 paid out daily. Some of the women are paid $3 a day, and others $2.

REPORTS LOSS OF DOG.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The Rev. Arch Perrin, rector of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin and one of the chaplains of San Quentin penitentiary, reports the loss of a pet bulldog this morning. The missing canine was of fawn color and was missed from the rectory at 3007 Steiner street. On the collar was an Oakland license.

I Recommend Peruna To All Sufferers Of Catarrh—

I Do Not Think I Ever Felt Much Better

Mrs. William H. Hamblin, No. 23 Myrtle St., Beverly, Mass., writes: "I took four bottles of Peruna, and I can say that it has done me a great deal of good for catarrh of the head and lungs. I recommend Peruna to all sufferers with catarrh. I do not think I ever felt much better. I am really surprised at the work it can do. I do not think too much praise can be said for Peruna."

HOME OF GREAT HORSES IS CLOSED

Bluegrass Estate of James B. Haggin Famous to Racing Fraternity.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 16.—A sale of thoroughbreds, which will begin October 28, will mark the passing of the race horse breeding farm, Elmendorf, an 800-acre Bluegrass estate valued at $2,000,000, established near Lexington by the late James B. Haggin, who for twenty years was the greatest breeder of race horses in the world. The stallions, Ballot, Hesiod and Sain, with sixty-eight broodmares and thirty-one yearlings are to go under the hammer.

From the early nineties to 1910-11 Mr. Haggin imported from England and the Antipodes the celebrated stallions, Waterkress, Goldfinch, Barrum, Golden Garter, Sir Modred, Star Ruby, Prestonpans, Teddington, Dieudonne, Greenan, Rupello, Bassetlow and St. Andrew, and scores of richly bred mares, and from these and from American stock he developed and marketed more race horses than all other American breeders of his time combined.

Between 1904 and 1905 Mr. Haggin maintained from 450 to 500 stallions and mares at a 30,000-acre ranch in California known as the Rancho del Paso stud, and from 1907 to 1912 there were from 150 to 200 stallions and mares at Elmendorf, which place he began to organize in 1897 by purchasing the old Sir Bart farm.

Rancho del Paso was abandoned in 1905 and the stallions and mares there were auctioned, Mr. Haggin buying the most desirable for Elmendorf.

To obtain the stallion Ballot, Mr. Haggin paid the highest price given for a native American thoroughbred stallion since Sir Martin sold for $75,000, in 1908. Ballot won eighteen races, worth $150,602 during his four years on the turf, in America and in England. The Suburban Handicap, at Sheepshead bay, was one of his victories.

There were upward of 250 mares and fifty or more stallions at Elmendorf when Governor Hughes of New York put through his anti-racing laws of 1908 and 1910, and Mr. Haggin, realizing that it would be impossible to market in this country the produce of an establishment so considerable, without racing about New York to maintain a demand for young stock, began to ship his thoroughbreds to other countries. He sent yearlings to England and France for seven seasons, stallions and mares to the Argentine Republic, and mares to France, England, Austria-Hungary and Germany. The breeders of the Argentine secured the famous stallions Kinley Mack, winner of the Brooklyn and Suburban handicaps in 1900, Ariscander, the greatest 3-year-old of 1903; McChesney, one of the crack handicap horses of 1903. England, France and the central empires of Europe got some of their best producing mares from Elmendorf.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Advertisement.

Wireless Discovery Abolishes Towers

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Wireless telegraph has been revolutionized.

A remarkable discovery, made in San Francisco, has proved that high steel towers, costing hundreds of thousands of dollars, are not necessary for receiving long distance wireless messages.

The discoverer is Robert B. Woolverton, United States radio inspector on the Pacific coast, with headquarters in San Francisco. In place of the tall towers, on which the federal government and telegraph companies have spent millions of dollars, Woolverton simply stretches a single piece of wire on the ground, and, according to his amazing announcement, the result is better than with the high towers, as the static interference is thus overcome.

With a single wire 500 feet long stretched over the ground at Hollister, Woolverton has read the messages from the long distance radio stations at Honolulu, Sayville, L. I.; Washington, D. C., and other places.

MEXICAN POLICY SCORED

Most Dismal Diplomatic Failure: Barrows

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—Dr. David P. Barrows, professor of political science and dean of the University of California, writing in Brass Tacks, the student weekly of news and comment, characterizes the American policy in Mexico as "a dismal diplomatic failure."

"I believe there are but two alternatives," he adds, "intervene or endure."

His article gives in detailed form his reasons for believing that recognition of Carranza's government means prolonged warfare in Mexico; a view which Dr. Barrows advanced a few days ago in a lecture at the University.

The article follows:

"The recognition of General Carranza means a furtherance of the bitter fratricidal strife, of further prolongation of the Mexican agony. Neither Villa nor Zapata will yield to Carranza even though the favor of the United States is thrown in to the scale. Both are capable of keeping up a prolonged struggle during which many thousand more Mexican lives must be sacrificed and resources of the almost ruined country dissipated and the misery of the Mexican population deepened. Certain regions like the State of Chihuahua, which under the Villa government has been kept in order and supplied with food, will have to be swept again by battle and the last sustenance of the population consumed.

BRUTALITY VS. TOLERANCE.

"Both sides, Villa and Carranza, in their better aspirations deserve the sympathy of the American nation. Both sides have been guilty of offenses against the laws of war. Against Carranza's superior breeding and education must be balanced the prowess of Villa and his more intimate acquaintance with the masses of the Mexican people. If Villa is the more brutal, Carranza is less tolerant.

"The unrestrained and passioned conflicts of the elements within the original Constitutionalist party since the elimination of Huerta have been more disastrous to the nation than any phase of the revolution which had preceded it, and it is most lamentable that our government could have prevented this convulsion, and has no better solution now than to assist in its prolongation until one side triumphs by the extermination of the other.

PICKING A FAVORITE.

"There is another practical reason that may well make our government hesitate before recognizing Carranza and giving him its support. It is not only putting all its money on a single horse, but it is picking a favorite who does not offer any guarantee of winning in the end.

"The military leaders on the Carranza side, Obregon, Pablo, Gonzalez, Trevino, Nefarrete and others have so far displayed and still profess a persistent loyalty to Carranza. But all Mexican experience indicates that there is no certainty of a continuance of this loyalty when fighting is done. Anyone who knows the ambition and intrepidity of these leaders must distrust that in the hour of victory they will submit to the civil authority of Carranza.

"Carranza is a puzzle. Cowardice is so extremely rare a quality in the Mexican nation that one hesitates to impute to him that trait, but the singular manner in which he has kept himself remote from the actual struggle, the precautions he has taken for his own personal security, his retirement to the fortress of San Juan de Ulua in the harbor of Vera Cruz, make it impossible to assign him a place among brave men. I believe that none but a very brave man can impress the Mexican nation and lead it to a better future.

"It is unbelievable to me that Obregon, after the desperate fighting in which he has personally engaged, after the thousand times he has thrown his life into the scales, after wounds and the loss of an arm, after gaining his present position as a successful military leader, will take orders from a man under present exigencies he recognizes as his political chief. I cannot imagine that he will win possession of the presidential chair only to seat in it Venustiano Carranza. In other words, I fear lest our government is about to stake its prestige on a man who cannot meet its expectations.

WILSON NOT CONSISTENT.

"Early last June, when President Wilson altered his policy and indicated his intention of again interfering in the Mexican situation, he issued a summons to all Mexican leaders to suspend their fighting and compose their differences. He intimated that if this were not done more definite action might follow.

"I was hopeful at that time that the President was prepared to compel peace in Mexico and coerce whichever element should refuse an armistice. It does not now appear that this was his intention. It appears that what he meant was to give some one element his moral support, with presumably financial aid, accompanied by such adverse action against the adversary as an embargo on arms and the cutting off of supplies from the United States.

"The embarrassing thing now is that while Carranza refused the President's overtures, Villa accepted them. The President is now urged to recognize the man who rejected his policy and aid in the destruction of a leader who had accepted it. I cannot but feel that the following out of such a course would destroy the last bit of repute which American diplomacy possesses in Mexico.

NEGATIVE POLICY BETTER.

"In view of the complete disavowal of plans of forceful intervention and the assurance to this effect which seems to have been made to the Spanish-American diplomats, it would be better for Mr. Wilson to return to the negative policy announced in his Indianapolis speech of last January, leaving the Mexicans alone, treat all elements absolutely alike, and at least save our own reputation from the further disrepute that attaches to dismal diplomatic failure.

"I believe that there are but two alternatives, forceful intervention by the armies of the United States, or the hard endurance until there is an administration whose word the Mexicans will heed."

LOOS SENDS BACK TOLL OF VICTIMS

Misery Depicted on Faces of War-Torn Sufferers at London.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The arrival of the first wounded from the battle of Loos, following directly upon the first exciting news of the British advance in the West, was a dramatic incident of a London night. In a vast and gloomy railway station, which had as few lights goign as were needed to show the way without betraying the place to a possible Zeppelin, a silent crowd had gathered.

Suburban and overland trains were steaming in and pulling out, porters rushing about with trunks and bags or hand trucks, civilian passengers asking about platforms or arguing with the woman inspectors, who are not yet entirely familiar with their duties.

RELATIVES WAIT.

The crowd which waited silently and patiently in the midst of this bustle was composed of relatives of men at the front. Shortly before midnight, a train bearing the wounded drew up at a side platform. The gates swung open and the wounded, in torn and powder burned khaki, heads bandaged, arms in slings or on crutches appeared, followed by a procession of stretchers.

After a rough crossing, the wounded, usually so cheery, had no cheers left in them, and the crowd felt no desire to cheer. Those able to walk were put into motor-cars, and the men prostrate on stretchers were lifted into ambulances.

The watchers crowded up as close as the police would allow, looking for familiar faces. But it was against orders for the wounded to talk. Soon they were whisked away into the darkened streets of London, and the crowd dispersed.

Macedonian Women Flee From Famine

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Scarcity of food and the arrival of great numbers of Serbian refugees here resulted in pitiable conditions in Greek Macedonia, says a dispatch received by Reuter's Telegraph company today from Athens. As the Serbian government is urging all women and children in Serbian Macedonia to emigrate, even greater numbers are expected and it seems impossible at present to make provision for these.

The Greek government, the message says, already is caring for hundreds of thousands of refugees from Turkey and embarrassed by a big mobilization expenditure, it is looking for foreign assistance to prevent threatened famine and disease.

How She Acquired "Feminine Charm"

A nicely-dressed woman sat beside me in the train. Everyone stared at her. It was not her beauty or feature that held our eyes, nor her costume. But there was something about her face and expression—I risked it and asked: "Would you mind telling me how you keep your complexion so dazzlingly pure? Don't think me impertinent, but you seem over 30, yet haven't a line in your face, and your cheeks are quite peach-like. How do you do it?"

Laughing she said "That's easy. I remove my skin. Sounds shocking, doesn't it? But listen. Instead of cosmetics I use only pure mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's. I apply this nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings. This gently absorbs the soiled, weather-beaten film-skin, without pain or discomfort, thus revealing the fresh, clear underskin. Every woman has a beautiful complexion underneath, you know. Then, to ward off wrinkles I use a face bath made by dissolving powdered saxolite (one ounce) in one-half pint witch hazel—a harmless astringent which 'tones' the skin wonderfully. Very simple, isn't it?" I thought so. I'm now trying her plan, and like it immensely.—Millicent Brown in The Story Teller.—Advertisement.

MISSING HEIRESS BOBS UP SERENELY

Muddy Creek Mystery Solved; Police Find Girl Working as Domestic.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—The missing heiress of Muddy Creek has been found. She had not been murdered for her money. With her sleeves rolled high and her skirts tucked tight, she was scouring the bosom of a large front window at the home of Mrs. G. F. Stevenson, 6712 Hollywood boulevard, and whistling "So Long Letty" in a key that was true, when detectives approached the house.

"Does Miss Mabel Grove, formerly of Muddy Creek, Pa., live here?" she was asked.

"Ja," she said, being German.

"Are you the woman?"

"Ja."

"Well, are you the heiress who has been missing for three years?"

Miss Mabel Grove looked Detective Jones straight in the eye.

"Don't talk foolishness," she said calmly. "I don't want to buy land, nor stocks in der oil companies, nor anythings what you got to sell."

TOLD OF SEARCH.

And then she was told of the nation-wide search for her, how her uncle, T. C. Grove, had come from Muddy Creek to hunt for her, how the police had been informed she had been murdered probably, and the quest for her slayer was on.

For more than a year, Miss Grove, who, according to her uncle, has more than $20,000 in cash to her credit, has been working as a domestic in the Stevenson home. She cooks and cleans the house, the only extravagance in which she indulges being a determination not to do washings.

When she came here three years ago, she brought $5000 in cash with her. While hunting for work, she stored her trunks with a transfer firm, thinking the company had a storage department at which she could leave her property until she desired to call for it.

Then she went out and got a job, and has been working in kitchens every day since. Regularly she received her income from some oil properties she owns in Pennsylvania, put the money in the bank and continued to labor in the kitchen. Recently she bought an expensive lot, and she owns considerable property here.

THREE MONTHS' SEARCH.

When her uncle brought word of her disappearance to the police station, search for her under the direction of Investigator Fletcher Feits was immediately begun. It continued for three months. Then the investigator reported he had reason to suspect the heiress was murdered and that her slayer was now receiving her income, forging her signatures to receipts.

When Mr. Grove arrived here Sunday to personally assist in the hunt, the mystery of Miss Grove was made public.

Then Detective Charles Jones was assigned to clear up the mystery. And the clearing came when he approached the sturdy housemaid busy with a bucket of suds cleaning a window.

She thought it very prying on the part of the detective and can not understand why any excitement should be raised. Her employer had no idea the housemaid is the possessor of a comfortable fortune, with annual revenues from her properties far greater than her wages.

ITALIAN ROYALTY INSPIRES SOLDIER

King and Queen Live With the Army Day to Day and Aid Wounded Warriors.

ROME, Oct. 16.—The secret of the Italian soldier's valor and patriotism, remarked by everyone who has come in contact with him is inspired by King Victor Emmanuel, his queen and his royal family, every member of which, including the king and queen, get right down in the ranks and live with their people from day to day.

The soldier realizes his monarch is fighting beside him.

While Victor Emanuel has done deeds of heroism to be with his men in the midst of things there is another royal element quite as important in this psychological inspiration of the soldier. It has to do with the feminine side of the House of Savoy.

Ask any Italian soldier returned wounded from the front why he fought. Ten to one before he has talked five minutes he has narrated some anecdote of Queen Helena's gentle consideration, some story of the beautiful and kindly Princess Jolanda, some episode concerning the Princess Mafalda—and then of course there is always to be remembered that handsome manly little Prince of Piedmont is the soldiers' beloved idea!

There isn't a soldier in Italy who wouldn't tear his bandages off and wave them in the air and give three cheers for the Queen Mother Margherita. The royal family of Italy is a living, breathing, sympathizing, suffering, cheering, sorrowing part of the life of every soldier at the front or in the hospitals.

Queen Helena and the royal princesses have been at the front. They have spent the last two months in northern Italy making repeated trips to the zone where the wounded are first taken from the fields of battle.

It is said that a soldier who had lost his voice suddenly regained it through the shock of joy at beholding Queen Helena bending over his cot.

In the hospital of —— Queen Helene one morning came to a young soldier who had lost both hands through the explosion of a bomb. Deep despair had succeeded a stage of violent weeping with this young man who, in his home near Rome, had a young wife and a ten months' old baby awaiting the return of their maimed father and husband.

Queen Helena with gentle sympathy succeeded in making the young soldier talk. When she had finished, the Queen, her own eyes moist, took the bandaged stub of the King's soldier's arm and told him his future need not be so dreary. She told him of the marvelous new inventions and promised him artificial hands and a position which he could manage.

There is none of that forced or spectacular homage which characterizes the attitude of other fighting men.

HOLDUP MEN CAUGHT WITH STOLEN AUTO

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Stolen by footpads, an automobile owned by W. A. Hale of 1345 Arch street, Berkeley, was recaptured early this morning, together with three men interrupted in the act of holding up a pedestrian. The arrested men are James Clark, Sam Snudden and Oliver Smith. Hale had reported his machine missing earlier in the evening.

TO OPEN TRACK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Announcement was made at the Clift Hotel tonight by H. S. Heiser, capitalist of Monterey, Mexico, that the much discussed race track at Tia Juana, just across the border from San Diego, will be opened in December. A. B. Spreckels is the largest shareholder in a million-dollar corporation formed to operate the track, which may be opened Christmas day.

KILLED IN ACCIDENT.

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Three men were killed outright and four seriously injured shortly after 1 o'clock this morning when the automobile in which they were speeding, crashed into a pillar beneath the elevated section of the subway near Bryant avenue, the Bronx.

SECOND MYSTERIOUS FIRE.

DURHAM, Oct. 16.—For a second time within four days a disastrous fire of mysterious origin has visited the farm of Robert Durham here, destroying the tank house at the Durham home and a windmill, pump and implements at the J. P. Jones home adjoining. The total loss is estimated at $3000.

AVOID ALL MEAT IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Weakness or Kidney-Backache.

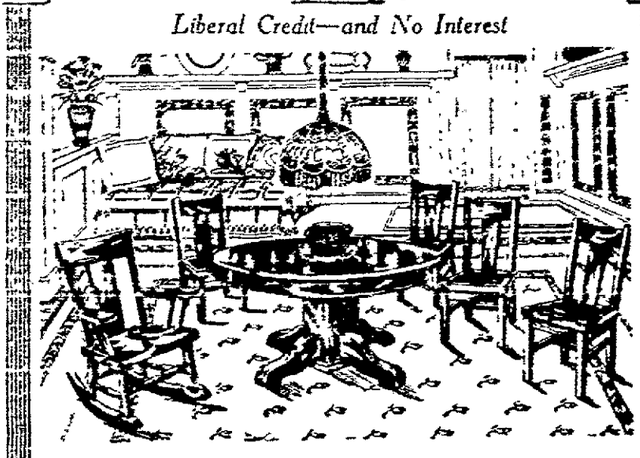

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

TO GIVE HOLIDAY AID TO AFFLICTED CHILDREN

PATRONESSES OF THE THANKSGIVING WHIST PARTY FOR THE BENEFIT OF ST. JOSEPH'S HOME: MISS GENEVIEVE HAYES (LEFT), MISS LORRAINE CRUZA (UPPER RIGHT) AND MISS BLANCHE STEELE.

Plans of an elaborate character are already well under way for the mammoth Thanksgiving whist party and dance to be given in the arena of the Municipal Auditorium on the evening of November 23, for the benefit of St. Joseph's Home for Deaf and Dumb at Fortieth street and Telegraph avenue.

Arrangements have been made for five hundred tables which number will exceed by two hundred the record set for whist tournaments in New York city three years ago. To facilitate the moving of this immense number of players an electrical apparatus will be installed to direct the changing by a system of colored flashlights.

Interest in the success of the affair is general throughout the bay cities as the institution cares for the afflicted children of all denominations on both sides of the bay. The vast majority of the children are orphans and the home is dependent upon the private aid of the charitable folk for its support. Numbered among the active workers for this worthy cause are many of the most prominent residents of the bay region who are enthusiastically laboring for its success.

The program will include music by a brass band and other features which will add to the evening's entertainment.

The general committee includes: Supervisor John F. Mullins, chairman; John M. Hyland, vice-chairman; Miss M. Blanche Steele, secretary; Miss Mae Flynn, assistant secretary; Mrs. Agnes Kelly, treasurer; James Gartland, Arthur E. Rowe, Richard H. Hammond, James A. Hayes, Dr. John F. Slavich, Matt A. COMMON SENSE URGED FOR GIRLS

Deputy School Superintendent Outlines Rules for Raising Daughters of State.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16.—Common sense on the part of the girl and her parents is necessary to rear a baby girl into a useful woman, who will not only be a comfort and benefit to herself, but her friends and relatives, according to Mrs. Edward Hyatt, deputy state superintendent of schools.

Mrs. Hyatt is a school teacher, but believes that the mother is the proper person to dictate to the young girls as to how they shall dress. If a mother is conservative in her dress, the daughter will be so; or, in other words, as the mother is inclined to dress, so will the daughter.

The six rules follow:

First—Above all things encourage a child to tell the truth. When a child does something wrong and confesses it, a spanking gives birth to the thought of lying as a shield against future punishment.

Second—Teach the girl to dress within her means. Let her know the financial circumstances of her family, and the right kind of a girl will not try to equal the rich child in dress, neither will she envy her, for frankness by her parents will create in her a family pride.

Third—Let the girl take a part in the household affairs, so she will not believe herself above such things.

Fourth—Make the home so attractive and agreeable that she will not have to go visiting to find social amusement.

Fifth—Encourage the young girl to develop her tastes for attractive dresses—ones that will make her appearance pleasing. Such can be accomplished on very meager means. Let the young high school girl try different ways to dress her hair attractively.

Sixth—Last, but not less important, teach the girl to consult her mother regarding her clothes. The mother's taste is usually the best. She knows better than any outsider how her girl should dress.

Any girl who follows these rules will be enabled to attain any education she may desire. Common sense that knows not envy or false pride will bridge any chasm.

Chamberlain Stands for "Good Old 4th"

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. 16.—Military preparedness was urged and the old-fashioned Fourth of July lauded by United States Senator George E. Chamberlain in an address here this afternoon at the dedication of the National Guard armory.

He expressed the belief that the only thing that kept the United States out of the European war during the crisis with Germany was the fact that America was at the time talking strongly of preparedness.

In coming to the defense of the old-fashioned Independence Day celebration, Senator Chamberlain said:

"Stop the Fourth of July noise and excitement and you are crushing the patriotic spirit of youth. I believe firecrackers and the other noise cultivates martial and patriotic spirit, but not military spirit."

SHOW TO CATER TO ARTS OF HOUSEHOLD

Practical Demonstration to Accompany Unique Display at Auditorium

Preparations are being rapidly completed for one of the most original displays ever held in Oakland, the great "Women's Household Show," to take place at the Oakland municipal auditorium from December 2 to December 11. Exhibits of every possible phase of domestic convenience, women's work in all forms, new foods, dresses, home planning exhibits, and all other domestic science features will be emphasized in the mammoth display, a trip through which will be equivalent to a liberal education in domestic science, according to the committee in charge of the details of the affair.

Besides the displays in the various booths on the auditorium floor there will be special lectures every day, famous authorities on domestic science branches having offered their aid to the enterprise. There will be lectures on cooking and sewing, and home planning, discussions of home and school work, landscape gardening, and a better baby show and healthy baby show will also be held.

CANNING CONTEST.

Oakland women and women of Alameda county will be offered opportunity to compete in the home canning contest, in which home-made preserves will be exhibited and prizes offered for the best examples and specimens.

The big exhibit will contain displays sent by many of the exhibitors of the Panama-Pacific exposition, the features to be moved into the Oakland auditorium after the close of the big fair in San Francisco. Displays of fruits, vegetables and produce of Alameda county will occupy an important space in the 17,000 foot floor space provided on the main floor for the great display.

The lectures will take place in rooms A and B of the ballroom.

The official opening of the big display will be on Thursday night, December 2, and the following morning will see the beginning of the lectures and educational courses. The arena and corridors of the auditorium will be gaily decked with flags, bunting and exhibit features of various sorts.

Manager L. W. Buckley of the auditorium is co-operating actively with the committees in charge of the big exhibit, and promises detailed particulars of the biggest exhibits within a few days.

The exhibits in textiles and pure foods will be particularly extensive, and special exhibits will also be seen in a wide variety of household economy devices, new labor-saving machinery; and, in the section devoted to the care of children, all the latest medical and hygienic methods in caring for babies will be given full demonstration.

PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATIONS.

The committee has arranged that the affair will be more than an exhibit, and that practical demonstrations will permit every housewife to familiarize herself with every step in modern methods and work.

The food exhibits will also show in detail processes of manufacture.

Household economic experts in local schools and colleges are taking a keen interest in the work of preparing the exhibition, and arrangements may be made for a teachers' section at which the educators may learn practical points.

Arrangements are now being made to invite several of the most famous of the experts in the educational institutions about the bay to participate in the affair.

Local merchants will exhibit as well as the eastern manufacturers, and local factories will also be represented. This matter will come before the manufacturers' committee within a few weeks, and at this time plans will be discussed for co-operation in the project.

COOKING LECTURES.

The booths will be ranged about the walls of the auditorium and in the center, the floor space to be divided into arenas after the fashion of the exhibit palaces at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

One of the most important features of the affair will be the series of lectures on cooking, to be given to classes every day by Mrs. Mary T. Haines, one of the famous authorities in the world on culinary art. Another striking feature will be the demonstration of the setting of tables for different social affairs. The setting for engagement luncheons, dinner parties and other events will be demonstrated, a demonstration being planned daily.

Polo Auto Rugby Team Loses to Pacific

SAN JOSE, Oct. 16.—The College of the Pacific ran up a score of 25 to 5 on the Palo Alto club rugby team this afternoon on the College Park field. Pacific took the offensive when the whistle blew and kept it most of the time, with an occasional rally by the Palo Alto athletes. Pacific scored twice in the first twelve minutes of play.

Meese starred for the college team with a thirty-yard run, followed almost immediately by a seventy-yard sprint through a scattered field for a try. Several of the club's stars were missing from the lineup.

Stanford second team and the second varsity of the Santa Clara university played a nip and tuck contest on the Stanford oval this afternoon, the Cardinal players being returned winners by a score of 10 to 8. The Santa Clara second team boasts several former varsity stars who are not out for stellar honors this year, including Yborrando, the coach.

San Jose high school, playing its first league Rugby game of the season, defeated Redwood City high school this afternoon on Reed Athletic field by a score of 45 to 0. The Redwood team was unable to make headway against the superior weight and speed of the San Jose scrum and backfield.

Ship Risks Danger of Submarine in Pacific

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The specter of a periscope seen two days ago by Henry Dwight, a sailor on the English steamer Purley, while he was on night watch, cast a spell of gloom over the men as the ship sailed for London today.

The Purley was passing through a fog belt when Dwight spied what he believed to be a periscope. A moment later the vision passed, but he told his story to other sailors.

The steamer will pass through the submarine zone.

Lunatics to Be Turned Loose

Special Train Will Let Them Off at Homes

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16. — When the special train carrying 16 insane patients from California hospitals, for return to states of their legal residence, arrives in Oregon, two of the lunatics will be left in the web-foot state. As the Oregon officials have made no agreement to accept the patients, they will be put off the train, unattended, with the expectation that they will be picked by the proper officials and cared for. This will be done under the direction of the California State Lunacy Commission.

One of the patients came from an Oregon town off the main Southern Pacific line, so will be placed on the branch road by an attendant with transportation to his former home. The other patient will be dropped off at a town on the main line.

In each case the California Commission considers the patient able to care for himself, until he comes to the attention of the proper authorities.

MISS HELEN GRAY WILL BE QUEEN OF "FORTUNE ISLE"

To be a real live queen, in the royal sense of the word, is not the happy fate of the average beauty of this democratically-ruled country; but Helen Gray, one of the prettiest of Oakland's charming daughters, has been called to wear a crown. 'Tis true it's only a musical comedy kingdom—or rather queendom—over which she'll rule. This is not Miss Gray's first appearance behind the foodlights, as she has paid homage to Thespis in many of the local amateur productions, the most notable of which was the charitable performance for the Baby Hospital a year or so ago.

Critics state that she is well fitted for the role she will carry in "The Isle of Fortune," the musical fantasy to be presented by the Oakland High School alumni for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the Alumni Association.

The date for the big production, with its cast of over 200 of Oakland's most prominent amateur performers, has not been definitely decided upon, but preparations are being made for the latter part of November, when the Civic Auditorium will have an open date.

ESHLEMAN IS SPEAKER.

HAYWARD, Oct. 16.—John M. Eshleman, lieutenant-governor of California, was the speaker tonight at a meeting held here in Woodmen's hall to discuss the so-called non-partisan bills. Eshleman gave the Progressive party's arguments for the measure.

Film Works Damaged; 3 Hurt in Explosion

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 16.—Three young women were burned to death, four other persons were seriously injured and property damage estimated at $500,000 resulted from an explosion in the storeroom of the Mutual Film company here late today.

The dead were stenographers of the company. They are:

MISS LOTTIE HAM, 17.
MISS CLARA WESTBROOK, 19.
MISS ELIZABETH ALLEN.

A half dozen other persons sustained minor injuries or were overcome by smoke. Firemen carried twelve down ladders to the street.

The two-story building occupied by the film company was gutted by the flames and an adjoining residence was also destroyed. Thousands of reels of films were destroyed. The explosion was caused by an electric fuse blowing out.

Arrest Descendent of Colonial Hero

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—W. H. Allen, 27, New York City, who said he is a nephew of the late Colonel J. Ethan Allen, of New York, and a direct descendant of Ethan Allen of Green Mountains Revolutionary fame, was arrested here tonight on a Stockton, Cal., charge of grand larceny.

According to police here, Allen is wanted by the California officials on the same charge for which Allen's wife, whom Allen says was formerly the wife of Superior Judge Basch of Indianapolis, is awaiting trial in Stockton, of stealing $350 from a business college. Mrs. Allen, the police say, was arrested in Indianapolis.

Allen says it is all a mistake and that he and his wife are innocent.

Breakfast Is Late; Sues for Divorce

Howard H. Hall, of Alameda, complains in a divorce action filed in the Superior Court yesterday that his wife, Mary, is so fond of late hours that she is unable to get up early in the morning and prepare his breakfast for him. He also alleges that she makes appointments with strange men, using her sister's name for the purpose. He asks the custody of their two children.

After twenty-four years of marriage, James Ferira has filed suit for divorce against Mary Ferira, alleging desertion. Nellie Newberg wants a divorce from Oscar Newberg on the allegation that he wrote her letters in which he threatened to kill her. Her complaint was filed in the Superior Court today.

FALLS IN TAR BUCKET.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—William McIntosh, 156 Tehama street, was tarring his roof today when he fell to the ground. In the fall the bucket dropped over his head. He was badly burned by the tar and cut and bruised. He was removed to the Mission Emergency hospital.

MRS. CAROL SIMON SUES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Carol Simon, wife of Dr. Martin Simon, today filed suit for divorce, demanding $120 alimony.

YOUNGSTER GRABS JURIST BY LEGS

When Court Orders Attorney's Wife to Stop Talking Her Son Become Active.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The year-old child of Mrs. Mary J. Harron proved a much better attorney in Judge Seawell's court today than its father, who is Attorney Howard Harron.

Harron had cited his wife into court on a charge of contempt, because she had refused to go to his office this week on a day and hour specified by the court to make a deposition in her divorce suit.

CHILD GREETS JUDGE.

Mrs. Harron appeared before the bar with her infant. The child crawled through the gate, and once inside of the enclosure made its way to Judge Seawell, wrapping its chubby arms around the judicial legs of the aged jurist.

Judge Seawell frowned a judicial frown and little One Year Old let go of the legs, rolled down two carpeted steps and set up a powerful argument in favor of its mother.

Mrs. Harron quickly dropped her role of accused before the bar and rushed to the rescue of her child. Having pacified it, she sat down on the witness chair and began to tell Judge Seawell her side of the trouble.

HAS LAST WORD.

"You have an attorney, madam," said Judge Seawell. "This is not the time to explain your troubles."

"But I want to tell you something of myself," said Mrs. Harron, and she did.

Her husband, who acted as his own attorney, objected to this irregular procedure, but the combined efforts of three men, Judge Seawell, Attorney Harron and her own attorney, Timothy Healy, could not stay her story.

The contempt matter was continued by Judge Seawell until next Tuesday, in view of the fact, he declared, that Attorney Harron was in arrears with his alimony to her.

OAKLAND BUILDING SYNDICATE IS SUED

MARYSVILLE, Yuba county, Oct. 16.—The Rideout Bank, a corporation, of Marysville, has begun suit in the Superior Court against the Equitable Building Syndicate of Oakland to recover $15,564 alleged to be due on a promissory note dated June 17, 1914, and secured by mortgage.

The note was originally given to Catherine Castello, T. P. Castello, James M. Castello and Julie Castello, secured by a mortgage on their farm in Linda Township. The Castellos transferred the note to the Rideout bank, which now asks a foreclosure of the mortgage, together with $1000 attorney fees.

LEAVES $20 TO PAY FOR SUICIDE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Leaving a note stating that illness made him tired of life, and the sum of $20 to repay his landlady, Mrs. M. Carlson, for the damage done by his act, Bert Snyder, a laborer, soaped the cracks of his door, turned on the gas, and died in a lodging-house at 156 Tehama street today. The man had been in poor health for some time.

AERONAUT NEAR DEATH IN DESCENT

"Dress-Up Week" Ascension Ends With Thrill, But Not Fatality.

Escaping by a fraction of an inch of being dashed to death when his parachute, swinging in a swift wind, almost hurled him against a brick wall, Roy Raymond, the intrepid aeronaut, yesterday successfully made his balloon and parachute flight in celebration of "Dress-Up Week." He lighted at Eighth and Broadway, in the building occupied by the Italian Bank and Justice of the Peace James G. Quinn's court. The parachute was swinging wildly, and the aeronaut's body, the pendulum of the swing, just missed the side wall. The ropes of the parachute tore a chimney off the building, but held, and for a few moments the aeronaut hung suspended from the corner of the building.

Raymond made the ascension to drop 10,000 cards, bearing the message of "Dress-Up Week," which ended today, from the sky, and two hundred merchandise orders on Oakland merchants.

His plan had been to drop in the city hall park, but a shift in the wind made this impossible. The great hot-air balloon floated toward the estuary, and, after he had dropped the cards over the center of the downtown section, the aeronaut cut loose as the balloon began to settle.

The parachute came down diagonally, and only by quick manipulation of his ropes did the aeronaut avoid collision with the tall wall of the old Galindo hotel, succeeding in resting on the bank building.

The parachute was not damaged and the balloonist uninjured. Damage to the chimney was nominal.

The flight was planned by the Oakland merchants as a celebration of "Dress-Up Week," celebrated during the past week all over the United States in honor of the nation's returning prosperity.

Large crowds gathered, jamming Eighth street, to wait for the aeronaut's reappearance. In order to give him a clear way his assistant, blackened with smoke, passed by, and the crowd, taken in by the ruse, followed him from the vicinity.

ORIGINATOR TO LECTURE ON MONTESSORI SYSTEM

Fundamentals of the famous Montessori system of child education will be explained in detail by its originator, Dr. Maria Montessori, at a course of lectures planned by the noted educator at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, beginning October 21. These lectures, intended primarily to give the public an accurate idea of the system and to instruct parents and teachers in the art of teaching under her methods, will deal with all the basic branches of her work. Discipline in small children, exercises in practical life, the foundation of auto-education, the imagination of children and its foundation, and other analytical topics will be discussed.

There will be twelve lectures in the course, to take place Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Following these Mme. Montessori will leave for Stevens Point, Wis., where she will teach for six months in the Wisconsin State Normal School.

SALOON MAN HELD UP.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—After they had sent a spy to make sure the coast was clear, four young men held up the saloon of Fred Hansen, 3040 Fulton street, early this morning, taking $30 from the cash register. A few moments before the robbery Hansen served one of the four with a glass of beer. When the four men entered he recognized his customer as one of them. All wore black masks, carried drawn revolvers and after obtaining the money fled in an automobile through Golden Gate Park.

Cross Cadets to Give Big Minstrel Show at Armory

MISS MARGARET M. DOOLEY.

A minstrel show and dance will be given under the auspices of Company N, First Regiment, League of the Cross Cadets, at the Armory Hall, Forty-first and Grove streets, Oakland on Tuesday evening, October 19.

Sergeant George M. Carter, brother of the late vaudeville star and minstrel man, Ed Carter, is in charge of the affair, and has engaged a number of professional entertainers for the occasion. Reilly and Minna, a team of vocalists and comedians from Pacific Coast vaudeville houses, have been booked for the evening; Al McManus and Dan Desmond, local favorites; Lieutenant Colonel James G. Martin, prominent in church singing, and James E. Shields, the tenor, pupil of William Edwin Chamberlain, the eminent baritone and vocal pedagogue.

Captain William E. Schirmer will be interlocutor, the end men being talented exponents of the black-face. Clever members of the company will make up the male portion of the chorus, while young ladies prominent in the social life of the bay region will contribute toward the entertainment as choristers. Among these young women is Miss Margaret M. Dooley, who is working diligently toward the success of the affair.

After the show dancing will be in order until "the wee sma' hours," so that all will be conducive toward an evening of keen enjoyment.

The members of Company N are making strenuous efforts to enlarge and improve their armory so that it will be a great attraction to the young men of Oakland and vicinity. It is in keeping with this time of preparedness to insure the peace of the country, that young men should strive to perfect themselves in the knowledge of things military, and to this end has the League of the Cross Cadets have striven for many years.

War to Rob Horse Show of Features

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The war department has notified the National Horse Show Association that twenty-six picked cavalry officers will be designated to represent the United States army in the military riding competitions at the annual horse show beginning on Saturday, November 6, at Madison Square Gardens.

Because of the war the British, French and other army officers who came from Europe in former years to compete, will be absent, so that the military feature this year will be entirely American.

AUTHOR MAKES APPEAL

R. Hichens Asks U. S. Aid for Allies

Robert Hichens, author of "The Garden of Allah" and "Belladonna," has written the following appeal to America on behalf of the allied cause:

There is a saying, "What the eye does not see the heart does not feel," which is much the same as a statement that the world lacks imagination. And no doubt there are many people who are insensitive to the sufferings of others because they cannot think themselves into the lives of others. It is difficult, for instance, for a very rich man to realize what it means to be a very poor man, more difficult still, perhaps for a strong healthy man to understand what it is to be a weak and ill man. And if these things are hard, very hard it must be for a nation enjoying the blessings of peace to understand thoroughly, and to enter imaginatively into, the anxieties, the terrors, the perpetual strain upon brain and heart and soul, which are the lot of a nation plunged into the vortex of war.

Yet it must be said that Americans have proved that their hearts have felt though their eyes have not seen the agonies of their European brothers and sisters. The help they have given has been very great, but the voices of the guns do not cease, and so the ruin and the misery in Europe continually increase day by day. Mutely the sufferers from war turn for aid to those who still enjoy that mysterious, that already by Europeans almost forgotten blessing, the blessing of peace. They are not beggars by nature, these people bereft, but now instinctively from their souls goes out the silent cry "Can you help us? Can you do anything more for us?"

NIGHT FOR ZEPPELINS.

Two nights ago I went out just before ten to walk by the sea that is close to my house. There was not a breath of wind, the waters seemed asleep, and the dead calm which prevailed suggested to me a war-thought. "A good night for Zeppelins!" I said to my companion.

Here and there along the coast—I live on the east coast of England—revolving lights winked in the obscurity, but all the houses scattered over the downs were closely shuttered, and in the little fishing town near by not a street lamp was lighted. Presently I looked up into the pale sky, in which some dim stars were shining and, very high up—almost among the farthest stars it seemed—I saw a fierce flash of light. It stabbed the peace of the night and was gone. I stood for a moment wondering what it could have been. A flash of lightning it was not. It had looked like a menacing signal. But up there among the stars!

Next morning I knew that I had seen the flash of a light carried by a Zeppelin which was on its way to bombard London.

BRINGS HOME REALIZATION.

Trifles such as this make one realize war as words do not make one realize it, in a really intimate way. The eye has seen the enemy's menace in the sky, and suddenly the heart feels something of what war is; the concentrated intention to do harm, to produce ruin, suffering and death, carried out as far as may be in action.

In Europe the carrying out of this intention in action has been appallingly effective. Never, I suppose, has such misery been known by man since the world began. And still we cannot see the end. Poverty, starvation, disease, ruin, dishonor and death have come into their kingdom. The cry of the women and children is not drowned even by the cries of the men falling on the innumerable battlefields. Will not the ears of the world become deaf because of the reiteration of the lamenting which cannot be stilled?

There is surely a danger of that. And if the sources of pity and of charity should dry up? Well, then indeed the Devil will reap a fine harvest of human misery from the saints and the runagates alike.

It cannot be denied that we are importunate in Europe. But we are very much beset. Still the homeless Belgians are pouring in upon us. A friend of mine, a woman within a few miles of my home, is still giving almost all her time to the finding of house room for Belgians, to fitting them out with boots, clothes and the necessaries of life, and to searching out work for such as can do work. She has been doing this for about nine months now, and the end of her labors is not in sight. And all this time she has been collecting money for these poor people, many of whom have nothing.

MILLIONS VANISH.

Over here in England many millions of pounds have been given in charity since last August, but millions vanish like drops of water in the desert, and still the need on all sides seems nearly as great as ever.

Here where I live, in a very little place, when the war began a hospital was got ready "in case it should be wanted" for the wounded. It had twenty-five beds, the arrangements were excellent, and we were rather proud of it. I remember the time when people "hoped" we should get some patients. Now we have four hospitals and a convalescent home full to the doors of gas victims, wounded men, and broken down men from the trenches, and a fifth hospital is being got ready. Before the war is over how many hospitals shall we have, I wonder, in this one little corner of England? Vast is the need of Europe and vast must be the charity, prompted by pity, to cope with it.

I have seen a good deal of the gas victims, men who fell unconscious before the advancing cloud from the German trenches, and who awoke in hospital far behind the lines at Boulogne or elsewhere. They all have a curious remote expression in their eyes, and a curiously detached, almost faraway manner. They look and seem like men who have gone to the confines and gazed over. It is strange to see them staring at the flowers, wild blue orchids, lilies of the valley hyacinths, buttercups, which star our English woods and meadows just now, as they drive through the green and budding world in the purring motor. Their eyes seem to be saying, "Can it be?"

LOOKED BEYOND CONFINES.

They have been to the confines and looked over; and yet here they are among the sweet familiar things, among the English wild flowers, and the blossoming hedge-rows. They have come back from the suffocating gray-green clouds to breathe in the wind from our seas, they have come back to receive the welcome of spring.

And the thousands who have been to the confines of misery and who looked into the abysses of Hell! Will you help them to come back from those confines and to turn their eyes away from those abysses?

Will you help them?

It is good to see a human being returning to hope through the gateway of wonder, led by the hands of mercy, of charity, of pity.

There is spring in the land. Yes, in spite of this war spring has come again to the world, and the larks dare to sing above the graves. The wounded, the half suffocated soldiers see, and hear, and perhaps feel—indeed I think they do feel—"Yes, after all there is a God somewhere." And when the beneficent streams of pity and charity flow then the wounded in soul and the half suffocated in spirit look up. They see that there are actually flowers springing out of the dust of death, they hear larks singing above the graves of their hopes, and surely they think, they feel. "Yes, after all there is a God somewhere."

Put that belief into their souls by means of your tender charity, and about your feet the flowers will spring up, and the larks, dropping down from the blue, will surely come to sing before your windows. ROBERT HICHENS.

YOUTH WHO GOES WEST IS UNLUCKY

Everything Possible Occurs to Young Handcuffed Bicyclist.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—When Francis de Lackso, young globe-trotter, left Baltimore with a letter from Mayor James B. Preston he expected a pleasant bicycle trip across the continent before he should hand the letter to Miss Elizabeth Hemsley, hostess at the Maryland building at the Exposition. If pleasant meant difficulties at every turn, some of them humorous but most of them otherwise, then the trip was pleasant.

De Lackso does not call it just that. That the gentle reader may make up his mind whether De Lackso is biased or not, he is furnished with the following list of things that happened to the dauntless youth, whose hands were handcuffed to the frame of his bicycle before he left Baltimore:

He was arrested several times as an escaped convict.

He fell into the Cumberland canal on his bicycle and almost drowned.

He had to walk in the canal for three miles to find a lock by which to climb out.

He was taken to a garage and hosed off to free him from the canal mud.

He was twice hit by automobiles and spent ten weeks in the hospital.

He ran into a bread wagon and hurt himself and was arrested for running into the bread wagon.

He skidded into a fence from a muddy roadway and smashed his front wheel.

He went broke at Spokane and had to pick fruit and do other work to get to California.

He was so delayed, because of the automobile accidents, that he reached the Exposition too late to compete for the $1000 prize offered by the Exposition to the person crossing the continent in the oddest way.

It was at Grand Island, Neb., that the first automobile accident occurred and that he was carried to the St. Francis Hospital, where it was found he had a broken collarbone and internal injuries. The hospital authorities could get the chain off neither the bicycle nor De Lackso's hands, so they had to put him to bed with the machine in a little cot alongside, and here he stayed in the hospital for six weeks chained to the frame of his bicycle, because the authorities finally took the front and hind wheels off and simply left him chained to the frame.

HAD TO MOVE BIKE, TOO.

Every time he wished to turn over, however, a hospital attendant had to pick the bicycle frameup very carefully from the cot on one side and lay it over in a cot on the other side of the bed. He was an object of great interest to the inhabitants of Grand Island, who came in great numbers to visit him daily and brought him flowers and jellies and chicken and other delicacies until they found out that he was a Frenchman, and then their ardor suddenly cooled. De Lackso states that most of the inhabitants of Grand Island are either German or of German descent, and while they were very good to him and finally sent him away healed, the German ladies no longer showered him with delicacies.

He will leave the first of the week for New York City, going via Los Angeles and the Santa Fe trail. His trip eastward is only the beginning of a round the world tour. De Lackso states that he does not care whether they are fighting in Europe or not, he is going around the world just the same on his bicycle. A little thing like the war is not going to stop him. De Lackso's father is at present fighting in the French trenches against the Germans, and he has not heard from his mother for very nearly a year, but believes that she is safe in the southern part of France.

TO PERFORM LAST RITES FOR MRS. LOUISE ELFTMAN

Funeral services will be held today for the late Mrs. Louise Elftman, wife of Samuel Elftman of this city, who died at her home this week after a brief illness. Interment will be in Mountain View Cemetery.

Mrs. Elftman, who was a relative of Herr Von Buelow and several other noted German soldiers, was born in Magdeburg, Germany, in 1845. Her maiden name was Louise Wachsmuth.

She came to this country at an early age and in 1870 was married to Elftman in Prescott, Wisconsin, where the couple made their home for some time, coming to California in 1906. She was the mother of eight children, six of whom are living. They are Dr. A. H. Elftman of Hilton, B. C. Elftman, Mrs. James Johnstone, Max Elftman, M. E. Elftman of Idaho, Miss Josephine Elftman of Milwaukee, Oscar Elftman of this city and Mrs. George Flick of South Dakota.

OPERATE ON TURKEY.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Oct. 16.—By a skillful operation performed with a pair of scissors and a kitchen knife, Mrs. Blanche Sherman, of Allentown, and Mrs. Laura Mount, of Windsor, saved the Thanksgiving dinner of the Sherman family, when a big turkey gobbler became crop-bound and seemed to be dying. The women cut an opening in the craw, just in front of one wing, and removed nearly five quarts of grass, twigs, grain and stones. They then cleansed the wound, sewed it up with needle and thread, and the turkey again is putting on weight.

Postponement Likely in Charlton Trial

COMO, Italy, Oct. 16.—In addition to the request of Micell. Picardi, counsel for Porter Charlton the American for a postponement of Charlton's trial on the charge of murdering his wife at Lake Como, Dr. de Dominicis who had been asked to give an opinion regarding the autopsy on the body of the alleged victim, also will ask for a postponement, it was learned today. The expert desires additional time to complete his work.

The trial already has been postponed once, the new date set being October 18. Charlton's attorneys request for additional time to prepare his case was announced yesterday. Charlton's wife was a San Francisco woman.

DIES OF INJURIES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—As the result of an accident at the Southern Pacific Planing Mill at Santa Maria yesterday afternoon Edward Cassidy, 40 years old, died at the Fairmont Hospital this morning. Cassidy suffered severe internal injuries and was brought here on the "coaster," arriving at midnight. He died while the physicians were preparing to operate.

Ferguson to Pardon One Hundred Convicts

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 16.—Governor James E. Ferguson, in Dallas to open the Texas State Fair, said today that he would pardon every one of the 100 friendless convicts now in state prisons, as recommended by the board of pardons yesterday.

"That is my idea of life-saving," the governor said.

The governor added that he would hear the story of every one of the 3500 convicts in Texas prisons, and that if more pardon recommendations were made he would give them clemency also.

SUNDAY MUSEUM LECTURE.

On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock the second illustrated lecture on "The Evolution of Military Tactics" will be given at the University of California Museum of Anthropology at the Affiliated Colleges. The lecture is to begin at 3 o'clock sharp. Mr. Marius Scammell will discuss the "Byzantine Army," comparing it with that of Alexander the Great on one hand and with the armies fighting in the great war on the other. The origin of patrols, scouts, outposts, hospital corps, engineering operations and commissary departments will all be pointed out.

BLEVINS EFFECTS RECONCILIATION

Suit for Separate Maintenance Dismissed on Motion of Wife.

COLUSA, Oct. 16.—Papers of dismissal were received from San Francisco by attorneys for Mrs. Anita P. Blevins, who last month brought suit against her husband, Michael Blevins, wealthy Colusa county rancher, charging extreme cruelty.

Since the hearing on an application for a change of venue, recently, steps had been taken by the parties in the suit to effect a reconciliation. Until the last day or two Mrs. Blevins has been residing with her husband, but has gone to San Francisco for a few days. It is understood Mr. and Mrs. Blevins will take up marital life on the Blevins ranch, where they left off when the suit for separate maintenance was filed. They were married last June.

The suit attracted great attention because of the startling charges made by the wife. Mrs. Blevins charged that her husband refused to discharge Sam Robinson, negro slayer of Richard Lindsay, her husband's nephew, despite fear Robinson would harm her. The negro, who has since been sentenced to hang, attacked Mrs. Blevins before he killed Lindsay. Blevins denied all his wife's assertions, and declared he would prove them untrue at the trial of the case.

After suit was brought, attorneys for both sides indulged in long arguments over an application of Mrs. Blevins for a transfer of the case to San Francisco. Shortly afterward steps toward reconciliation began.

ASSEMBLING MASTODON.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The curators of the National Museum are putting together the bones and fragments of the skeleton of a mastodon found near Winamac, Ind. It was turned up by a steam shovel in constructing a drainage ditch in a swampy deposit on a farm and was donated to the museum by the owner of the farm, with the privilege of making further search if desired. It was decided that further search would yield valuable results.

OFFER REWARD IN $20,000 ROBBERY

Gems Stolen at Exposition Not Recovered After Months of Search.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—After four months of quiet search which has reached to every city and town in the United States, the owners of the $20,000 worth of jewelry and precious stones stolen from the Panama Pacific Exposition on June 19, have authorized a reward for their recovery. The Pinkerton Detective Agency today issued circulars calling for a reward of $400 for information leading to a recovery of the gems.

The police of the Pacific Coast and the authorities of New York and Chicago, chief centers for the disposal of loot, have reported that not a single article from the vast collection stolen has been pledged in pawn shops or as near as known offered for sale to collectors.

On June 19 the exposition was startled when it was discovered that the exhibits in the Varied Industries building conducted by the arts and crafts, had been robbed and 500 separate pieces of jewelry stolen. A shipment from Tiffany's in New York was included in the loot. The jewels consisted of amethysts, aquamarina, pearls, garnets, diamonds, scarabs and jade.

For the most part the gems were set in hand-wrought jewelry and platinum was freely used. There were stickpins and rings. While $20,000 represents the market value of the loot, it is said that collectors would pay much higher if opportunity were offered to obtain some of the antiques. The local police believed a week ago that they had traced down some of the jewels, but the scent proved a false one and in despair the reward was offered in the hope that someone with information might come forward.

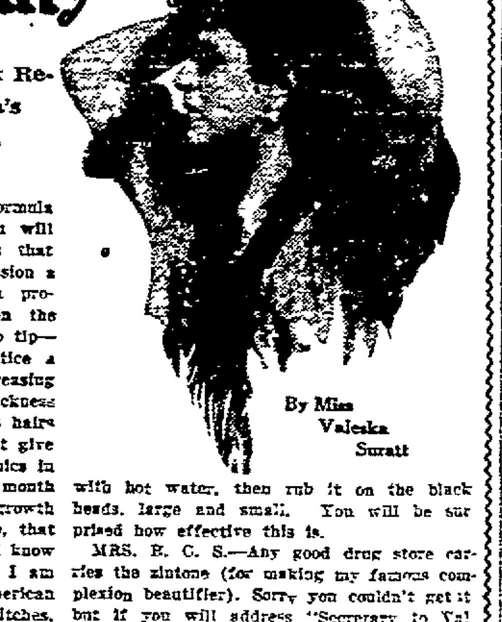

SUSPECT ARRESTED.

Unable to explain how he came to be found in the office of the Pacific Fuel & Building Material company, a man giving the name of Robert Perry was arrested by Officer M. J. Buckley as he came out of the front door.

Forcing Hair To Grow Wonderfully

Beauty Secrets That Give Quick Results, Revealed by America's Self-Made Beauty-Actress, Valeska Suratt.

By Miss Valeska Suratt

I WANT to give you here the formula for a real hair-grower and you will know by actual, visible results that you have at last in your possession a most wonderful article. This formula produces a very pronounced effect upon the entire cell-life of the hair from root to tip—it forces hair to grow. You will notice a startling difference in the fast increasing length of your hair, in the unusual thickness of its growth, and in the new vigorous hairs growing in the thin spots. I would not give up this hair-grower for all the hair tonics in the world. There is no long waiting, month in and month out, for results. The growth becomes glorious and you will find, too, that your hair will very soon stop falling. I know this from my own experience. Today I am known as the only woman on the American stage who does not need to wear switches, puffs and other hair subterfuges.

Here is my formula:

Mix one-half pint each of water and alcohol (or take one pint of imported bay rum if you wish), and add one ounce of beta quinol. It is then ready to use. The beta-quinol can be obtained at the drug store. This should be used liberally every day or so.

MRS. T. G. N.—The weak face creams commonly sold require many months to produce even a partial result. Why not use a mixture you make yourself, that is far more economical, and that gives results in a fraction of the time? The following formula, which I originated, will give you a complexion of exquisite purity, and every blemish, freckle, spot, and all muddiness will quickly vanish:

Mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and one ounce of zintone in a pint of hot water. When cool it is ready to use. Any druggist will supply you with the zintone.

MISS ENGAGED—I would not be guilty of assuring you positively that the bust can be developed. However, there is only one thing to use, and if anything can do it in your case, this formula of mine certainly should. Anything mechanical is liable to cause injury. This formula is safe. Mix half a cup of sugar, two ounces of ruetone and a half pint of hot water. Of this take two teaspoonfuls after meals and at bedtimes. The ruetone can be obtained at any drug store.

EMBARRASSED—I don't wonder you are humiliated. You can get rid of blackheads in a few minutes if you will follow my suggestion below:

Get some powdered neroxin at the drug store and sprinkle it on a sponge made wet with hot water, then rub it on the black heads, large and small. You will be surprised how effective this is.

MRS. B. C. S.—Any good drug store carries the zintone (for making my famous complexion beautifier). Sorry you couldn't get it but if you will address "Secretary to Valeska Suratt, Thompson Building, Chicago," and enclose the price, which is fifty cents my secretary will see that you get it at once.

MRS "AGEY."—I just want you to try my formula for those wrinkles of yours, and a very remarkable return to youthful appearance will be quickly produced. To half a pint of hot water add two ounces of eptol and two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. This forms a cream. Apply regularly every day generously. The eptol can be secured at any drug store. This cream removes light and deep wrinkles, lines of worry, habit and age, and works fast. Don't miss it.

MRS. B. L. R.—You can at once relieve that excessive and unnatural armpit perspiration by the simple use of hydrolized talc. You can obtain this at any drug store. It will at once remove all odor of perspiration and other body odors and prevent the soppy condition under the arms. It will save you from embarrassment and save your garments as well.

MISS FRETTING—I don't use any face powder but my own, made according to my own formula. Being entirely free from chalkiness and extraordinarily fine and smooth, it gives a tint and velvetiness which appears absolutely natural. It is called "Valeska Suratt Face Power," and is sold in many drug and department stores. If you find any difficulty in getting it, write to my secretary as suggested above to Mrs. B. C. S., enclose fifty cents, and ask for white or flesh tint.

MISS HIDEOUS—I was like you,—sick and tired of the superfluous hair removers advertised. I use my own formula, which is really wonderful. To remove hair on any part of the face, arms, shoulders or other part of the body, the best thing is to apply some simple sulfo solution. This has the effect of dissolving away the hair harmlessly, instead of burning it off and leaving a red spot or mark. The simple sulfo solution can be obtained at any drug store. This can be used even on the tenderest skin without the least irritation or danger.

MAKES DIAGNOSIS 500 MILES AWAY

S. F. Doctor Describes Ailment When Wire Contact Is Made.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—For the second time in the world's history a 20-mile diagnosis of disease was made between Los Angeles and San Francisco, when Dr. Albert Abrams, millionaire physician and inventor in San Francisco, made eleven long-distance tests of germs in a Los Angeles office.

Eleven times the disease germs contained in two glass vials and one tiny bit of cancerous tissue, according to the new telio theory, radiated their energy waves over telephone wires from 508 Hollingsworth building, Los Angeles, to the office of the San Francisco man.

Nine times the man in San Francisco, within three seconds of the time that electric connection was made between the disease germs and the telephone, correctly stated the nature of the germs, or whether the connection had been made or broken. Only twice did he make an error.

SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT.

About two weeks ago Dr. Abrams and Dr. James T. Fisher of this city, who is aiding the former in his remarkable experiments, electrified the medical and scientific world by a successful wireless long-distance diagnosis of disease.

Recently Dr. Fisher received a letter from Dr. Abrams asking him to try a similar experiment over long-distance telephone.

"Owing to recent errors in ground transmission I will use the telephone wire," Dr. Abrams wrote. "Connect the different germs with the telephone by wires, and be sure not to allow your finger tips to point directly toward the telephone during the experiment."

Representing Dr. Abrams in the experiment over the telephone was Earl Rogers of San Francisco, a business and mining man. Rogers made the connections with the small electric wires that were linked to the telephone. Dr. Fisher held the telephone receiver to his ear but did not touch it in any other way. Two other witnesses were in the room.

"Hello, Dr. Abrams," was the first remark made over the wire at a distance of 500 miles. "We are ready."

TESTS BEGUN.

Rogers quickly and silently inserted an electric wire into the top of the glass vial which held tuberculosis culture.

Three seconds elapsed.

Then from San Francisco, 500 miles away, came the words:

"Tuberculosis."

The wire was swiftly removed and the voice from the north declared that the connection was broken. The wire was replaced and Dr. Abrams stated so. It was then moved to another culture and the correct diagnosis from San Francisco followed after the elapse of four seconds. The longest time between the connection made in Los Angeles and the diagnosis made in San Francisco was one of ten seconds, when the first connection was made with the cancerous tissue.

SPECIAL MEETING CALLED TO DISCUSS RECLAMATION

Reclamation matters of importance will be thoroughly discussed next Tuesday when a special conference of the San Joaquin and Sacramento River Improvement Associations will be held at Sacramento on the call of President A. E. Anderson. All landholders have been invited to attend. At the meeting the organization will submit questions asking information from the state reclamation board as to the application of provisions of the act passed by the legislature May 27, 1913, which created the board as a state agency for carrying out plans for flood control. The board will also be offered suggestions and will have a representative present to explain its policies.

The Daughters of Isabella will open their winter season by entertaining many of their friends at an open meeting Monday evening in the Knights of Columbus hall. A musical program will be followed by a dansant. The arrangements for the evening have been left in the hands of the following members who are uniting their efforts to make the affair a big success: Miss A. Fitzpatrick, Miss J. Flaherty, Miss A. McDonnell, Miss M. Doyle, Miss M. Feehan, Miss N. Larrigan, Miss G. Brady, Miss M. Waters, Miss M. Berrien and Miss M. Kennedy.

Rural Credits Urged Before Commission

EL CENTRO, Cal., Oct. 16.—Clinton Taylor, a nonresident owner of 320 acres of land in this vicinity, told the members of the commission on rural credits and agricultural finance which met here today that interest charges on loans in Imperial Valley ranged from 10 to 20 per cent and that state aid was highly desirable. Walter E. Packard, manager of the state experimental farm in the valley, said that a man with $2000 could get along, but that with the aid of state credit he could do much better.

The members of the committee who heard testimony here were Harris Weinstock, State Senator William E. Brown, Dean David P. Barrows of the University of California and Elwood Mead.

Fairall Death Caused by Toxic Poisoning

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—Charles H. Fairall, chief counsel for Matthew A. Schmidt in the Times dynamiting trial, now in progress, died from toxic poisoning, the effect of cirrhosis of the liver, according to one of the surgeons who performed an autopsy today. Mr. Fairall's death yesterday, following an illness of 48 hours, caused his widow, who arrived from San Francisco this morning, to order an autopsy. The body will be cremated here. Arrangements for a funeral ceremony have not been completed.

Y. W. C. A. VESPER SPEAKER.

Miss Grace Ruth Southwick of the Exposition Young Women's Christian Association, will speak on the "Meaning of the Court of the Ages" at the 5:30 o'clock vesper service Sunday, October 17, at the Y. W. C. A. building, 1515 Webster street. Mr. Harry B. Hooper will furnish the special music.

SENTENCED TO FOUR YEARS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Hiram Keith was given four years in Folsom penitentiary today by Superior Judge Griffin for stealing an automobile belonging to E. Mulford of 45 Kearny street. He was arrested at Reno.

NO TREAT ORDER MADE IN ENGLAND

No Man May Buy Another a Drink in London Under New Ruling.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—"At a meeting of the Privy Council at Buckingham Palace, recently, the king signed an order applying the regulations respecting the sale of liquor in the districts of the metropolitan area."

This rather cryptic announcement, appearing in black-faced type in London papers, meant that the long expected "no treating" order is now in operation throughout the greater city and that a great change must be made in the social habits of the people.

Though designed mainly to check the custom of providing free liquors to soldiers from the front—especially those who are about to depart again for the trenches—the order, nevertheless, is applicable to everybody, and its violation will bring upon the offender heavy fine or imprisonment, or both. Hereafter, except in the privacy of the home, the Londoner may not share a bottle or half bottle with a friend. There is but one exception, and that is at meal times. Then a host may provide liquor. But in all saloons, hotels and clubs the words, "What will you have?" are taboo.

Even the exclusive army clubs are affected, and members are asking many questions. For example:

Can drinks be ordered to seal a compact, or for a toast?

Can a glass accidentally upset be refilled?

Saloon-keepers are very doleful over the outlook. They say that, with treating barred, the whole atmosphere of the saloon will be changed. Few men, it is argued, like to drink alone, and a tremendous slump in trade is predicted.

RAISES LEGAL POINT.

What constitutes a meal with which one man may buy drink for his friend will doubtless have to be defined by the courts. Whether a meal will consist of the antiquated sandwich, so familiar in the United States, remains to be seen. There is, of course, the parent subterfuge by which one man may give the person he wishes to treat the amount required before they enter the saloon; but this would be cumbersome, commercial and hardly popular.

Police regulations, it is said on good authority, are about to be issued, closing all night clubs in London during the entire period of the war. If this reform takes place, it will come as a result of a protest by military authorities that the "night club evil" has turned what ought to be a period of rest and recuperation for officers on leave from the front, into a prolonged debauch which leaves the men in a worse condition than when they came across from the trenches. It is commonly known that in most of the night clubs evasion of the 10 o'clock law has been developed to a fine art, and that drinks can be easily obtained at all hours of the day and night.

"I am in favor of closing down all night clubs for the duration of the war," said Lord Ardmillan, provost marshal. "Naturally enough in our supervision we rarely arrest civilians. We must visit them in uniform, and it is almost impossible to effect a real surprise. As for the disreputable night clubs, they have an army of scouts. They watch and report our movements and a club almost invariably knows in advance when we may be expected.

"They all look as innocent as tame doves when we appear. We have no desire whatever that liquor is obtainable at many night clubs, and that is quite another matter from going into a witness box and swearing to specific instances. While we are given supervision of these places, we have no powers to do anything except through the courts. The only satisfactory remedy is to close them all down as long as the war lasts."

20,000 Refugees of Turkey Reach Tabriz

NEW YORK, Oct. 16. — Twenty thousand additional destitute mountaineers of Eastern Turkey have reached Tabriz, Persia, according to a message received here today by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. Previous messages stated that 60,000 refugees from Eastern Turkey had reached Tabriz. Of the 80,000 refugees more than half are said to be Armenians.

The missionary authorities stated that these messages indicated that the Armenians and other Christians of Eastern Turkey are rapidly being driven out by the Turks.

ANNIVERSARY SALE

Tomorrow We Begin

Our 26th Anniversary

It is an occasion of very large interest to us from sentimental and practical reasons. It marks the day when we look back upon our own successful efforts and our City's loyal support of our store; but it more particularly causes us to look forward with renewed determination to make this store more worthy of its important position of service to the people of our community and the country round about.

It is one of the principles of our business to recognize the position of responsibility in which we are placed by being the owners of an institution that lives and succeeds in proportion to its usefulness to the public. We know that we must be good servants. We must win your approbation in little things as well as in big things and we are quite as anxious to be useful to our patrons when doing some small service, or supplying some article of small cost regardless of the profit, and doing the service promptly, courteously and helpfully, as a demonstration of our usefulness to our public.

We cordially thank the ever increasing number of friends who have contributed so much to the success we have so far achieved, and we take this opportunity to express our determination to make our store much more worthy of your patronage in the future than it has ever been in the past.

We cannot expect the public to take the same sentimental interest in this week's celebration as we do ourselves, and for this reason we have been making preparations for several months to provide many intrinsic reasons to cause large public interest in

and Its Surpassing Achievements

The House of CAPWELLS was founded in 1889, and in a spirit of enthusiasm for its great success we hold Anniversary Sales. The paramount idea of this sale is value-giving, and we select from our stocks many seasonable items of merchandise and give them to you at a saving during the celebration of this Birthday Anniversary. We decorate our store in gala colors and the birthday spirit of joy and good fellowship reigns supreme throughout the store.

Our Buying Organization Was Keyed Up to the Highest Pitch

They have put forth strong efforts to get special price concessions on things that are new and seasonable—things that we know you want right now. In many instances manufacturers have generously co-operated with us. It was their birthday present to us which we fully appreciate, because it aids in giving greater concessions to you than we could otherwise have done during this war time period when special price concessions are hard to obtain.

The Whole Store, Including the Bargain Basement, Participates

Monday and on successive days we will give you detailed items, but come tomorrow and look for the Buff Colored Tickets. Each of them designates an extraordinary bargain. Be sure to visit every department in the store from the Third Floor to the Basement.

A Priceless Advertisement

We are not mentioning prices in this advertisement, because it would be impossible to describe all the special lots of merchandise in this sale.

We want every man and woman who has ever visited this store and everyone who has not visited it (if any there be) to come this week and join us in the celebration of the completion of 26 years of progress and successful merchandising

Five Jubilee Days-- in which the Birthday Table is spread for a happy gathering of CAPWELL store friends. We shall be more than glad to be your hosts on this occasion.

The Knave

SAN FRANCISCO READY TO BITE TOO EAGERLY

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—To the innocent bystander it looks as if this city were getting ready to bite off more than she can chew and as the aforesaid bystander is the man who pays the bills in the shape of taxes it benooves him to sit up and take notice.

It seems as if the city hall were stuffed with ambitious statesmen, all of them nursing pet schemes and eager for a share of the pork which is not at all the same thing as graft but costs more. There is, for example, our genial and enterprising city engineer, one of the many O'Shaughnessys, who wants to build an elevated railroad up Market street as the easiest way to open access for the municipal street railway system to the Twin Peaks tunnel. and at the same time relieve the congestion of the main thoroughfare.

There is congestion of traffic on Market street, but it is purely artificial and is due to the installation of four parallel railway tracks on one thoroughfare. With a unified system the traffic could be efficiently handled on two lines of rails and the danger to pedestrians crossing the street and other traffic would be greatly lessened. But an elevated road, costing $800,000 a mile, would at least make room for one of our municipal white elephants and incidentally would come pretty near putting the United Railroads out of business. An elevated road on Market street would cost something like $3,000,000 if the innocent bystander could be persuaded to find the money.

Then there is Supervisor Aleck Vogelsang, the smart singer of municipal politics and a good man weighing many pounds, who wants to amputate the Golden Gate Park through the middle with a slot thirty or forty feet deep and broader to accommodate a sunken trolley road that nobody wants except certain real estate speculators. Vogelsang is quite sincere in the matter, but he is ambitious to have his name go down to posterity as the first cousin at least of the municipal railway systems.

All these things cost a lot of money. but because the Geary street railway and the temporary exposition traffic have built up a moderate surplus for the municipal street railway fund the city hall believes that prosperity must attend on extensions no matter where made. Just imagine, the cost of making a deep excavation two miles long through the center of the park, where nobody lives and no traffic would be obtainable. But there is a fat slice of honest pork in the scheme for somebody.

These perhaps are the minor attractions of municipal politics and they serve their little best in the steady business of building the city political machine. There is a solid phalanx of some 2000 men earning $3 a day whose jobs are dependent on the good will of the city administration and in the recent campaign they knew on what side their bread was buttered. Indeed some of them were so superserviceable that they suggested a ridiculous movement to recall City Attorney Long on a mere hint that Rolph disapproved Long's tactics in fighting the street railway injunction suit. Of course, Rolph saw that this would never do and he bade the men keep quiet and behave. They did.

Of such is the vaudeville of politics and the city could stand it if that were all, but the water supply matter is more serious and threatens to involve municipal bankruptcy if some degree of sanity is not attained in its settlement. As matters stand today the city is attempting to buy two water supply systems, one to cost at least $30,000,000 and the other $50,000,000, or perhaps more. It is conceded that sooner or later we must buy the Spring Valley plant and in the meantime we are actively at work on the Hetch Hetchy project in a fashion that looks like a shotgun held at the head of Spring Valley.

These are not very reputable tactics, but a city has no conscience and small sense of honor. Possibly in this respect it is a stand-off with Spring Valley and, in fact, that institution is already reported in a more reasonable frame of mind and is ready to accept arbitration before some impartial expert to fix the price of the plant.

Passing of the Indoor Yacht Club

There is one institution that passed out, politically, at the late primary—that is Jimmy Coffroth's Indoor Yacht Club. Through some obsession this rather peculiar social concern became possessed with the idea that it was a political authority in the community. One of its leading lights is "Mission" Doctor Jones, who fought so hard for Schmitz and is such a bitter enemy of Rolph. He and a small-fry lawyer who has a family connection with the district attorney's office and lives on the drippings of Chinatown practice, and Coffroth virtually constitute the board of management. They concluded that this year offered the chance to put all leaders and bosses, other than themselves, out of the running. They concentrated on "Hansome" Billy McCarthy for assessor and Ralph McLeran for sheriff and went into battle. There was very much quiet amusement and some laughter over the form of campaign. It was concluded that if the cafes and the tenderloin could be united, the rest of the people didn't count. But, all the time, the rest were counting—the days until election—with the deliberate purpose of putting the Indoor Yacht Club entirely out of business, as its interference with politics was generally resented. The result told the story. Politically, the Indoor Yacht Club is dead and buried and crepe hangs on the door.

Mayor Rolph and Supervisor Kortick

Mayor Rolph, much to the disturbance of his friends, since election has acquired the interview habit. Contrary to his practice of the previous four years—which was very successful—he will give forth a pronunciamento about almost anything. Thus, the newspaper men have succeeded in committing him to the election of Supervisor Kortick, who was appointed to a vacancy on the Board of Supervisors during Rolph's term, and was up for election at the late primary. Kortick just managed to qualify—the lowest man on the ticket, that is number eighteen, as there are nine to be elected from eighteen running. The municipal conference, which selected nine men, all of whom qualified, and which worked very hard for Rolph's election, wished the mayor to drop Kortick, as nobody thinks he can be elected. Despite this, however, Rolph has declared for this one man, first, last and all the time. The objection of the public to Kortick is that he went before the Gallagher labor convention and, as stated by all the labor nominees and Gallagher, pledged himself to support that worthy for mayor, regardless of who else was running; that after the candidacy of Rolph he promptly trimmed. This offended the labor people and did not get him the support of the other people. In other words, he didn't hedge in the right way. Instead of getting both sides he got neither. However, his candidacy, with the mayor's support, is likely to have a very serious result. It is most likely to split the vote in such proportions that the Gallagher men will get control of the board and be able to obstruct the entire Rolph administration in constructive work.

Watsonville, Political Center

The appointment of Ed White of Watsonville, brother of the late Senator Stephen M. White, and third in the race of last year's primary for the nomination of governor, as commissioner of immigration, has astonished the Democracy of California. Not because White is not a good man—he is. But it draws attention to the fact that the Wilson administration seems to have determined that Watsonville and environs constitute the political hub of the western States. No district of this population in America has received half the political recognition. San Francisco and Los Angeles are not in the race. Watsonville, Hollister and surrounding places have less than 2000 votes. The immigration commissionership is one of the finest federal plums. White of Watsonville gets it. The United States marshalship at San Francisco is the largest and most important office of that kind west of Chicago. Jimmy Holohan of Watsonville got it. The little village of Hollister, a few miles away from Watsonville, which acts in conjunction, always with the political importances of that place, received, first, the federal judgeship, it going to Maurice T. Dooling. Then J. O. Davis, collector of the port of San Francisco. True, J. O. Davis technically belonged to Alameda county, he having recently registered there. However, he had spent his life at Hollister, his term as assemblyman from that county having shortly before expired and he was actually one of the Hollister coterie of politicians. This makes the most extraordinary political gift of federal patronage to one little community of which there is any record. San Francisco with its 180,000 registration, and Los Angeles county with more than 200,000, must take back seats. They may be somewhere on the map when it comes to voting, but the powers-that-be do not know it. This situation reminds us of a remark made by Gavin McNab to the last Democratic governor of California. James H. Budd, after that worthy had been a year in office, as to the political subdivisions of California Democracy, Budd, it being remembered, coming from Stockton.

Said McNab to him in a discussion: "Yes, this is the division of the Democracy; San Francisco furnishes the votes, Alameda furnishes the leader and Stockton gets the offices." However, hats off and three cheers for Watsonville.

The Translation of Dinan

The town's sense of humor is hugely tickled by the order sending out Jerry Dinan to find holes in a Swiss cheese fog. Nobody loves a fat man and therefore if you are a policeman look not on the corned beef and cabbage when it is red in the face. Dinan is the horrible example for political demonstration in the police force. Once he was chief of police under Eugene Schmitz and he has been on the department toboggan ever since. First off the stepdown transformer dropped him from chief to detective sergeant. Then they took away his title or part of it, but he still worked for the "upper office." Now they have dropped him down to be a common "harness bull," pounding a beat somewhere out west among the sand dunes and the goats.

Of course Dinan was for Schmitz in the recent campaign. He could not well be otherwise considering his obligations to the former mayor. But equally, of course, he serves admirably as the horrible example for the political evil doers on the force, and so he is demoted to make a San Francisco holiday.

"Go west, old man," is the sentence of the police commission taking on an air of tardy activity. The police limbo is out there on the verge of a melancholy ocean where the fogs roll in and it is considered significant that Dinan on his new beat will be under the direct command of Captain Mooney, with whom he had wordy differences in a former state of existence. Mooney is himself undergoing penance of the same sort because he talked too much and outraged the official proprieties when he was captain of detectives by intimating that Mayor Rolph was using his influence to put men on the detective detail.

The translation of Dinan is merely spectacular. Nothing is done or proposed to be done in the way of discipline for the patrolmen and the captains who permit gambling to be carried on under their noses.

Cousin to the Mule

Transportation men in convention here profess not to fear the competition of the jitney bus and they intimate that any sort of reasonable regulation puts most of them out of business. But how if they are permitted to run wild as in this city? They are as big a nuisance and source of danger on Market street as they ever were and this condition is likely to continue owing to the street plan of San Francisco, which makes every thoroughfare a subsidiary feeder for the main stem. We ought to have three streets like Market radiating fan-wise from the ferry house.

It is the fact that there is a great deal of politics in the treatment of jitney regulation by state and local governing bodies hereabouts. Our supervisors handle the matter in a very gingerly fashion, keeping an eye peeled for the very considerable jitney vote, which is thoroughly organized. Then the railroad commission declares it is not the busman's keeper and washes its hands of the whole business, so that we find the jitney is a political orphan like the government mule with neither pride of ancestry nor hope of posterity.

Clocks on Their Stockings

Mrs. Sally Jones, school director and former school principal, is a noted character in the civic life of this city, distinguished by her habit of speaking out her mind in a somewhat vigorous fashion. She strongly deprecates the invading flood of snobbery and class distinctions in the schools, and to that end she would prohibit assessments levied for entertainments given by the children. The practice has become a heavy burden on the children of poor parents and their consequent inability to contribute puts them outside the social pale.

A kindred matter brought to the attention of Director Jones by a delegation of mothers is the practice of some high school girls of conducting a sort of competition-in gay and illuminated silk stockings with a generous display thereof, staring as it were the less fortunate girls out of countenance and perhaps causing the blush of shame to mantle vicariously on the cheek of innocence. The girls who cannot afford to buy such costly gear are seriously embarrassed by the display. The girls' high school was not meant for a fashion show.

Now Miss Jones, while she agreed as to the unseemly character of such displays as a feature of school life, told the mothers plainly that this was a matter for the mothers themselves to regulate. If a mother sends her daughter to school with red clocks on her green stockings it is not the function of the school department to prescribe a more appropriate color scheme.

In these matters it has been the habit of lovely woman, adolescent or mature, to go her own sweet way quite regardless of critical opinion, which she no doubt considers immaterial and irrelevant as well as impertinent. Outside of a Turkish harem she makes her own sumptuary laws and flouts the impertinent meddling of mere man. I think it was good old Senator Birdsall of Placer who tried to persuade the legislature of California that this learned body should solemnly proceed to prescribe some sort of tame uniform to be worn by all the high school girls in the state. The senator's proposition was received with gusts of inextinguishable laughter.

Imagine the collective wisdom of California in the legislature assembled or in the board of education calmly sitting down to prescribe the fashion for girls in their teens, reading quotations from the Ladies' Home Journal into the minutes and providing that the wearing of clocks on their stockings should be accounted a misdemeanor.

Small Business

The refusal of our chamber of commerce to renew its subscription or subsidy in aid of the Tourist Association of Central California is rather small business and altogether short sighted. This association is an active agency of promotion and publicity organized in the interest of the ten counties nearest to the Bay of San Francisco, and it has been doing effective work in this relation. Now the San Francisco chamber of commerce has refused to put up any more money on the ground that it does not handle the funds. In view of the importance of the movement this appears to be a silly excuse. If there is ground for belief that the funds have been wasted or misapplied, why then the chamber should come out with it and not seek shelter behind an untenable position. The situation is so clear that the chamber must eventually back down.

Sold Too Soon

The astonishing rise in the market value of the powder stocks and the vast profits arising from the sale of war material makes the late stockholders of the Giant Powder Company vastly disgusted with themselves. The Giant was the only independent powder company of any consequence in this state. All the others had been absorbed by the big three, the Dupont, the Atlas and the Hercules. The Giant was a strong concern making money and paying good dividends, but early in the year before the present prosperity of the powder trade had developed Charles Sutro, the stockbroker of this city, began buying Giant stock at prices around $110. In view of later developments the stock was intrinsically worth a great deal more, but after a short campaign it was announced that Atlas had acquired control. Now Atlas is selling around $252, Hercules at $423 and Dupont at $352. The latter price figures out about $805 a share for the old Dupont common.

The Giant Company had a rather interesting history. At one time it had a monopoly of the manufacture of dynamite in America. This monopoly was acquired by purchase of the famous Nobel patent rights, but these rights were destroyed by a decision given by the late Justice Stephen J. Field of the United States Supreme Court, who held that the patent was invalid because it attempted to cover too much.

Just a Phase of New Thought

Irving Martin, editor of the Stockton Record, tells the Rural Credits Commission that if the state is to lend money to farmers he can see no reason why the same kind of help should not be extended to the small miner and the small manufacturer. If the state is to be conducted as an eleemosynary institution he can understand that there may be other worthy objects of public relief besides the farmer. I don't quite know whether Editor Martin was serious or was merely sharpening his wit at the expense of a commission which offers a generous hospitality to the new and strange.

Colonel Harris Weinstock, who is president of the commission, asked George W. Leistner, president of the Stockton chamber of commerce, to say what he thought of a plan to have the state establish a fund of $3,000,000 to buy large tracts of land, cut them up in small parcels and sell them at cost plus improvements giving the buyers long time to pay off.

"It would be highly beneficial," was Leistner's reply. "I have no objection," he continued, "to the state going into the real estate business."

Chester Rowell brags that here is a useful commission at least that costs the state nothing for salaries—that is to say a mere nothing of $5000 for expenses—but like other commissions of the same sort it is laying the foundation for another bureau expensively equipped and officered to engage in real estate speculation and lend public money on rutabagas.

Geography of Hospitality

In this exposition year I think I may say that San Francisco, Oakland and the bay cities generally have generously maintained the California reputation and tradition for hospitality. Our relatives, rich and poor, have come flocking in upon us and we have fairly sustained the onslaught, a little disfigured but still in the ring. An eastern friend visiting here outlined for my benefit the geography of hospitality in this fashion.

"If you go to San Francisco and meet a friend he will ask you to stay a week with him. In Omaha he will take you home overnight. In Chicago he will take you out to dinner. In New York he will hurry you off to luncheon. In New Haven he will hand you a good cigar. In Boston he will give you an apple."

A Lovely Gamble

There is a big gamble in beet sugar stocks and it practically amounts to betting on the action of Congress. If the national legislature should decide to continue the duty on sugar that protection will make the best manufacturing business highly profitable. With a duty of one cent a pound the beet sugar men can make money but under a free sugar regime they would have to go out of business.

Now the speculators are consulting the political wiseacres as to the probable course of Congress in this relation, and they are told that the prospects are favorable but are warned that it is ill betting on politics. So the future of this important industry is wrapped up in an artificial fog.

THE KNAVE.

SOCIETY By Suzette

THE social season is here. People have returned from the country, all the leading town houses are again open. The social probabilities are more promising this winter than they were last, for the phantom of Hard Times is gradually disappearing. Life might, in a sense, move on to the old darkey rhythm, "Hard Times Come Again No More."

It makes people of the smart sets only the more energetic in their work. They will probably never again dissipate so much energy in just ordinary frivolity. It is quite as a modern writer expresses it:

"Out of the general unrest of the last year, new ideals, new democratic ideas have arisen. There is a throb of patriotism and a feeling of security back of the national life which are bound to show themselves during the winter.

"The warning on preparedness has already been heard by the social ranks, and men and women of prominence are lending aid to the movement of national defense. They are realizing now that they have been, as John Galsworthy puts it, 'like an old tom cat by the fire, too jolly comfortable for anything.'"

One is reminded, too, of the Scotchman's dog, who used to lie at his master's feet, before a fine warm fire, and from the depths of his comfort, blink lazily at his master and say, "Life is full of saiiousness!"

New York is said to be facing "a shortage in debutantes," and that spectacle is a dismal one, for the entertainments for the buds make up a social round that lasts well into December.

The debutantes themselves are no longer very keen about this, their first winter. There really is no entertaining which gives rise to more hard feeling, for it is considered necessary to have the house packed with guests in order that the entertainment may be considered a success, and it is a most difficult thing to secure the attendance of enough smart people to ensure a brilliant social crowd. "Unfortunately old friends of the family do not always appeal to the debutantes, but this form of introduction to society is too well established to be done away with altogether.

But the debutantes of last year are looking forward to their second winter with a young enthusiasm that is charming. And they are not now obliged to accept any and every invitation simply because it is desirable. In the world of the smart set, it is the weddings which everyone will try to make more interesting this season. "It is extraordinary how many innovations can now be noted in these entertainments. Originality is eagerly sought for and generally found, whether merely in the menu or the music, or the dancing, which is now a part of every entertainment, and which prevents the rather dull and dreary gathering together of the clans and relatives who are never collected together save at weddings and funerals. This part of a wedding, which was always dreaded, is now quite done away with by the number of invitations sent out, as well as by dancing, for there is now no need whatever of paying the slightest attention to any one in particular."

But after all, that is a very selfish way to look at life.

"Week-ending" has come to be as much an institution in America, as it is in England, and dates are booked far in advance. And there are many homes in which guests are invited to spend from a week to a fortnight. People will sometimes take a whole day's journey, just for a week-end in a friend's home.

It remains to be seen what the dancing fad will be during the approaching season. The time is ripe for something new, and society is puzzling its brain to find something original. Quadrilles have been announced for a forthcoming entertainment in December. Perhaps the old-fashioned dances will come to the fore—such as the quadrille, the schottische, and the polka.

The spirit of the Greek dances entered largely into the dances of the summer, but it is evident that the day of the exhibition dance is about over.

PRESIDENT'S FIANCEE IS POCHOHONTAS DESCENDANT.

The activities of prominent women of the smart set are of unusual interest in these early days of the season. And heading the list of interesting women in the social limelight is Mrs. Norman Galt, whose engagement to the President of the United States was an announcement of a few days ago, an announcement which "sent a wave of sentiment around the world and caused as much surprise and kindly comment in the palaces and castles of the Old World as it did at the hearthstone of every mansion and cottage in this country." For human interest is universal, and genuine sympathy is an inheritance sent to the lowly as well as to those in high stations. One is hearing many interesting things concerning Mrs. Galt, who is a member of that Bolling family which goes back to Colonial days. She is ninth in line from the Indian Princess Pocahontas, of the well-known tribe of the Algonquins. It is said that many of the provident families of Virginia trace somewhere in their descent a relationship to Pocahontas.

In the gossip of the day from Washington, come many interesting details full of a human interest that carries its own appeal.

Mrs. Galt has a great deal of money, nevertheless her home in one of the aristocratic sections of Washington is along simple lines. But it has been noted for years for its charming appointments and homelike atmosphere. The French drawingroom is very dainty indeed. Like Miss Margaret Wilson, Mrs. Galt is an accomplished musician, with the piano as her favorite instrument. She is also deeply interested in the serious things of life, with the same intellectual tastes and appreciation of simple living, that have always characterized the women of the President's family.

The clothes a woman wears are often very indicative of her character. At Cornish last summer, Mrs. Galt invariably wore white tailored skirts and soft blouses for the morning, white silk, sometimes white chiffon for evening, with any number of charming white muslins for in between. All through the spring season she was noticed to wear a corsage bouquet of violets, but since her return from Cornish, orchids, now known to be the choicest blooms of the White House conservatories, have succeeded the violets.

A white serge, tailored suit on new smart lines, with the jacket decorated in military fashion in white silk braid, is one of the favorite costumes in which the future mistress of the White House is to be seen almost any pleasant afternoon. With this Mrs. Galt wears white kid low shoes, white silk hosiery, and a small black velvet hat.

In New York last week at the great ball game, Mrs. Galt wore a black broadcloth gown and a corsage bouquet of brilliant orchids which the President had bought for her. Her hat was of black velvet, trimmed with fur and a feather, and her coat was of green velvet with a fur collar.

The Boilings and Mrs. Galt have never mingled much in the official life of the capital. They have seen administrations come and go, while they have gathered about them the circle of clever, cultured men and women of the resident sets which make up the prominent population of the District of Columbia.

One hears that the wedding of President Wilson and Mrs. Galt will take place in December, at the home of the bride in Dupont Circle, Washington.

TEUTONIC ABILITIES OF MRS. BALDWIN.

A woman coming rapidly to the foreground in the social affairs of California, is Mrs. Anita Baldwin, who is to build a magnificent mansion at Lake Tahoe. She is now the owner of the Santa Anita ranch, fifteen miles east of Los Angeles. She has named her home Anoakia, and as an ideal home it is rapidly obtaining renown throughout the West.

Mrs. Baldwin has paid special attention to the lighting effects in her home. On the large uncovered veranda of Anoakia, there are single lights of unusual designs.

Mrs. Baldwin has selected one of nature's richest settings for the background of her home. Anoakia, of magnificent Grecian architecture, stands in the center of a fifteen-acre plot under the Sierras, with a mountain growing out of the back yard. Surrounded by a clump of trees on the west side of the house is an open plunge completely furnished with lockers, showers and other conveniences.

One of the novel features of this electrified home is the fumeless, odorless kitchenette, where a fully equipped electric range and other appliances help to solve the servant problem.

One of the finest yachts which in many months was anchored in San Francisco bay was that of Mrs. Baldwin. It was only surpassed by that of Vincent Astor, which brought its owner to visit the Exposition.

MRS. CROCKER PLANS A NOTABLE CHARITY.

Mrs. William H. Crocker is coming again to the foreground of charitable endeavor and she again is planning for the Polish relief fund. Many of her friends are interested with her, and they have sent East to Madame Paderewski, for the collection of dolls she is exhibiting in the Aeolian building in New York. The dolls have been designed by the best Polish artists and are said to be very fascinating and picturesque. In New York great assistance was given to this exhibition by Miss Anne Morgan and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander.

LAVISH HOSPITALITY FOR P. P. I. E. VISITORS.

The leading members of the Woman's Board continue to be very active in their plans for the entertainment of visitors.

Last week Mrs. Hearst entertained at a barbecue luncheon at the Hacienda, the members of the American Prison association who assembled in Oakland. Four hundred guests accepted Mrs. Hearst's invitation, and a special train on the Western Pacific was provided by Mrs. Hearst for their transportation.

A very elaborate luncheon was served at the Hacienda on the arrival of the guests, and part of the afternoon was spent on the beautiful grounds. The guests arrived in Oakland at six o'clock, having spent an unusual day, one of unalloyed enjoyment.

Every member of the Woman's Board will Miss Mrs. Gaillard Stoney, whose sweet, sunny, well bred ways have meant so much in the administration of the affairs of the Woman's Board. Mrs. Stoney has gone East, chaperoning the young girls who will bear the petition to President Wilson, that he come to us in December, on his wedding trip.

Of course Mrs. Stoney will meet Mrs. Galt, and they are sure to be friends, for both have the poise and dignity, the genuine good manners characteristic of well bred women of the world.

One of the vice-presidents of the Woman's Board is Mrs. I. Lowenberg, and she is an indefatigable hostess in these Exposition months. Almost every week, Mrs. Lowenberg gives a large luncheon, entertaining twenty guests at a time, and many of the state and foreign hostesses have enjoyed her hospitality.

Mrs. Philip E. Bowles has also been a most generous hostess. Members of the Woman's Board and eastern visitors have often been her guests at "The Pines," and elaborate affairs have been planned for them.

One of the most popular of the hostesses across the bay has been Mrs. William Bailey Lamar, the wife of Judge Lamar, who represents the federal government. She has charming manners, and a great deal of tact, and tact has not always been characteristic of the hostesses of the many buildings at the Fair.

Mrs. Hearst has entertained so extensively this year, that it is fitting that she herself should be a guest of honor, and the luncheon Mrs. Lamar gave for her was very timely indeed. For the first time this season chrysanthemums were used in a luncheon decoration. The luncheon was given at the Fairmont, and the guests were seated at an oval-shaped table. The centerpiece was a superb basket of chrysanthemums, the basket being in brown, and autumn leaves in brown, making an appropriate color scheme for the season.

Among the guests from Burlingame were: Mrs. Francis Carolan, Mrs. Francis B. Loomis, Mrs. William H. Crocker, Mrs. Frederick Kohl and Mrs. George Cameron. Oakland was represented by Mrs. Philip E. Bowles, and one of the representative guests was Mrs. De Witt Talmage of Washington, D. C. Mrs. Dixwell Hewitt, formerly Miss Kate Clement of this city, was very stunning indeed, and an ever welcome guest is Mrs. Eleanor Martin. Seated at the table were twenty-one guests, who greatly enjoyed the delightful luncheon hour with an exceptionally interesting hostess.

HOSPITAL BAZAAR IN SOCIETY FOREGROUND.

In the foreground of social events for the week has been the Baby Hospital bazaar, which has absorbed the attention of many the greater part of the week. Many prominent young matrons have devoted weeks to the preparations incidental to the big bazaar, and the results this week certainly testified to their good work. The great auditorium assembly hall was very gay indeed, with hundreds of flags, with palms, with evergreens, with miniature plants, and with Japanese lanterns, that are always so colorful and so suggestive of gayety. The bright young matrons vied with each other in making the booths attractive, and altogether the Auditorium presented a picture, well planned, and attractive in the extreme.

The Constabulary band from the Exposition contributed the music for the dancing at the ball which closed the bazaar last evening, and among the dancers were: Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McDuffie, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hamilton Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farr, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sharon, Mr. and Mrs. Wigginton Creed, Miss Pussy Creed, Miss Marjorie Mhoon, Miss Lilla Lovell, Miss Phyllis Lovell, Miss Dorothy Capwell, Miss Aliene Edoff, Mr. Frank Edoff, Mr. and Mrs. James Tyson, Mr. Clarence Creed, Mr. William Creed, Miss Marie Louise Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. William Ede, Mr. and Mrs. Burr Eastwood, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Searles, Dr. and Mrs. John D. Grissim, Mr. and Mrs. Granville Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson Cushing, Miss Carmen Ghirardelli, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Norris, Mr. Jack Norris, Miss Esther Sharon, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Bonestell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lovell, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newell, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sutro, Mr. and Mrs. James K. Moffitt, Mr. Roger Hayne, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Engs, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Carlston, Mr. and Mrs. William Knowles, Miss Edith Goodfellow, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wingate, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bell Wakefield, Miss Genevieve Fore, Miss Natalie Fore, Miss Cleo Posey, Miss Marjorie Coogan, Miss Helen Downey.

The Baby Hospital bazaar will realize a generous sum, and the young matrons must indeed feel well repaid for their hard work of the past few months.

CARD PARTIES OCCUPY PLACES IN CALENDAR.

For the coming week several large card parties are being planned, and bridge players report much progress in their understanding of the game. It is played altogether now by the new rules, and no longer does one hear such terms as "royals" or "lilies."

But there seems to be always "a last word" in auction, even though one seems to have exhausted original bids, take outs, and shifts. And this time the last word strangely enough concerns itself with the silence of one's partner, the most difficult of the many auction problems.

There are two situations in which the partner may have nothing to say. An eastern expert analyzes the situation:

"He may have nothing to say as an original declaration, when his partner has yet to speak. That is the first situation. He may have nothing to say when it comes to his turn after his partner has made a declaration of some kind which has been overcalled. That is the second situation.

"He may have nothing worth declaring in his hand in either situation. That is the first reason for silence. He may be very well satisfied with the declaration made by his opponents. That is the second reason.

"It would be hard to say which is the more difficult situation to handle, or the one in which the most mistakes are made: the original silence or the silence that comes as an answer. The rule adopted by the best players seems to be to credit the original silence with not more than two scattered tricks, and to accept an answering silence as a warning."

Card meetings are scheduled for this month by the Cosmos club, the Monday club, the Thursday club, and by the many smaller clubs, which meet informally at the homes of the members.

"MILITARY" DINNER AT FORT MASON.

Major General and Mrs. Murray were among the dinner hosts of the week, entertaining sixty guests in their Fort Mason home. Among their guests were Mrs. Hearst, Senator Phelan, Judge and Mrs. Lamar, Mayor and Mrs. Rolph, and Mirza Ali Kuli Khan and Mrs. Khan of Piedmont.

SUZETTE.

PLANS FOR BALL.

The West Oakland Home ball at the Hotel Oakland on Friday evening, October 29, will have several interesting surprises for the guests, one of these will be the "mystery dance," in which the dancers, well known society girls, will wear small fancy masks that are lifted at the end of the dance, when the fair wearers have time to guess their identity. There will also be a "mystery cake," or "surprise dance," in which the winners will be awarded a box of bonbons. The board of managers of the West Oakland Home, who are planning the ball are: Mrs. A. M. Beebe, Mrs. L. A. Redman, Mrs. G. H. Brast, Mrs. L. J. Manning, Mrs. W. A. Sykes, Mrs. H. J. Hayes, Mrs. H. P. Stow, Mrs. S. W. Ferguson, Mrs. S. F. James, Mrs. M. K. Hughes, Mrs. Mina Gleason and Miss Inez Murray.

ELMHURST WEDDING.

At an impressive ceremony in Elmhurst Presbyterian church last Wednesday evening, Miss Maude Louise Gerrier, daughter of the pastor of the church, was married to Mr. Eugene Alonzo Byer. Rev. J. P. Gerrior assisted the bride's father with the ceremony, the latter reading the marriage service after leading the bride to the altar. Her mother was near the bridal party during the ceremony.

The bride wore a white silk gown and tulle veil and was attended by her sister, Miss Elsie Gerrior, and Miss Florence Hurd. Virgil Byer was best man. Preceding the ceremony the Lockwood school orchestra rendered selections. The church had been arranged as a large reception room with seats moved to the sides, and just before the bridal party entered a procession of twenty-six young girls, gowned in white, entered, singing the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," and formed an aisle of flower garlands. Two little flower girls, Hazel Vincent and Evlyn Sonneborn, preceded the bride. A feature of the ceremony was the singing of "When to Thy Vision," from "Faust," by the venerable singer, Mrs. Blake-Alverson.

The bride has a bright, attractive personality that has made her a great favorite in Elmhurst, where she has been one of the leaders in social affairs. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allison F. Byer of Byron, Contra Costa county. He is an architect by profession, but has taken charge of the large ranch of his father at Byron, where he and his bride will make their home on their return from their honeymoon.

WEDDING OF THE WEEK.

Two of Oakland's pioneer families were united in the marriage of Miss Hazel Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Carter to Mr. Francis Andrew Moyles, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Moyles, at St. Francis de Sales church, Tuesday evening. Over three hundred guests were present at the ceremony and later there was a reception at the Carter home in Linden street. The bride was attended by Miss Irene Carter and Miss Anna Carter as bridesmaids. They wore pretty lingerie gowns with pink girdles and carried shepherdess crooks tied with pink tulle and twined with roses. Miss Carrie Carter, as maid of honor, was gowned in pink tulle and carried pink roses.

There were two little flower girls, Katherine Moyles and Ruth Carter, who wore white lingerie gowns and carried gilded baskets of roses. The bride wore a costume of ivory satin with an overdress of silk net embroidered in crystals. Her veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower of bride roses. Mr. John Moyles, brother of the groom, was best man. On their return from a honeymoon in Northern California, Mr. and Mrs. Moyles will occupy an apartment in Oakland until they build a home in Piedmont.

Talks on Tailored Suits

Just as your finger print differs from another so does your form.

I believe I can demonstrate to your satisfaction that there is a real and readily apparent difference between clothes-tailored-to-your-measure and other kinds, and that this difference is one of values as well as style.

And do not take it for granted that clothes specially made to your order mean added price.

We design them as well as make them from $35.00 upwards.

Oakland Clubwomen

The most [illegible] of the year in women's clubdom will be the visit of Lady Aberdeen. Mrs. Belmont's visit was an inspiration [illegible] her interests are all for suffrage. Lady Aberdeen has been identified with the broader interest of women's clubs for many years.

Long before suffrage was fashionable, and when women's clubs were not "smart," the wife of the former lord lieutenant of Ireland allied herself to the [illegible] and gave them the indisputable [illegible] of her support. She is president of the International Council of Women, and will preside at the congress that opens in San Francisco on November 2.

On November 5 Lady Aberdeen will visit Oakland and will be entertained at luncheon by the Alameda County Auxiliary of the P. P. I. E. The international congress will be held in Oakland that day, and beside Lady Aberdeen there will be other interesting visitors, most of them to be present at the auxiliary luncheon.

AUTUMN CONFERENCE.

The autumn conference of the California Civic League will be one of the interesting conventions of the season. It will open on Sunday of this week in the assembly hall of the Phelan building, San Francisco. After the registration of members Dr. Clelia D. Mosher, medical director of women at Stanford, will speak on "Health and the Woman Movement." It ought to be a brilliant refutation of the charge that mental and social development are deleterious to health.

[illegible] State Board of Health, will address the meeting on "Public Health a Duty of Democracy and Women's Relation to Its Problems."

At noon Miss E. L. M. Tate, who is executive secretary of the State Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, will have the floor. She will speak on "Problems of Small Hospitals in California." The afternoon will be devoted to a speech on "The Responsibility of the Consumer for Food Standards," by Mrs. Agnes Fay Morgan of the University of California, and an address on "The American-Japanese Problem" by Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, who is well fitted to speak on this subject, being a professor in Doshisha University, lecturer Imperial University, Japan; representative of Federated Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

DAY AT THE FAIR.

Members of the "Living Issues" of Ebell Club [illegible] "Living Issues" at the fair on Thursday. With Mrs. Louis Cockroft, curator of the section, they crossed the bay in the morning and enjoyed a basket luncheon at the Exposition. At 3 o'clock they gathered in the Liberal Arts building, where Mr. Blanchard of the Liberal Arts Department lectured to them on Arizona. The lecture was illustrated with lantern slides and was principally of the desert wastes in the "Land That God Forgot." It was a departure from living issues, but proved vividly interesting.

BROWNING SOCIETY.

Browning societies that have survived a general understanding of "Sordello," which provoked the first Browning society in New England (the idea was to explore its meaning), are still meeting.

The Browning romance with its everlasting appeal was considered at the last meeting of the San Francisco Browning Society in San Francisco. The club celebrated the anniversary of the marriage of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning on Tuesday afternoon, October 12. There were songs by Carl Edwin Anderson, who appropriately rendered Schumann's "Du bist wie eine Blume," also "La Couer de ma Mie" and "Ah! Moon of My Delight," from Lili Lehmann's "Persian Garden." Miss Helen Colburn Heath and Mr. Anderson sang in duet "Un Notte a Venezia," which recalled the poet's love for Venice, and there was an interesting reading by the literary director of the club, who described "The Browning Romance." The program was opened by Mrs. Minnie Sabin Cooper, president of the society.

OAKLAND CLUB BREAKFAST.

The annual breakfast of the Oakland Club will be a gala event on Wednesday of this week. The guest of honor will be Mrs. E. D. Knight, who is president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Other guests of the occasion will be Mrs. Edwin Owen, president of Ebell, and all past presidents of the Oakland Club, who, with the directors, will be seated at the round table. There will be effective decorations of autumn fruits and foliage, and hostesses of the day will include Mrs. M. L. Smythe, Mrs. C. J. Le Noir, Mrs. J. N. Portro, Mrs. E. M. Gibson, Mrs. A. L. Conger, Mrs. C. B. Mersereau, Mrs. H. Petray, Mrs. I. Bartholomew and Miss T. Russan.

The following program will be given:

D. C. by the Southern States Societies of San Francisco at the California building.

JOINT MEETING.

Tomorrow afternoon there will be a joint meeting of the Women's Republican Club of Alameda county, the Women's Democratic Committees and the Socialists, the two latter organizations to furnish speakers on the non-partisan bill. Milton L. Schmidt and Peter Crosby, well-known lawyer, will also make speeches, representing the Republican Club.

TECHNICAL SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Tomorrow afternoon there will be a meeting of those interested in the forming of a Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Technical High School. It is called for 3:30 o'clock and the organization will be effected at the meeting. A preliminary meeting held last Tuesday was attended by Mrs. C. T. Wilson, president of the Oakland Federation of Parents' and Teachers' Associations, and by Mrs. J. W. Spencer, vice-president of associations of the second district, and Principal Fisher of the Technical High School, who planned the details of organization.

MOTHERS' CLUBS MEET.

The Oakland Federation of Mothers' Clubs will meet at Chabot Hall on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. [illegible] of the department of child labor at the Exposition, will address the meeting.

FLORENCE CRITTENDEN HOME.

A convention of the national and local Florence Crittenden Home managers is being planned for November, the object being to make the work of the institution better known. Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, president of the Florence Crittenden Mission, and Mrs. Charles B. Spinks of Berkeley, president of the Crittenden Home in San Francisco, are among those making preliminary arrangements.

MILLS CLUB.

Members of the Mills Club, of which Mrs. John H. Perine of Oakland is president, will meet at 536 Sutter street, San Francisco, on Tuesday afternoon, October 19. After a business session a number of guests of the club will be entertained with a musical and literary program. Miss Daisy Foster will play piano selections. Mrs. S. W. Burtchaell will read a poem, "Wonderful San Francisco," and Miss Mary F. McDermott will sing a group of songs by Mrs. Leila France McDermott. Miss Amy Corder of Oakland is secretary of the Mills Club and Mrs. Alexander Warner of San Francisco is treasurer.

Dress Reform Busies High School Censors

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16.—The dress reform committee held a meeting in the local high school on the subject of dress conformity among the young women of that institution.

The committee, headed by Miss Leta Heintzen, voted upon the following changes:

The dresses of the young women shall be of navy blue color and shall be made into conservative styles and shall come to the top of the shoes. The waists shall consist of substantial material of modest style and moderate coloring. No French heels will be tolerated. Hosiery must be worn to match the shoes. The hair must be worn in a simple but becoming manner with no fancy bands or other ornaments of any description. Bandolins, rouge, or cosmetics of any description are absolutely tabooed and powder must be used only moderately.

INDIAN CHIEF WIELDS TOMAHAWK ON WIFE

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 16.—Carried back to the lusts of his ancestors by white man's whiskey, Perfector Segungo, captain of the Los Coyotes reservation, attempted to tomahawk his wife. The blow missed and the hatchet struck and probably fatally injured the 3-year-old child of the couple. The baby was clinging to the skirts of its mother. Segungo was brought here from Cucamonga, and United States Officer Smith immediately arrested G. Bayles, a Mexican, charged with furnishing Segungo with the liquor. Segungo was once a noted Indian scout and was taken to the war on the "bootleggers." Many years he gave to fighting liquor among the Indians and is now a victim of it himself. His father was Alonzo Segungo, most famous chief of the San Diego Indians in early days.

Absit Invidia will have a dance Tuesday evening, October 19; all welcome. Ethel P. Foster, chairman of the evening, reports all in readiness; S. Etta Wixson of the reunion committee, progress. Good of the order, the noble grand presented the president of the assembly a beautiful hand-made bag. The president accepted the same in a pleasing manner. Very pleasant remarks were made by Page Desda Ritter. Ethel P. Foster presented the president with a beautiful hand-crocheted quilt flower basket, from Fannie K. Renshaw of Brooklyn Rebekah Lodge. The noble grand and musician, Mary B. Adams, presented S. Etta Wixson with flowers, this being her birthday.

OAKLAND REVIEW.

The meeting held Thursday evening was well attended, visitors from Benicia, Victoria and Arizona being present. Mrs. West, from Victoria, deposited her transfer card and was elected to membership. Initiatory work was exemplified by the new officers and guards. The ceremony of draping the charter for a late member, Mrs. Waters, was performed. The benefit whist which was to take place on the 21st has been postponed until some future date. All arrangements have been made for the public installation of the review of this district, to be held at Hotel Oakland Thursday evening, November 4. Great Commander Minnie W. Aydelotte and her assistants will install the officers. Oakland guards will exemplify the floor work. The officers and guards of Melrose review will perform the dedicatory work.

MODERN WOODMEN.

Local camps of Woodmen are awaiting with interest the celebration of Modern Woodmen of America Day at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition on Saturday, October 23. Arrangements have been made for quite an elaborate celebration, which promises to outdo other similar efforts of the past.

The program will commence at 2 p. m., when the drill teams will form in parade at the Fillmore-street entrance, where they will be met by the Exposition officials. All will then march to the Fountain of Energy, led by the Modern Woodmen band of Oakland camp, No. 7236.

Hon. F. R. Korns, Des Moines, Iowa, chairman of the board of directors, will receive from Hon. Willard Done, special commissioner, the commemorative bronze plaque and will respond in behalf of the society.

Competitive drills will be a feature of the day, several crack teams having entered, among them being the one from San Jose camp, No. 7777, which, it will be remembered, won the free-for-all competitive drill on Fraternal Day in competition with all other societies. The first prize will be the cup that was won by the Modern Woodmen drill teams on Fraternal Day for the best appearance in parade. The second prize will be a cup given by the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

Arrangements have also been made for an informal dinner at the Inside Inn at 6:30 p. m., after which the members will disperse throughout the grounds for the remainder of the evening.

FRATERNAL BROTHERHOOD.

Oakland lodge, No. 123, T. F. B., held its open meeting on Friday evening, October 8. The business meeting was short and all unnecessary details omitted, so that it was over at 8:15. The hall was then thrown open to friends and visitors. The following program was given: Mandolin and piano duet, Miss E. Bauer and Miss Tackle; Scotch song and dance, Miss Alta Crowin, pupil of Miss Belle Butler; vocal solo, Miss J. Beavars; butterfly dance, Bernice Jorgensen; vocal solo, Clifford Hughes. The surprise of the evening was the appearance of William Haywards, former district manager, who was here on a short vacation, visiting the Panama Exposition. He spoke in regard to his work in the east.

MACCABEES.

The regular review of Oakland Tent No. 17, was held Monday evening, October 11. The regular order of business was transacted, and under the head of good of the order, several members spoke briefly. A. W. Vance of San Francisco Tent No. 18, was a welcome visitor. After the review the members played whist and pedro.

An event of special interest to local Maccabees was the degree team banquet which was held at a local cafe Wednesday evening, October 13. Those present were G. A. Klein, J. S. Carney, W. J. Avan, F. J. Bushell, J. C. Monson, J. W. Blain, R. M. Fitch, J. D. Phillips, W. T. Williford, H. K. Irvine, M. F. Davis, A. O. Hagans, Charles G. Myers, M. D. McQuarrie, Louie Newman, H. A. Newman, S. A. Gilliam, William P. Ward, A. E. Danielson, S. W. Hall, J. L. Fine and Eugene E. Pence. There was singing by the Maccabee sextet, instrumental music by the Maccabee string sextet, vocal solos by Ed Juillerat and M. D. Horner, character dancing by Frank Borges and G. A. Klein, duet by Frank Borges and John Sousa, piano solo by M. N. Kinney and speaking by C. G. Myers, S. A. Williard, F. J. Bushell, A. E. Hildreth, A. O. Hagans, J. W. Blain, S. W. Hall, J. D. Phillips, M. N. Kinney, J. C. Monson and J. L. Fine.

Commander G. A. Klein acted as toastmaster and mirth and good fellowship prevailed throughout the evening.

FRATERNAL BROTHERHOOD.

East Oakland Lodge No. 695 held its regular weekly session on Thursday evening. A. Stanley Nathanson presided. Visitors from Oakland, Berkley and Los Angeles lodges were present.

One candidate for membership was obligated and held over to November 4, when a class initiation will be held.

WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS.

Appomattox Relief Corps met in Lincoln Hall, Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Kate Walker, senior vice-president, presiding, as Mrs. Evers, the president, is in New York visiting. Mrs. Lockhart and Mrs. Hollywood were reported ill.

Mrs. Parritt was requested to take charge of the fortune-telling booth on Hallowe'en evening at Memorial Hall. Dr. Frank will sing and Mrs. Nellie Scott will drill the ladies in a "ghost dance."

Mrs. Walker presented Mrs. Scott with a handsome handbag as a token of appreciation of the work she did on the relief committee.

SUN DODGERS.

The second meeting of Pacific Lodge No. 1, Fraternal Order of Sun Dodgers, was held at Lincoln Hall, Thursday night, October 14. After the regular business was attended to a goodly number of candidates were put through the ropes. The next meeting will be held in San Francisco to accommodate the San Francisco members, as the lodge meets after midnight.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Light music of the sort known as "popular" has been formally recognized by the Exposition directors, who have engaged [illegible] Festival Hall in November. It will be the first time that the better class of [illegible] has been heard in the hall where serious music, chorals, symphonies and [illegible] been given to their greatest exponents. There have been the [illegible] engagement of the Boston Symphony, the appearance of the venerable Camille Saint-Saens, the playing of Paderewski, [illegible] under Hagerman and Hadley, and countless recitals by noted organists. The [illegible] lighter [illegible] into its own. He will present [illegible] of the kind that please the tired business man as well as the severe music-lover. The very name of Victor Herbert brings [illegible] of that lilting, whistleable kind of music that everyone loves and enjoys.

Mr. Herbert is an Irishman and through all of his music can be felt the fine humor and sparkling wit of his race. He was educated in Germany, and there learned the art of composition. He has composed scores of comic operas, each one in its day having been first favorite in public fancy. "The Serenade," "Prince Ananias," which he wrote for the Bostonians; "The Idol's Eye," "The Wizard of the Nile," for Frank Daniels; "The Singing Girl" and "The Fortune Teller," for Alice Neilsen, "The Prima Donna" and "Mlle. Modiste," for Fritzi Scheff, and "The Red Mill," "Babes in Toyland," "Babette," "Rose of Algeria," "Naughty Marietta," "The Only Girl" and his latest success, "The Princess Pat."

Not alone as a composer of comic opera has Mr. Herbert gained success. He has written serious works, including symphonic suites, oratorios, concertos for 'cello and orchestra, and two Grand Operas, "Natoma" and "Madeleine." He will appear in San Francisco six nights, beginning Monday, November 1, with a matinee on Sunday, November 7.

Many of the composer's own works are listed on the program to be given, among them overtures and selections from his operas. Herbert will conduct an orchestra of 65 men. The engagement is under the direction of Will Greenbaum of San Francisco.

MUSIC IN GREEK THEATER.

The Musical and Dramatic Committee of the University of California announces that the half-hour of music in the Greek Theater this afternoon, at 4 o'clock, will consist of compositions by Count Axel Raoul Wachtmeister, a native of Norway but long a resident in California, for the last few years in the southern part of the state. The program, which will consist of instrumental numbers as well as vocal, will be presented by the following musicians: Mrs. Marion Hovey Brower, soprano; Miss Dorothy Pasmore, 'cellist; Mr. Lowell Moore Redfield, baritone, and Mr. Arthur Gundersen, violinist, with the composer himself at the piano. It is as follows: "Nightingale Lane," "Couldst Thou Know How Fair Thou Art," and "At Mora," Mr. Redfield; "Consolation," "My Heart is Weary" and "Titania," Mrs. Brower; Zedowa for violoncello and piano, Miss Pasmore and Count Wachtmeister; "The Witch Cypress at Monterey," "Three Wild Swans," and "Awake, My Beloved," Mr. Redfield; "Kiss," "Damophyla" and "Aftonen ar Inne" (Evening Song), Mrs. Bower; and Gavotte and Solgardspolska, for violin and piano, Mr. Gunderson and Count Wachtmeister. The public will be welcome.

ORGAN RECITAL TODAY.

The Sunday noon organ recitals at the Franklin have found popular favor and promise to become a permanent feature of musical activities in Oakland.

An excellent program has been selected for today and every number is calculated to bring out the best qualities of the instrument and performer. The program follows:

At Evening.........................Schumann
Intermezzo and Valse Lente from "Sylvia"...........................Delibes
Song, "I Hear You Calling Me"..Marshall
[illegible] song of hope. .... [illegible]
An Old Melody ....Arr. by performer.

At the second recital given last Sunday, a large audience applauded the beautiful [illegible]. The [illegible] of the opening number of the program, the "Pilgrims' Chorus" from [illegible], "Messiah," taken from the greatest of all choral works, received the measure of applause.

In one of the pieces—the Spanish [illegible] [illegible] marvelous orchestral effects were [illegible] [illegible] were heard in [illegible].

MISS BUTTON WINS PRAISE.

Miss Mabel E. Button, a pupil of Roscoe Warren Lucy, gave a piano recital at Elder's auditorium at the Exposition last Sunday afternoon to an audience that tested the capacity of the hall.

Miss Button's playing was finished, showing breadth of style and a brilliant technic. The following program was rendered:

1. Valse, Op. 34 ....Moszkowski
2. (a) Toreador et Andalouse, Op. [illegible], No. 7 ....Rubinstein
(b) Gavotte ....Gluck-Brahms

(c) Scherzo, Op. 31................Chopin
4. Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 12 ....Liszt

GADSKI IN BERKELEY.

With the announcement that Madame Johanna Gadski, the famous Wagner artist and [illegible] singer, will give a program before the Berkeley Musical Association, comes the statement that Emmy Destinn has been detained in Germany by the difficulties of travel and has been forced to cancel several engagements in America, while others are indefinite, although she will sail from Europe at the first opportunity. Madame Destinn was to have appeared at the Berkeley Association's first concert in November, and instead Gadski will be heard.

Another interesting announcement is that Gabrilowitsch will play at the January concert and other artists engaged are Maude Powell, the violinist, for the December concert, and the Kneisel String Quartet in April. The artists for February and March will be announced later.

STUDIO RECITAL.

An "Evening of Ensemble Music" was given Friday evening by Miss Cora W. Jenkins at her studio in Randwick avenue, Piedmont. Those who contributed to the program were: Mr. Albert Elkus, pianist; Mr. Samuel Savannah, violinist, and Dr. Arthur Weiss, cellist. The following numbers were rendered:

1. Sonata for violin and piano, A-major, Op. 100................Brahms
Allegro amabile.
Andante tranquillo.
Allegretto grazioso (quasi andante).
Mr. Savannah, Mr. Elkus.
2. Serenade for violin, 'cello and piano, Op. 64..........................Hiller Alla marcia.
Scherzando.
Ghasel.
Intermezzo.
Tarantella.
Mr. Savannah, Dr. Weiss, Mr. Elkus.
3. Sonata for 'cello and piano, Op. 36 ....Grieg
Allegro agitato.
Andante molto tranquillo.
Allegro.
Dr. Weiss, Mr. Elkus.

TO PLAY FAMOUS VIOLIN.

Ferenez Hegedus, the noted Hungarian violinist, who bears such a great resemblance to the immortal Liszt in his youth, has brought with him to America his wonderful Gillott, "Joseph" instrument. It is one of the most perfect examples of Guarnerius Del Gesu in existence, and since Hegedus has had it in New York, American violin connoisseurs have flocked to see it. Hegedus will use this famous instrument upon his American tour, which begins early in the coming season.

PACIFIC COAST COMPOSERS.

The San Francisco Musical Club, of which Mrs. Wallace W. Briggs of Piedmont is president, will meet next Thursday morning at the St. Francis when the works of Pacific Coast composers [illegible] Kelley, H. J. Stewart, Ida Waldrop, Theodore Vogt, Edward Schneider, H. J. [illegible], and a number of others [illegible] whose works may be heard.

The club will return to the classics for the first November meeting on Thursday, November [illegible], when Mozart and Brahms will be the composers of the program.

ROMANCE BROKEN BY DEATH SHADOW

Notes on Mutilated Body Reveal Love Torment of Possible Suicide.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—Revealing a story of a romance broken by the shadow of death, the body of a man believed to be Harry J. Hickley, an English remittance man, was brought to San Bernardino today after it had been found, mutilated on the tracks at Kelso, near the Nevada line.

The shadow of death which hung over him and caused him to make his way to the desert for the cure of a disease, it was stated in papers found on the body, had caused Hickley's separation from a girl known as "Ella" in England.

The only clew to identification was a card found in the man's pockets which stated, "I am Harry J. Hickley. In case of death notify my parents at Crowsborough, Sussex, England."

In other papers found on the body the story of the romance was told. A picture of a girl which bore the name "Ella" was also found.

"I wrote today to my parents asking regarding Ella," was one of the notes.

Another paper had written on it:

"I heard today from the old people and their news was too cruel. Why should they have told me that Ella was married?"

Other observations evidently jotted in a notebook by the man revealed that he was ill and near death.

Just how the man was killed is not known. It is the theory of the police that he committed suicide by hurling himself in front of a passing Salt Lake train.

BOUGHT. BUT NOT PAID FOR, SAYS NEW BRIDE

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 16.—According to the allegation of Paula Talisman in a suit filed she was "bought but not paid for."

The woman sues her husband, Samuel Talisman, a prosperous grocer, seeking a court decree to force him to fulfill his prenuptial contract that provided, she declares, if she would marry him he would deed her half interest in his property. Three days after the marriage, on April 27, 1915, Talisman did deed to her half interest in property he has here. Now the bride discovers for the first time, she said, there is a trust deed to the property to secure indebtedness of $700. Talisman has property in Los Angeles of great value, and Mrs. Talisman seeks the order of the court to force him to pay off the incumbrances so she will have what he agreed she should have in consideration of her consent to marry.

Mrs. Talisman said she gave up a prosperous little business in the East to come here to marry Talisman, and unless the court orders that he pay what he promised she will have suffered a financial loss.

THE NEXT APPROPRIATION BILL.

The tentative estimates of expenditures of the National Government for the fiscal year of 1916-17 are not extraordinarily large, considering all the circumstances. The proposed increase of $150,000,000 is almost entirely made up of additions to the nation's defenses. The demand for a more comprehensive and efficient program of preparedness is a popular one and the administration cannot fail to take it into account. We entertain the hope that Mr. Wilson is not playing with the almost universal sentiment at this moment with the intention of revising his opinion of defensive necessities downward when the appropriation measure comes up for passage. Outside of the professional and subsidized peace propagandists the opposition to the modest increases proposed will be negligible.

The five-year program for naval construction will barely catch up with the program adopted by the general board of the navy several years ago and repudiated by Mr. Daniels and the majority party in Congress in 1914. Whether he has changed his personal views or not, the people of the country have convincingly demanded official conduct different from Mr. Daniels' destructive tactics of a year ago. Certainly we should have some definite program of naval construction, for dreadnaughts are not completed within a year, and a five-year program is surely short enough. The first year's additions to the navy will call for about $75,000,000. The proposed army increases contemplate an expenditure of $72,000,000, so that the estimate for total defense expenditures, army and navy, for next year now is about $430,000,000. The military expenditures for the fiscal year of 1913-14—the last normal year—of Great Britain were $448,400,000; Germany, $294,000,000; France, $311,000,000, and Japan, $95,500,000. Considering that the pay of the enlisted man of the United States army and navy is more than ten times the average pay of soldiers in the countries above mentioned, the cost of material and construction in this country, and the forces necessary to protect our great coast lines from invasion from a possible foreign enemy, the new program does not approach the results striven for in European countries. It holds nothing of the menace of "militarism."

If the preliminary estimates are adopted by Congress the total of the national budget will be about $1,225,000,000. Deducting the postal estimates, the actual expenditures to be met by revenue measures will be close to one billion dollars. The present income sources are yielding a little more than $700,000,000 a year. They include the present tariff on sugar, which is scheduled to be removed in May next, and the emergency "war" tax. The law levying the latter expires automatically in December. Therefore, if the tax on sugar is retained and the stamp tax law is re-enacted, both of which are almost certain of being done, there will be a deficit of at least $250,000,000. It will be up to Congress to devise adequate revenue-raising measures or authorize the sale of bonds. The Democratic majority, rather than forsake the party doctrine of free trade, will probably resort to bond-selling, although our industrial prosperity and Mr. Redfield's spectre of "dumping" of foreign goods clearly demand a protective, revenue-producing tariff on imports.

ANGELS ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

The European war has produced many strange and sensational phenomena. There is abundant evidence to show that the effect of life in the trenches, heavy firing, and the detonation of high explosives is particularly manifest in its action upon the nervous system. Unquestionably the nerves of many people have been highly stimulated and they have been thrown into abnormal moods of depression or exaltation. One of the possible indirect results of this terrific assault upon the nerves, coupled with the overpowering sense of danger and the imminence of death, is a sharp recrudesence of religious feeling on one hand and a yielding to a vague pressure of superstition on the other. Soldiers are having dreams and seeing visions. England has been a good deal interested in the persistence of a story which sets forth with more or less detail the appearance of angels during the battle of Mons. The story is that these angelic visitors appeared in the sky above the charging German cavalry, throwing consternation into its ranks and assisting largely in saving the day for the British. Scores of men who were engaged in fighting about Mons have stated positively that they saw this angelic vision and a number of soldiers have made circumstantial affidavits to that effect. Private Robert Cleaver of the first Cheshire regiment stated on oath before a magistrate on August 20th of this year, as follows: "I personally saw at Mons the vision of angels with my own eyes." Said he: "Things were at their blackest with our troops and the men were lying down behind tufts of grass for covering when the vision came between them and the German cavalry. It came as a 'flash.' The cavalry horses ran in all directions and were disorganized. The charge frittered away and the appearance of the angels was sufficient to turn the German cavalry."

Another English soldier says that he saw "in midair a strange light which became brighter until he discerned three shapes, one in the center which looked like it had outspread wings. The other two were not so large, but distinct from the center one. They appeared to have on long, loose-hanging garments of a golden tint and they were above the German line facing us. The horses reared and plunged and ceased to advance."

Testimony as to the appearance of angels over the battlefield of Mons continues to accumulate and a good deal of intellectual effort is being concentrated to find some satisfactory solution of this alleged mysterious visitation. One English religious paper, speaking from the earnest church viewpoint, says that to many thousands of people unshakable evidence of the reality of the vision alleged to have been seen at Mons would almost compensate for the horrors of the war itself, inasmuch as it would strengthen religious faith, which has been greatly lessened by the war, and would, of course, reinforce belief in the justice of the cause for which so many men fell during that magnificent retreat and the almost miraculous military recovery on the banks of the Marne. Many skeptical scientists on the other hand believe that a general acceptance of the trustworthiness of the facts alleged by the men on the field of battle who think that they saw angels hovering over them, would indicate a relapse toward superstition on the part of the civilized world and maintain that democratic liberty in Europe would be dearly purchased at a price of a revival of belief in angels, supernatural interventions and miracles. There are many people, however, we are told, in fact multitudes of reasonable, intelligent men and women to whom these stories appeal, not as evidence of an over-trustful and childlike disposition to believe in signs and wonders and to imagine them if they do not spontaneously appear, but see in them evidence of the persistent desire on the part of mankind to identify human concerns with some larger universal purpose and meaning. These stories seem to testify to the mysticism of the natural man who feels the ever present impulse to bring God into his affairs and who derives subtle and soothing satisfaction from stories which hint of the spiritual world and which seem to draw him back to the heaven which "lies about us in our infancy."

"Not wholly lost, O Father, is this evil world of ours;
Upward, through its blood and ashes, spring afresh the Eden flowers,
From its smoking hell of battle, Love and Pity send their prayer,

AN APPEAL FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

The conditions confronting business and commerce in the Philippines are graphically and accurately set forth in a report by eight members of India House resident in Manila. India House was formed in New York some eighteen months ago by about five hundred American business men with the object to encourage "the foreign commerce of the United States and the cultivation and perpetuation of American foreign trading relation." There is a "foreign" membership, comprised mostly of Americans having business interests in the Orient.

The report of conditions in the Philippines sent to the board of governors in New York has special reference to the destructive effect of the Seaman's bill. The first of the eight signatures of committeemen is that of Newton W. Gilbert, formerly vice governor-general of the islands. It sums up the situation thus:

For sixty-six years, or thereabouts, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, flying the American flag, has operated upon the Pacific. It, perhaps more than any other agency, has contributed to the upbuilding of American trade and commerce in the Orient. For two generations American interests have been subserved by it, and American citizens living in this part of the world have relied upon it. Seven large ships have made regular calls, both for passengers and freight, not only at Manila, but at other Oriental ports, for many years. Even with this accommodation freight coming to Manila and other ports has been piled up at San Francisco for many weeks awaiting transportation, and the capacity of outgoing steamers from these ports has frequently been insufficient.

The seamen's bill has made it impossible for American ships to operate in competition with vessels which may carry Oriental crews and which enjoy a government subsidy. These ships have been sold to be operated upon the Atlantic and are about to be permanently withdrawn from the Pacific.

The effect here will be disastrous. Commodities produced in the islands have already fallen in value, because of the fact that they cannot be carried to market, and the expense of warehousing and storing, always large, will be greatly increased. The manufacturers of the United States will not be able to reach this market as easily as the manufacturers of Europe, and the trade between the United States and the Philippine Islands, so laboriously created, will be largely destroyed in a day as the result of this bill.

The report closes with the statement that the situation created by this legislation is so serious that it should enlist the active co-operation of all patriotic Americans, whether directly engaged in business or not. Our wards, the Filipinos, at whose door no fault can be laid, must suffer greatly because of this untoward act, it says, and then makes this appeal:

Cannot something be done before all is lost? Cannot the eyes of Congress be opened early in the next session? Cannot the government give some assurance of protection to the shipping interests of the United States, so that Pacific shipping may be re-established. Cannot the trade of the United States in the Orient yet be saved? Cannot the interests of the 8,000,000 Filipinos be considered? In other words, before all is lost, cannot the prestige of the United States be preserved in the Far East, and advantage be taken of the unexampled opportunity for commercial expansion?

A few days ago Manuel Earnshaw, one of the Philippine delegates to Congress, arrived in this port with the statement that Philippine commerce with the United States will virtually disappear unless something is immediately done to repair the damage caused by the seaman's bill. Brigadier-General McIntyre, head of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, is also on his way to Washington with a report of conditions, and though he would not indicate the nature of the data he will lay before the President, he suggested that it dealt with present conditions as influenced by recent legislation and change of policy toward the Philippines. One of the first questions taken up when Congress convenes should be that of relief for American trade facilities in the Pacific and particularly as it effects the prosperity of the Filipinos.

One of the interesting and modern developments of college life is the college newspaper. Journals of several types are published by students both of Stanford and Berkeley, and, generally speaking, they are creditable productions. If they have not always reflected thoroughness of journalistic method or the dignity of scholarship, they have at least carried themselves within the lines of general propriety and good taste. But it seems that the "yellow" idea in journalism has invaded the campus, for we find in Brass Tacks, "an illustrated biweekly of the University of California"—issue of October 13th—a distinct let-down from the standards which ought to be positive in college journals. Surely there are subjects enough proper for discussion in a students' journal without reviving worn and suggestive themes, taken up obviously with sensational intent. The college stage, too, is coming to imitate the practices of "musical comedy" rather than the standards of strict legitimacy. It is a pity—seriously a pity. The college journal and the college stage ought to foster what is best rather than what is second-best.

The opening of the duck and quail season comes happily in conjunction with "Dress Up" week. The coincidence lends an atmosphere of propriety and even of virtue to the elaborate sporting costumes observed on the streets and at the railroad stations on Sunday and holiday mornings. It would seem the most important part of sportsmanship these days is the scheme of clothes that go with it.

The Tribune would be glad to publish a communication which has come to it over the signature of "A. Curius Amicus." But it is an inflexible rule of this paper not to print a communication from any source not known to the editor.

PRESIDENT IN NEW YORK. TWO BLUSHING LOVERS

Describing the visit of President Wilson and his bride, Mrs. Galt, to New York, the Sun says:

Presidents can blush as other men, turn rosy red from quick appreciation of an unusual and newly trying position. Mr. Wilson demonstrated that fact conclusively. His sang froid was not quite equal to the new situation. He blushed when he handed Mrs. Galt from the Pennsylvania station to their car, blushed when he bent over her hand as he left her at the Hotel St. Regis, blushed when he very quickly returned for her from the apartments of his friend, Col. E. M. House; blushed as she conversed with him in their rapid pleasure ride up Riverside drive, Broadway and through the park, blushed as he led her into the Empire theater last night, blushed—but was catalogue a lover's blushes, even though the lover be President of the United States? Certainly it was a new (perhaps some might say a more human) Woodrow Wilson who came in such exhilaration of spirits to New York town.

BRIDE-ELECT ALWAYS COMPOSED.

Does one ask what was the lady's demeanor throughout this high-speed part of the courtship, a part which ran through New York with the flashing speed of a cinematograph picture? A courtship that was carried on at forty miles an hour, among secret service officers, squads of policemen, hordes of the common people? Well, if the truth be put down accurately the fiancee was considerably more composed than was the dance. Perhaps a woman knows better how to adjust herself to such trying situations, for at all events Mrs. Galt's composure was never shaken.

She blushed, yes, and most charmingly—a faint glow warming in her ivory cheeks—and her eyes danced with merriment, but she was never quite so self-conscious as was the spare, slender man who sat at her left hand and whose eyes so seldom left her. The fact is Mrs. Galt, more seemingly aware of the turmoil all around, appeared to enjoy it. She smiled at the crowds in most friendly fashion; occasionally waved the tips of her fingers at them, inclined her head just a little and was at all times entirely cognizant of the stir her coming had made.

While it is true that the President sometimes turned from his beautiful companion to glance at the crowds, to lift his hat and to mark in other ways his recognition of their interest, it was also quite evident that he found it difficult to turn his attention from her vivacious presence.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dickman gave a delightful musicale at their residence in Berkeley last evening. The musical numbers were contributed by Madame Seminario, Mrs. John L. Howard, Mrs. Maud Berry-Fisher, Miss Mabel Gross, Mrs. Dickman, L. Crepaux and Thomas Rickard.

A double wedding took place last evening at the home of Mrs. Rose Gannon, 1536 Grove street, when her nieces, the Misses Abbie and Annie Mee were married to James J. Mason and Benjamin A. Harnett respectively.

The newly organized Fortnight Club held its first party in Military Hall last night. In the neighborhood of a hundred and fifty attended.

The seventh ball of the Masonic Hall Dancing Club will be held at Masonic Hall Thursday evening.

Tuesday afternoon the wedding of A. D. Wilson and Miss A. E. Stevens was quietly celebrated at the Unitarian church in this city, Rev. C. W. Wendte officiating.

About sixty boys and girls of the Union Street Presbyterian church gave a most pleasing entertainment last evening at Y. M. C. A. hall before a large audience.

THE OPEN MIND.

The great man's mind has an open door
And hosts of thoughts through its portals pour;
Without a clash through its width may flow
The new that enter, the old that go.

The small man's mind with revolving door
Will pass one thought at a time—no more.
Or often, confused, it spins around,
No entrance gained and no exit found.

The fool's mind boasts of a tight-shut door,
Barred fast today as the day before.
Whatever is in, perforce must stay,
Whatever is out, remains away.

—McLandburgh Wilson, in N. Y. Sun.

ABOUT WOMEN.

It is only in states where there has been a "woman movement" that women have received equal guardianship of their children, and only in states where women vote that this has been accomplished by years of effort.

According to the scientists, the ideal woman of the eugenic age will be taller than the average woman of today. She will be plump and well rounded, but not fat. Her complexion will be ruddy or brown, not pale as that of present day women, because the pale skin is a badge of disease rather than of health.

Women are going more frequently into business, as many of them find it much more congenial than the professional work, that requires such long preparation. Women have had so much experience in caring for the family accounts that they cannot be said to be altogether ignorant of money matters, and some of them have a positive genius for business affairs.

Under the tentative plans of the Republican national committee for a convention of 995 delegates, it is said that the equal suffrage states will have a representation of 185. This list includes Illinois, which has fifty-eight votes. The other suffrage states are Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York will vote this fall on the subject, and some of them may be captured.

FOR MERCY SAKES!

Topeka has got an old-fashioned member of the board of education, Roy Pennwell, who says that there is a lot of "horse play" in the Topeka schools. He denounces the cafeteria which he says cost the school board $10,000 and loses them money every year, and he also declares that wood carving is all "bosh." He says it is silly to try to teach a Kansas boy or girl wood carving. He declares there is absolutely no demand in Topeka for wood carvers, that nobody except the school teachers know what a wood carver is and even the school teachers do not know what it is for. Why, Mr. Pennwell!—Wichita Beacon.

"FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD"

THE RECOGNITION OF CARRANZA—An inquiry as to President Wilson's purpose in supporting the only Mexican leader who refused the offer of mediation. : : : : : : :

(From the New York Times.)

Now that the Administration is practically committed to the formal recognition of Venustiano Carranza as the de facto ruler of Mexico, all good citizens will hope that another serious mistake has not been made. There have been some grievous errors in the development of our Mexican policy, but as Secretary Lansing seems confident that he has done the right thing this time, we are encouraged to hope that international amity and tranquility will ensue. It would be foolish to forget, as the Administration will not be permitted to forget, that this action is in direct violation of the plan originally formed by Mr. Lansing and his Latin American confereea. That plan was to invite all the faction leaders to join in a peace conference and agree upon a program of pacification. It was understood that any faction leader disregarding the invitation or rejecting it would be ignored in future proceedings. But the one faction leader who rejected the invitation is now to have formal recognition and the others are to be ignored. This seeming inconsistency needs no excuse if the action is justifiable. It is better to be inconsistent than wrong. It is possible, however, to be both.

All the information obtainable from Mexico clearly indicates that Carranza's government is not stable; that it is not acknowledged by all Mexicans, or nearly all; that it has no sure means of administering justice; that it is not "equipped with the machinery for the administration of internal policy," and that it is, on the contrary, depending upon this very recognition to enable it to overcome strong opposition and to dismay its opponents, some of whom are as stanchly patriotic and as strongly pledged to the establishment of a constitutional government as Carranza or any of his adherents.

The message of President Grant, written, of course, by his able and learned Secretary of State, Hamilton Fish, indicated "the policy and the principles" which had been the nation's "sure and safe guides." Unless the present administration possesses information concerning the strength of Carranza which has been withheld from the American people, it has departed from that well tried policy and those excellent principles, has discarded those safe and sure guides of statesmanship.

(From the New York Sun.)

If the reason for President Wilson's recognition of Venustiano Carranza and his party as the de facto government of Mexico be sought within the boundaries of that republic, it will not be found. The military situation of the Carranzista forces does not justify it. The political circumstances of its leader give it no support. The personal qualities of Carranza, the record of his dealings with his followers, the history of his transactions with the United States, all combine to demonstrate the fool-hardiness, the desperation of a course that would entrust to him the rehabilitation of the disrupted nation. Where, then, is the factor that has induced President Wilson to adopt a policy that can be made successful only by the might of this country, and imposed on an unwilling people only through our physical intervention in a foreign quarrel?

The Congress of the United States will assemble in December. There will be an insistent demand for a complete and open investigation by a committee of its members into the relations of the Wilson administration in Mexico. If, before this inevitable demand is heard, that administration has taken no definite step toward a solution of the difficulties in Mexico, there can be no reasonable argument against, no definite and dignified opposition to the projected inquiry. That inquest the Administration, contemplating the chaotic outcome of its vacillation, dreads for its possibilities of exposure and humiliation. But if an affirmative act has been prescribed, no matter what unwisdom and recklessness it reveals, the Administration believes that the inquisitors may be decently evaded, and the revelation of watchful waiting's painful history postponed, if not forever avoided.

The explanation of Carranza's victory at Washington, therefore, is found, not where his contributions to disorder and revolution have been made, but in the White House at Washington, where indecision and ineptitude have created a crisis whose necessities must at last be met.

Nor should the triumph of Carranza be underestimated, however short may be his period for enjoying its fruits. From the beginning he has refused to concede, to compromise, to give way. If he was to be used to meet the exigencies of our domestic politics, he would have his price. That price is now offered to him. In every stipulation in the contract Carranza lays down the terms.

Obviously, Carranza must have money. By whom is it to be supplied? "American bankers," the Washington dispatches say, "will be called upon to supply the funds to establish the Carranza government on a solid basis." Carranza cannot get a cent in this country unless he can present the guaranty of the United States. Is that obligation to be assumed without a substantial agreement between the United States and Mexico as to the collection and distribution of Mexican revenues? If it is, the charge might as well be made against the United States Treasury finally as at a subsequent date. On the other hand, if Carranza should consent, which he would not, to confide the management of Mexico's national finances to American officials his makebelieve government would not last a week, for the one thing on which all Mexicans are united is hatred of an American invasion, civil or military.

They hate us, and what is more to the point they hold us in contempt. They have been led to believe that we are powerless to enforce our words with deeds, and that in the ultimate test they are superior in arms to their neighbors across their northern boundary. For this the Mexicans and the people of the United States have Mr. Wilson to thank. What other opinion could be drawn from the Vera Cruz expedition, with its lack of objective, absence of purpose, and final failure to exact the penalty which was its avowed excuse? Throughout Mexico all factions are agreed that the United States essayed an invasion. Its troops dared not quit the protecting guns of its warships, and in this display of impotence gave the measure of its strength. Mr. Wilson has never confided to the American people the ambition that stirred him to that trade venture. He made of it the text of a speech that has not been forgotten; the speech in which death and wounds were counted so lightly as against the suffering imposed by criticism. Its effects in Mexico are notorious; but its final purpose no American knows.

The latest Mexican adventure of President Wilson might be cited as a contradiction of much that has heretofore received his approval. It is. But in the inconsistencies and mutually destructive elements that compose the president's Mexican "policy," why single out one for special honor? The bargain of Saturday was struck to meet the extremities of domestic politics, to facilitate escape from an embarrassing inquisition, and if it reduces congress to silence the object of Mr. Wilson will be achieved.

COD DYED RED AS "SALMON."

New York Health Department Seizes 300 Pounds of Disguised Fish.

Announcement has been made by the health department that it has seized 300 pounds of codfish which had been dyed red and shipped to this city as Alaskan salmon.

The seizure was made at a cold storage plant, and investigation at the health department laboratories developed that the salmon was common cod dyed.

The department also announced that a new adulterant is being used in this city in place of benzoate of soda, the only one allowed under the pure food law. According to Dr. L. P. Brown, the new adulterant, which is a composition of boix and boric acid, is being used in the manufacture of catsups and jams.—New York dispatch to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

PEDIGREED FROG.

DEATH OF MISS REDDING IS MOURNED

The tragic death of Miss Josephine Redding has cast a deep gloom over all the friends of the Redding family, although she had spent the greater part of her life with her mother in Paris, this young girl had charmed a genuine place for herself in the regard of the San Francisco friends of the Redding family. She was one of the most talented girls that ever earned the worship of her parents and the proud interest of friends. To more than unusual beauty, and beauty of a spiritual type, the gods had added enough talents to divide among several girls and place them in the highly endowed class. She was a pianiste who could play accompaniments for a man like Fritz Kreisler or a singer like Mary Garden, and the great artist never submits to mediocre accompanying for any social reasons. Musicians said of her that if she was ill or busy, her entire time to the piano, she would become a great concert player. She possessed a voice of more than the amateur order, and sang with the greatest intelligence and charm. She had, moreover, literary gifts of great promise, and some of her translations from the French called forth the praise of the most appraising critics. All this sounds like the hyperbole of friends, the sort of thing that never stands the penetrating scrutiny of the disinterested critic. But Miss Redding was one of the few exceptions, one of those so greatly gifted that there was an embarrassment of choice in which of the arts she should concentrate.

With the outbreak of the war she took a course in nursing, and, unlike so many of the society volunteers, she proved to be so efficient that she was in demand by the field surgeons instead of classed as a nuisance like so many of the amateur nurses. She was made a superintendent, and had thirty nurses under her when the end came. Recent letters report that she had a tendency toward tuberculosis that would probably never have developed under kindlier conditions than a war hospital. The doctors warned her that she was taking grave risks, but the soldier stuff in her would not let her surrender her post. One bad cold after another developed into galloping consumption, and the end came so soon that friends out here did not even know that she was ill when the news of her death came and saddened every one who had ever had a glimpse of this lovely girl.

The day that the sad cablegram came, Fritz Kreisler heard the news in the Bohemian Club, where he was having luncheon. At his concert that afternoon, some friends who went behind the scenes commented to him on the ineffable sadness of his playing and asked him to put in just one gay number to relieve the taut heart strings of the audience. "I cannot," he said: "I am thinking not only of the night that has fallen over Europe, but of that lovely girl who gave up her life here in the hospitals, and I cannot draw the lively bow—it is on the heart strings that I must play."—News Letter.

JERRY DINAN'S FALL WITH SCHMITZ' DEFEAT

"To the victor belong the spoils."

The old adage seems to have been applied again in the case of Jerry Dinan, veteran detective and former chief of police under the Schmitz administration, who is wearing a uniform for the first time in nearly a score of years and reporting for duty in the "fog belt."

While Chief White's order removing the veteran sleuth from the detective bureau simply carries the prosaic explanation, "For the good of the service," it is generally understood about police headquarters by those in on the "low down" that Dinan's activity for Schmitz in the recent primary cost him his place on the detective force.

They say that loyalty to Schmitz, under whom Dinan headed the police department in the trying days following the fire of 1906, causes the well-known detective to work for the election of his friend.

Some insist that Dinan would have been made chief had Schmitz been elected, but the general belief is that loyalty to his old friend, rather than the possibility of promotion, prompted Dinan's political activities.

And if the gossipers are correct, Dinan's fall is not to be tempered by an easy berth at the Richmond station. It is stated that Captain James Kelly, the Spanish war veteran, will not make the change easy for Dinan by assigning him to station duty as an acting lieutenant, but will detail him to patrol duty.

Thus Dinan, for years one of the best-known police detectives in the West, must again don a uniform and probably perform the duties of a patrol sergeant.

Coincident with Dinan's removal from the detective bureau, it became known that a certain police captain also had incurred the enmity of the powers that be by open activity for Schmitz.

For a time it was undecided whether or not to bring him to trial for political activity, but after much discussion the higher powers decided that it might be best to leave things as they were, and allow the matter to drop.—Wasp.

NO ENGAGEMENT, BUT THE MAID THOUGHT SO

A very amusing yarn is going the rounds these days about a certain extremely handsome and debonaire young son of Mars, who has the reputation of being one of the most accomplished love makers in the service. He flits daily from one flower to the next as the expression goes, with never a serious idea in his head, but with the most marvelous assortment of endearing terms and honeyed phrases which of course he doesn't expect for an instant the "dear girls" to take seriously. But now, alas and alack, he has chosen the wrong flower, for the fair maid of the younger set, who has been the latest victim of his devotion, has made the fatal mistake of taking him at his word and she has been confiding to all of her most intimate friends the news of her engagement, for it has never entered her head that a man could speak so freely of love, and not mean an engagement. He is away at present, but is expected back soon, and those who know him and his ways, are wondering whether he will make good his promise to the gullible young thing, or whether he will boldly disillusion her and once more be free to flirt.—Wasp.

'PURPLE MOTHER' IS KEY TO WILL CASE

There is no surer way for a millionaire to earn sincere gratitude than the one that leads to a contest in a probate court. It ensures him the gratitude of lawyers if nobody else. So to the ashes of A. G. Spalding I extend my felicitations. The millionaire manufacturer of sporting goods and promoter of profitable amateur athletics made the right kind of a will, one that gave his sons the firm conviction that he had not given them a square deal. He left the bulk of his millions to his second wife who, I believe, expects to be nominated successor to Mrs. Tingley, the "Purple Mother" of the Point Loma theosophical cult. A few months ago a fortune was intercepted on its way to that esoteric retreat. It was the fortune of a lady disciple of Mrs. Tingley. One of the men on the premises married her, and she bequeathed him her fortune. Along came a son who broke the will. As the Spalding sons had the good sense to employ John J. Barrett of this city for their attorney, I believe it quite likely that they will break their father's will. My belief has the wish for a father, for the Blavatsky cult that Walter Q. Judge transplanted has money enough.

To break the Spalding will it will probably be necessary to show that the old man was under the influence of the "Purple Mother," and doubtless before the contest is over we shall have a few peeps into the mysteries of Point Loma, where the sacred rites practiced by the "Masters of Antiquity," as Mrs. Tingley calls them, are performed. A very interesting place is Point Loma, as was learned during the trial of Mrs. Tingley's libel suit against General Otis. There is a sacred dog down there called Spot, who serves as a tenement for the soul of Walter Q. Judge. An inspired dog is Spot. He can distinguish between friend and foe as soon as either appears at the gate. As the head of the cult of theosophy, Judge appointed Mrs. Tingley his successor. I believe he whispered the appointment to her on his deathbed. As the whisper wasn't very loud, some folk did not hear it and there was a contest in the courts over the question of transmission.

Mrs. Tingley, I am told, is a remarkable woman. She is remarkable for her magnetic power and persuasive personality, which have been made manifest by the faith she has inspired in men and women. During the trial of the libel suit she was driven to court in state every day. Millionaire Spalding sat on the box with the driver like a footman. Another millionaire received her at the door. She had cabinet officers, all millionaires, one of whom had been in the cabinet of a president of the United States. It was said at the time that a millionaire manufacturer of Boston used to squat at the door of the purple room as a guard whenever Mrs. Tingley went into executive session with the "Masters of Antiquity." It was clear that these masters used to visit her because she kept books and these books showed that she used to receive large sums of money from them.—Town Talk.

MAYOR'S POEM GOOD; BUT WHO COULD BE AUTHOR? IS QUESTION

Some society women of New York have published a book called "Little Verses and Big Names," the proceeds from the sale to be for the benefit of poor children. he "big names" are the names of prominent men throughout the country who have tried their hands at "little verses" in the good cause. Our own Mayor Rolph is among them. He contributes the following:

If I were the Mayor of a City,
Where only the grown-ups remained,
And nowhere were voices of children,
And nowhere the infant reigned;
If baseball, and coasting and marbles,
Were labeled "The Law Forbids,"
I'd close up my desk in a minute
And move to a Country of Kids.

We boast of our painters and poets,
Our leaders in science and law,
Our baankers and brokers and statesmen,
Our captains of commerce and war,—
If gathered all great names together,
Since Caesar held sway over Rome,
I'd not take the whole of their glory
For one kiss of the kiddies at home.

And now the question is, who wrote this for Mayor Rolph? For Mission Jim is no poet. Unlike his predecessor, Doctor Taylor, he is not even a facile stringer of rhymes. We learned that when he attempted some banquet doggerel at a World's Fair function. Who is the poet laureate of the city hall? Certainly not Ed Rainey, the mayor's secretary. Ed is prosy, not poetical. I suspect Sylvester McAtee, the assistant secretary, who looks like William Butler Yeats.—Town Talk.

KREISLER WOULDN'T PLAY; GOT LIMOUSINE

Your temperamental prima donna with her haughty head full of sudden cranks and unexpected quirks is not the only artist whom the impresario finds it difficult to manage. There is also the masculine artist, subject to strange alarms, his breast tormented by ever recurring misgivings. If you don't believe me, ask Will Greenbaum, the veteran entrepreneur of our town. For a few nerve-racking hours one day last week it looked to Will as though there might be no Fritz Kreisler recital at the Greek theater. The great Austrian fiddler told Will Greenbaum that he was afraid the October cold of the Berkeley foothills might chill his fingers and make playing impossible. Will scouted his fears.

"But I was chilled to the bone last night when I played at Stanford," said Kreisler.

"That is strange," said Will. "The assembly hall where you played is a comfortable place, properly heated."

"Nevertheless I was very cold," said the violinist.

By discreet questioning Greenbaum elicited the fact that Kreisler had motored from John Rothschild's home at Menlo Park to the hall at Stanford in an open car. Next he discovered that Kreisler was going to Berkeley in Alfred Hertz' motor car, which is also an open car. He did not dare suggest a closed car to Kreisler lest the violinist should take fright, fright being worse than the cold air for temperamental artists. What to do? That was the question. Greenbaum conferred with his chief of staff, Selby Oppenheimer, and it was resolved that Hertz must be consulted. The result was that Hertz agreed to leave his car in the garage, to accept a limousine ordered by Greenbaum and take Kreisler to Berkeley without exposing the priceless fingers to the cold night air. And it was so done. It may sound like a little thing, but the worry of it gave Will Greenbaum a gray hair.—Town Talk.

ANOTHER HONEYMOON COUPLE TO COME HERE

Eastern society is very much interested in the news of the approaching nuptials of Mrs. Eleanor Elkins Widener to Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice of Newport. Mrs. Widener, who is the aunt of Mrs. Felton Elkins, was one of the "Titanic" widows, her husband, the late George D. Widener, a multi-millionaire of Boston, and her son Harry, both having lost their lives when that gigantic liner struck an iceberg. Since then Mrs. Widener has spent much of her time in Newport and 'twas at the dedication of the two million dollar library she recently caused to be built in memory of her husband and son that she met Dr. Rice, who is a noted South American explorer. Mrs. Widener has two children, Mrs. F. E. Dixon and George D. Widener Jr., who is a very popular beau of Newport's 'smart set. Dr. Rice intends bringing his bride out to the Exposition on their wedding journey and they will, of course, be taken right to the heart of "Blingum," where the Elkins family have always been extremely popular.—Wasp.

SOCIETY "BABIES" ARE SEEN ON THE SCREEN

One of the most amusing and interesting entertainments given in some time was the affair given by the Fred Kohls at their magnificent new home, "The Oaks," to celebrate their twelfth wedding anniversary. For some weeks prior, Mrs. Kohl had been stealthily collecting pictures of all of her guests taken in the days of short socks and pinafores, and when after dinner her guests were treated to glimpses of their childhood thrown on a large magic lantern screen, there were shouts of laughter. Several nice fat chubby babies with very little on to hide their youthful charms, were the subject of no end of jests and a great deal of speculation, as they appeared life size on the screen. Mrs. Kohn, who was Miss Elizabeth Godey of Washington, gave up a professional career to become the bride of Fred Kohl twelve years ago, she having studied music for several years with the idea of going on the operatic stage.—Wasp.

A MARRIAGE IN DIPLOMATIC CIRCLES

Society here is extremely interested in the news of the engagement of pretty Miss Helen Tower to James H. R. Cromwell of Philadelphia, as San Francisco has become very well acquainted with both families, for Miss Tower and her mother were guests here a month or so ago and young Cromwell's family have only just left us.

Helen Tower is the older of the two Tower girls, daughters of Charlemagne Tower, the noted diplomat, and granddaughters of G. Frank Smith of Oakland. In spite of the fact that Mrs. Charlemagne Tower originally hailed from California, neither of her daughters had ever visited here before, they having spent most of their lives in the foreign capitals of Europe.

Miss Tower, who is a girl with ambitious to a degree, announced while still a schoolgirl, her intention of making a brilliant marriage and with this in mind, she insisted upon having a very complete education. So when going on a trip to Alaska she met Charlemagne Tower. After their marriage, Mr. Tower was made ambassador to Berlin, where his charming wife became a great social leader, the kaiser referring to her as the "Von Moltke of society," the highest honor he could bestow upon her. From there they went to Vienna and later to Petrograd, where they continued to hold social sway and, of course, their two daughters soon became as accomplished as their talented mother. Both girls speak four or five different languages and inherit their mother's gift of wit and repartee.

It was not until the Tower family returned from Europe, a year ago, and settled down in the ambassador's old home in Philadelphia, that the fair Miss Helen met young Cromwell. He, it seems, is the youngest son of that extremely smart matron, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, whose first husband was the late Oliver Cromwell, a descendant of Oliver Cromwell of England. When Mr. Cromwell died some years ago, he left his handsome widow a large fortune, and three small children, Louise Cromwell, now Mrs. Walter Brooks Jr., Oliver Cromwell Jr., who is to be married in a couple of weeks to Miss Hope Truxton Beale, of Philadelphia, and James H. R. Cromwell. Young Cromwell and Miss Tower plan to be married very soon after Oliver Cromwell makes Miss Beale his bride, and society is hoping very keenly that they make San Francisco their Mecca, as other honeymooners have done.—Wasp.

DISGRACEFUL EXHIBIT OF SHOWMEN'S GREED

The incident in connection with the dismissal of the aviator, Pettirossi, seems to show that the veneer of our civilization is even thinner than we had suspected. It is an incident disgraceful to the Exposition and reflective of disgrace upon the city itself. Pettirossi, it seems, has not placed his life in sufficient peril by his daily exploits in the air. The crowds attracted to the Exposition by the possibilities of tragedy have been disappointed by flights that end day after day in monotonous safety. The thrills created by the desperate performances of Lincoln Beachey, performances that ended in his frightful death, have evaporated and are not being satisfactorily renewed by his successor, Pettirossi has therefore been warned by Mr. Connick and Mr. Hardee—if we must trust the newspaper report—that he must "show more stuff;" that is to say, that he must place his life in greater danger. A subsequent report describes how the unfortunate aviator tried to comply with this cruel demand by performing the 'elongated loop," involving a fall of 800 feet. But even this was not sufficient to satisfy the appetites of Connick and Hardee, who have accordingly canceled Pettirossi's engagement and have announced the return of Art Smith, who has presumably guaranteed to furnish the public with a full half-dollar's worth of horrid anticipation.

The Argonaut hopes and believes that Connick and Hardee have misinterpreted the public demand for sensationalism and that they have done no more than express their own brutal vulgarity. But unfortunately these persons are in a position of authority, and they will use that authority to the continued disgrace of the Exposition unless they are checked by those with the necessary authority to do so. Has Mr. Moore nothing to say to such savagery as this? Does he countenance this direct invitation in a repetition of the Beachey horror? Is he willing to rival the barbarisms of the Roman amphitheater in order that a few additional dollars may be paid at the admission gates? If this shameful thing is to be allowed there seems to be no reason why we should not frankly revert to the honest savageries of the gladitorial combat, while to ban the innocent bull fight becomes mere hypocrisy. If Pettirossi's successor should meet the fate that was undoubtedly forced upon Beachey there need be no hesitation in saying that Connick and Hardee ought to be indicted for manslaughter. For that will be the precise designation of the offense.

The Argonaut does not believe that the public wishes to see a human being incur a deadly danger for its holiday amusement, or that an understanding public would sanction so demoralizing an exhibition. There seemed to be no pretense in its lament for Beachey, and surely one such horror is enough without deliberately purchasing its repetition by pecuniary inducements so high that human nature can hardly resist the bribe. If the public actually desires this sort of exhibition, if it is willing to tolerate it, then we had better stop the cant of the agitation against war and the appeals to the communal conscience that evidently does not exist. No reward can be too great for a display of useful skill and daring, but that the Exposition authorities should actually demand of a human being that he incur the deadliest and the most useless of dangers for the already sated pleasure of a holiday crowd is almost unbelievable. Once more we ask if Mr. Moore will use the necessary influence with the under-strappers of the Exposition in order that this disgraceful business may be avoided?—Argonaut.

CYRIL TOBIN LATEST OF THE BENEDICTS

Cyril Tobin has embraced the state of "Benedick, the married man" at a beautiful ceremony in New York. Cyril lost his heart to a charming New York belle, Miss Ruth Haskins, some time ago; and the romance has won him the felicitations of all his friends. Father Robert Sesnon of Mill Valley went East to perform the marriage ceremony, which took place in the home of the bride's parents. From all the accounts in the New York papers, it was one of the prettiest weddings of the season. Arthur Rice of Boston was Cyril Tobin's best man, and the ushers were Gayle Anderton of this city and Henry Fairfield Osborn Jr. of New York. The bride's attendant was her sister, Miss Noel Haskins. Only relatives and a small company of friends were present. Cyril's friends are waiting eagerly to greet his bride when he brings her here to live.—Town Talk.

FAIR SOCIAL FAVORITE MAY WED, IS HEARD

I should not be at all surprised to hear of the engagement of one of society's most favored daughters to an extremely eligible and attractive youth, who for the past two years has been her constant attendant at all of the dances. He is considered one of the cleverest dancers in town, while she herself is not a beginner at the gentle art, she finds much more to do in life than dance. For she is one of the most strenuous charity workers of the younger set, belonging to numerous charitable societies which demand no small amount of her time. She is the oldest of two sisters, and while perhaps she is not quite as pulchritudinous as her younger sister, she possesses a sparkling wit and is brim full of personality. The wise ones say that the young cavalier's devotion is soon to be rewarded and that the first of the year may see the fair maid a matron.—Wasp.

POOR COBB! BUT IT WAS ONLY A JOKE

Irvin Cobb's recent tour brought him to Los Angeles and Pasadena for war lectures just when the book dealers of the southern city were receiving their first consignments of his brilliant war book from the New York publisher. Having been apprised of this in a letter from his publisher, Cobb decided to make the rounds of the book stores and learn at first hand how the new work was selling in Los Angeles. It had had a triumphant debut all over the East, and Cobb was naturally eager to see it properly displayed and advertised on the book counters of a far western city. So he waited a day or so and then, in company with Charles E. Van Loan, the short story writer, and Edgar Selwyn, the playwright, started out to interview the book men. It was morning when he asked his two friends to accompany him, the tour was made in the afternoon. In the meantime Van Loan and Selwyn had telephoned to the head of every retail book department in Los Angeles. The result was that in every book shop Cobb entered a conversation like this took place

Cobb—Have you "The Paths of Glory?"

Salesman—Is it a novel?

Cobb—No, no. A war book.

Salesman—A Civil War book?

Salesman—Haven't got it. Who wrote it?

Cobb—Irvin S. Cobb.

Salesman—Never heard of him. Any relation of Ephraim or Ty?

Cobb endured this sort of thing in half a dozen places, and the strain was harrowing. It was a chastened Cobb who entered the seventh shop. The same humiliating result. Cobb could stand it no longer. He just managed to control his feelings long enough to tell the impassive book salesman:

"Say, friend, I want to tell you something. 'The Paths of Glory' is a good book. I wrote it myself!"

Behind his broad back Van Loan and Selwyn indulged in a furtive but ecstatic handshake. Cobb doesn't know yet what happened. Van Loan and Selwyn didn't think it safe to tell him.—Town Talk.

STRIKING TRIBUTE PAID MAKER OF GARDENS BY MAYOR OF CITY

Mayor Rolph made a speech Saturday, when the school children of San Francisco honored John McLaren, the horticultural wizard of the Fair. It was a glowing tribute to the superintendent of Golden Gate park and the genius of the Exposition gardens.

"John McLaren is my friend," declared the mayor. "He is the friend of my household. We not only honor him, but love him too."

And then, turning to McLaren:

"I want to say to you, John McLaren, that in my home as in the homes of thousands of San Franciscans, your name is a byword!"—Town Talk.

MRS. JUDGE SOON TO RETURN FOR HOLIDAYS

Mrs. J. Frank Judge writes to friends that she and her husband will shortly leave Salt Lake for New York and plan to return to San Francisco in time to spend the holiday season here, where, as usual, they will be entertained by the Jacklings, as Mr. Judge is associated in business with the copper magnate. The Jackling party is expected home shortly from Alaska, enthusiastic letters of their trip having preceded them.

Mrs. Jackling is said to be in the market for some of the finest of the pictures at the Exposition, and there is much speculation about her choice, as the purchases will add to the art collection of San Francisco, and even though privately owned, will be a stimulus, for Mrs. Jackling is the sort who would count it an honor and duty to lend from her collection for exhibitions for the general public. Like Mrs. Will Crocker and others who have masterpieces in their private collection, Mrs. Jackling has a sense of community identity which should make those who cannot afford to own works of art glad that occasionally they fall into the possession of people who love to share their artistic blessings.—News Letter.

OPERA HOUSE URGED FOR CITY

A number of the old guard in the former movement to reestablish a worthy theater to become the dignity of San Francisco as a metropolitan city are quietly at work again endeavoring to materialize their long cherished project. This time more expressions will be made to the hot point. The diplomacy proposed in the new campaign is expected to produce favorable results. At present there is not an opera house in the West that possesses the dignity and capacity commensurate with the new position which this section of the country is now taking in the affairs of the nation. San Francisco, as the metropolis of the West, is the logical and geographical location for an opera house on a scale that would properly grace our Civic Center. If the idea is not launched within the next year, it will be forthcoming in the very near future, for San Francisco, after absorbing so many aesthetic ideas from the Exposition, will never be content until she finds means to continue to gratify her tastes along such uplifting lines. During the present year she has listened to the music of some of the greatest orchestras in the world, and to most of the great singers, and she will be restless and discontented till her longing for these delights are restored through an opera house worthy of the new San Francisco.—News Letter.

HERE'S A QUESTION THE BOOK DIDN'T ANSWER

Out at the Exposition, a publishing house is displaying a set of books purported to contain answers to every question that a child may ask. And as youthful curiosity knows few bounds, the books are pursuaded in many volumes, ranging with information intended to satisfy the most inquisitive youngsters.

The publishers claim that no question emanating from the childish brain cannot be answered from the books, and to prove this contention parents are invited to bring their young hopefuls to the booth and coax from them all of the questions their young minds can conjure up, so that the publisher's agents may delve through the heavy volumes and produce the answers in black and white.

A few days ago a prominent clubwoman, who had heard of the books and was eager to know more about them, walked up to the booth with her 3-year-old son.

"'Robert," she said to the toddler, "You can ask this man anything you want to know and he will tell you."

The lad hesitated a moment. Then he spoke up:

"Why is it, mister," he queried, "that a choo-choo car has to have wheels to make it go and I don't need any wheels to make me go?"

The answer was not in the book.—Wasp.

NEWS AND GOSSIP FROM BROADWAY

Gotham's Landmarks Passing

(By WALTER K. HILL)

[illegible] are being sadly violated by the [illegible] of New Yorkers more and each year. Theaters run in memo- for playgoers of other decades are [illegible] converted to business or else turn shelter entertainments won't seem almost as absurd a few ago.

[illegible] of tradition which made [illegible] of Shakespeare daily almost sacred other days has been despoiled, at [illegible] Theater, by the interjection of [illegible] mely common type of burlesque per- [illegible] upon its stage; the Garrick, [illegible] Charles Frohman formerly and [illegible] presented its great dramatic [illegible] is also just turning to burlesque. [illegible] stage where, in their day, Harri- & Hart delighted their thousands of [illegible]rs with the Irish comedies of old York life; and, perhaps equally hard [illegible]alize, what was not so long ago the Theater with its idealistic embodi- [illegible]nt of ultra-higher dramatic art, is a music hall.

[illegible] but what vaudeville or burlesque [illegible]sic hall entertainment is not thor- [illegible]y to the liking of several millions [illegible]mericans; but the transition and the that such change have really come [illegible] the passing of Daly's, the Garrick the New Theater to less purposeful events rather noteworthy.

MATTER OF "NAMES."

[illegible]ish newspapers have started a [illegible]ign against certain brands of Amer- [illegible]made films, based upon the premise they are really German productions [illegible]ded to assiduously work upon the [illegible] of the English populace in these [illegible] when there is so much agitation [illegible] enlistment. Several firms of [illegible]ican film-makers have been long- [illegible]ished in the English market, sup- [illegible] films that have dominated the [illegible]ams in the "cinema's"—as picture [illegible]s are designated over there.

[illegible]er before have the German-sound- [illegible]ames of many American manufac- [illegible] attracted any attention. When the [illegible]eak of hostilities cut more than half [illegible]sport of American films, producers [illegible]dly complained, and this new pro- [illegible]da bids fair to further curtail their [illegible]n output and add proportionately [illegible]eir commercial griefs.

MUST PAY TAXES.

Treasury Department at Washing- has ruled that foreign actors must income tax while they are filling [illegible]rican engagements. This will estab- have a practice which has all along [illegible]ed in England, where American [illegible] filling engagements in the music and dramatic theaters, for a suffi- length of time for the tax man to [illegible]er their presence, have been com- [illegible] to pay a share of their salary to [illegible]pport of the crown.

[illegible]ry season there comes to the [illegible] States several hundred alien [illegible]vaille performers, who augment the [illegible]rican acts in providing programs for [illegible]ig and little circuits. These foreign have, therefore, escaped any sort [illegible]xation while at the same time they [illegible] playing here American artists in [illegible] and have been assessed for a given- [illegible]ntage of their income—and the money [illegible]ned by the theater manager, taken [illegible] of the salary envelopes, and turned [illegible] to the English treasury agents.

[illegible]re Americans, who, in many in- [illegible]es, stay abroad for two or three the deductions from their salaries [illegible]come tax amounts to a pretty com- [illegible]able sum. There will now be an even- [illegible]up of scores, for the aliens must give [illegible]eir American salaries a portion to [illegible]ort the government that affords them opportunity to work at profitable fig- [illegible]nere while war upsets the markets [illegible]eir talents at home.

ONE GIRL'S SUCCESS.

[illegible] York and its maelstrom of vaude- opportunities is always inviting to stage entertainer, just as its big invite the visitors from interior with money enough to make the to linger on Broadway while an extra is being made upon the First Na- Bank at home for footing the bills. [illegible]ung men and women spend years of lives playing through the country [illegible]eparation for their debut in New and after all the self-schooling [illegible]ng inland scenes, its the wise vaude- person who knows just when he or is ready for the important step— [illegible]g it on New York."

[illegible]nave "the goods" ready is one thing; [illegible]liver them" at the given opportun- another, and that's why the success Nan Halperin scored when she first [illegible]ed her foot upon a New York vaude- stage is altogether noteworthy. The [illegible]e spent in preparation, the audi- inland, that she had practiced upon, [illegible]ime she had devoted in perfecting [illegible] move attuned to the drift of her songs—even to the twist of a finger or the glance of an eye—proved that through [illegible]peration, plus opportunity, insures success upon the stage as surely as it does in less treacherous pursuits.

DOMESTIC LIFE? NO.

Nobody can blame the talented amateur for longing to make the fight that is necessary to success upon the stage when such an experienced and talented headliner as Miss Clarice Vance admits that it is impossible to live domestically content after once reaching the topmost rung in the profession.

Says Miss Vance: "After working hard and consistently to make a place for myself among the leaders in vaudeville and achieving my ambition to a degree that was welcomed by managers and public, I decided to accept the anti-suffrage argument and take my place at home. It was all right for one season, and I enjoyed the novelty of watching my friends in vaudeville doing the work while I looked on."

But to be perfectly frank, there was ever present the tugging lure of stage life, the excitement of the calling I had abandoned and I have finally decided to take the suffrage end of the argument and leave the home to the housekeeper for a while. That's why I have just signed contracts to go back to vaudeville; to sing my new songs and change the sim- [illegible] [illegible] for the [illegible] [illegible] opportunities of making the public laugh with me at the drolleries of the characters I shall sing about."

Hardeen, Famous Handcuff King, in Vaudeville

Alexander Pantages, always scouting for new acts, has turned the vaudeville "scoop" of the season, according to advices from New York, in capturing for his circuit the famous "Hardeen," acknowledged the greatest handcuff expert in the world. Hardeen is the older brother of Houdini, also famous as a handcuff artist, and is the man who taught his brother the first rudiments of the art of making escapes. For years they traveled together as the Houdini Brothers, laying the cornerstone of their fame, and lately they have starred separately. Harry Houdini under the original name and his brother under the name of Hardeen. Hardeen has been decorated by the rulers of Europe, and has baffled every big prison in the world.

He will play shortly at the Oakland Pantages, having already started his tour of the circuit. He is the highest-priced illusionist in the world.

Hackett Can Run, Too, and He's Going to Prove It

Norman Hackett, Macdonough star, is an athlete as well as an actor. Not only that, but he thinks he's a better athlete than Phil Mason, and he's going to prove it by a race in the near future. There's a hat up for a prize—and perhaps the race may be pulled off at some charity benefit as a special attraction. They're going to do 250 yards, with John Wray, Macdonough stage director, as timekeeper and Chief of Police Woods (who can use a gun off the stage) for starter, if he'll consent to officiate.

Mason was boasting of his athletic prowess when Hackett mentioned that he, too, had a little reputation as a college athlete and a runner. The challenge followed.

Dropped Earring; Too Much for Fair Madje

Mlle. Nadje, "The Perfect Woman," maintains that she's also a perfect lady, and that's why she refuses to wear earrings in her act any more. The fair athlete, well known in Oakland, where she has appeared at the Pantages and lately at the Hippodrome, met with misfortune in her act the other night—all because of a bead earring.

"It fell down my neck," she explains, "and I couldn't get it out. I'm a perfect lady, and couldn't reach down my back for it, there on the stage. Never again on the jewels in an acrobatic act!" The Hippodrome star is followed this week by a notable new show.

MACDONOUGH

"Bought and Paid For," one of the greatest American "dramas of the century," opens at the Macdonough Theater this afternoon with Virginia Brissac as Virginia Blaine, the role originally played by Julia Dean, and Norman Hackett as Robert Stafford, the part first rendered by Charles Richman. This is the first time "Bought and Paid For" has been offered in Oakland at popularr prices, the only other presentation being with the New York company, with which comparison is invited.

"Bought and Paid For" is the work of George Broadhurst, the author of the greatest number of dramatic and comedy successes which have entertained New York and the entire nation for the past ten years. Broadhurst sprang into popular favor with his rollicking comedies, such as "Why Smith Left Home" and "What Happened to Jones," and has maintained a more dignified position in the Hall of American Dramatic Fame by his greatest play, which is playing at the Macdonough this week, and his more recent play, "Today," which has proved quite sensational. There must be no confusion over this play, it being likely that "Paid in Full," which played here in stock, bears a somewhat similar name.

The story of "Bought and Paid For" has been the most popular and most interesting story staged, and the magazines have carried the novelized tale into every home in the country, and yet this is the first opportunity Oakland has had to see the Broadhurst drama. The cast will include, other than Virginia Brissac and Norman Hackett, John G. Wray, who plays the role of James Gilley, which was first played by Frank Craven; Gene Yarborough, who is seen for the first time here in a suitable role; G. Lester Paul as Oku, a study in Japanese, and Charlotte Treadway.

ORPHEUM

There will be marked congratulations extended the Oakland Orpheum when the news that Grace Van Studdiford, the "queen of light opera," has been secured for a week at the Temple of Vaudeville on Twelfth street, beginning today. The former star of "The Golden Butterfly" and "The Red Feather" and "The Paradise of Mahomet"—the operas written by Reginald de Koven—is in glorious voice, and her witching personality and great gifts as an artist will all be in evidence to charm theater goers at the Orpheum next week.

Women musicians are not so plentiful as to cause their appearance to cease to be a novelty. Particularly true is this of organizations. There have been in this country not over one-half dozen women bands and orchestras of any consequence, and of this number one of the most important is the orchestra conducted by Miss Augusta Dial, known as "Sixteen Navassar Girls," which will share honors next week with Grace Van Studdiford.

"Here and There in Vaudeville" is the title of the splendid act in which James Kelso and Blanche Leighton are making such a hit. The value of a laugh has never been more thoroughly demonstrated than by this talented team.

Miss Brownie Dupont is a perfectly-formed woman whose lines are clearly defined as those of the cameo. She is the main factor of Jesse L. Lasky's optical novelty, "The Aurora of Light." This animated statue poses in a huge seashell while by electrical effects innumerable exquisite pictures are made to blend to her form.

Eugene Damond is the youngest violinist in the world. He is frequently compared with Ysaye, with whom he studies. Ysaye was so enthusiastic over his pupil that, upon the occasion of Damond's first public appearance, he presented him with a genuine Stradivarius of the period of 1740, the value of which is about $1350. Musicians rave over this youth's genuine remarkable technique and his wonderful bowing.

"A Night in a Monkey Music Hall," presented by Miss Maude Rochez, is a remarkable exhibition of animal training, for these simians give an entire vaudeville performance from beginning to end, even including the orchestra, and all done without a single person on the stage to direct them.

Devine and Williams, with a lot of new hits of wit, will send their songs and comedy traveling across the footlights right to the folks out there in a fashion that is the pride and joy of every conscientious artist.

Brooks and Bowen have written several of the most popular songs of the day, among that number being "All Night Long" and "Some of These Days." In vaudeville they are singing not only their own compositions, but are telling exceedingly humorous stories.

HIPPODROME

Six brand new vaudeville acts and three feature films make up the new show to be offered at the Hippodrome this afternoon. Heading the vaudeville features will be the famous Gene Muller Troupe of five people—the last word in hoop-rolling. Their performance of juggling and rolling hoops is nothing short of marvelous, and has made them one of the best-known and highest-salaried acts in vaudeville.

Bessie Bacon, daughter of Frank Bacon, makes her first Oakland vaudeville appearance at the Hippodrome this afternoon in the comedy sketch, "Her Wedding Day." She is a winsome little actress, and has surrounded herself by an excellent company, including her mother, Jane Bacon, one of the best character actresses on the stage, and Wilfred Roger.

Rodway and Kelly, who call themselves "The Boys in Black and Tan," are two of vaudeville's foremost black-face comedians.

Goodhue, a novelty banjoist, and his prima donna have an unusual musical offering, and with the Ambler Brothers, sensational equilibrists, complete the vaudeville attractions.

PANTAGES

"Little Miss U. S. A.," one of the brightest of the season's new comedies, replete with strikingly original music, the famous "Beauty Chorus" from one of New York's big comic operas, and several recognized comic stars, including Nell Halpin and Robert Milliken, is one of two big headline features at the Pantages for the coming week. The other big attraction is the creation of Ober and Dumont, the famous dancers, who, with a clever corps of dancers, offer something entirely new in the big dance creations of South America, home of the Tango and other dances even more remarkable, although less known.

Fun will be added to the bill in a screaming hit by Paden and Read, a continuous laugh in black and white, and Will and Kemp will be seen in acrobatic oddities that have surprised vaudeville in Europe and the East.

Tom Kennedy and Ethel Burt, two of the most famous of vaudeville's farceurs, appear in a mixture of comic songs, dancing and jokes. This is not an ordinary "song and dance" turn—but a connected and very logical bit of work.

Lady Betty, "the monkey who thinks," by performing tricks as she alone can. This Simian marvel was pronounced by Professor Herschfeld, of Harvard, the only monkey in the world with a distinctive personality.

A new and striking motion picture offering is also to be seen with the coming Pantages bill, this to be a worthy success to the Griffiths hit presented last week.

OAKLAND PHOTO

The picturization of "Zaza," which is the feature of the show, commencing at the Oakland Photo Theater this afternoon with Pauline Frederick in the celebrated title rôle, is all the more interesting because an actress is found who is willing to brave comparison on the screen with the work of the distinguished women who have made the rôle famous on the stage.

Deprived of the important medium of the voice, Miss Frederick must rely utterly upon the power of pantomime, an art which the French have always been adepts. But those who have seen the great screen artist in her wonderful emotional interpretations of the leading roles in "The Eternal City" and "Sold," in which she has already starred, will be the first to declare that Miss Frederick is the one woman who can approach this stupendous task with a justifiable expectation of success.

The marvelous sympathy with which the star has interpreted the complex character of the Paris music hall singer is a monument to her phenomenal histrionic powers. It is one of the most exacting roles ever created, and it shall remain to the undying credit of Pauline Frederick that she has made of it the master work of her career.

On the same program which will be seen for the last time on Tuesday evening will be the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "The Chalice of Courage," a picturization of Cyrus Townsend Brady's fascinating human interest story of the same name.

FRANKLIN

Few plays have found their way so thoroughly into the hearts of the American public as has J. M. Barrie's "The Little Minister," which, under the title of "The Little Gypsy," has been picturized for William Fox and will be presented at the Franklin four days, commencing today. The original stage production was Maude Adams' greatest success and was hailed by critics the country wide as a distinct event in the drama and marking an epoch in the art of the theater.

Dorothy Barnard, one of the most winsome and daintiest of dramatic stars, appears as Lady Babbie, the part created and made famous by Maude Adams. Thurlow Bergen, one of the most popular leading men on the screen, plays the role of Gavin Dishart. The other interesting characters of the piece are played by a well-selected cast and in many of the big scenes hundreds of extra people were used.

The story of "The Little Minister," or "The Little Gypsy," is one of touching beauty and stirring romance. Tender love interest alternates with scenes of elemental power showing the clash of strong human natures and the primordial passions of men and women.

A two-reel comedy and a Hearst-Selig News Pictorial are also included in the bill.

Orpheum Head Coming on Annual Tour of Circuit

Martin Beck, managing director of the Orpheum circuit, has started on his first tour of the circuit this season. He was accompanied by his attorney, Louis N. Sonnonberg, and his personal representative and a Japanese valet. The first stop made was in Chicago, where Mort H. Singer, Beck's western manager, joined the party. The itinerary made St. Paul the next stopping place, and then Winnipeg. The remainder of the Canadian theaters of the Orpheum circuit will then come under observation before the party moves along the coast south to Los Angeles, where they will turn inland, Ogden, Salt Lake City, Denver, Lincoln and Omaha and the remainder of the cities in the middle west will be visited before turning south and finishing the tour by looking over the Orpheum theaters in Memphis and New Orleans.

Before leaving New York Beck said that he expects this season to be the brightest and most prosperous for many years past.

Charity Workers Are Active on Fighting Lines

PARIS, Oct. 16.—There are now in the district forming the entrenched camp of Paris 1443 charitable organizations working for the relief of victims of the war and more than 400 hospitals, which afford accommodations for about 40,000 wounded.

The four regular military hospitals, the most important, have now forty annexes. The Red Cross hospitals number about 300 and there are 28 convalescent establishments, five independent hospitals, American, English, Japanese and Russian.

The workrooms for unemployed women have multiplied to a greater extent than the hospitals, now numbering 520.

There are 225 different societies looking after the needs of refugees, 69 employment offices, 15 free dispensaries and 195 various organizations for the distribution of clothing and for lodging and feeding the needy.

Besides these organizations for material relief there are numerous groups, not registered, whose purpose is to provide cheer and comfort to soldiers at the front.

PHILADELPHIA BASS TANGO.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 16.—Good night to the tango. New York can have that worn out and overdone species of the terpsichorean art if it wishes it, but Philadelphia, no, no!

Members of the Philadelphia Dancing Masters' Association in session on the grand pier declined positively to be convinced to the contrary even after Professor Morris Eschner of Atlantic City with the aid of a music box and two young women partners, had endeavored to demonstrate that what he called the New York standardized tango was an ideal dance.

New 'Movie' Language Coming

EXPRESSION, NOT VOICE, TELLS STORY

Predicts New Mode of Acting

A new language for the screen, which, like the latest form of dramatic art, is entirely silent.

This is the idea of Douglas Fairbanks. Mr. Fairbanks is among the younger group of recruits to the screen drama from the speaking stage, who take the newer form of dramatic art very seriously and are constantly looking into the future for newer developments and improvements.

In the not very distant future Mr. Fairbanks sees an evolution of the silent drama.

"Lines in the dramatic production," said he, at the Reliance studios, during a pause in the filming, "are, after all, merely commentary by the players in the screen upon the situation, except at a moment of great dramatic stress. They express merely what the actors are acting upon the stage to give a moment so the lines can be dispensed with easily. Even at a critical moment the situation is generally better if the lines are left out. It is much stronger for an actor to act out a demand that another man leave the room, for instance, than merely to state it.

"Now for the new language of the moving picture drama. There is a man sitting over there at table with a group of men. He is angry. His face, his manner, his whole personality express it. He is disappointed. This is mirrored to the standing over here. He is disgusted. He is in sorrow, and the same thing is true.

"Now for the new language of the motion of a man across the room. It is equally possible to act before a camera all the great emotions and even to act a definite situation without the use of lines or sub-titles. This is what I mean by the coming language of the moving pictures.

"Gradually audiences will become accustomed to concentrate upon the acting. They will thus become educated in the newer language as rapidly as it develops.

"When this language is perfected it will be easy to express any emotion upon the screen without the aid of sub-titles, and it will be a very flexible language, also. Each player will have a different manner of expressing given emotions or situations. Thus the newer language will be kept from becoming conventional or formal and will always possess variety. When this time comes directors will order their players not to speak lines and move their lips and jaws as they do at present. I think that the present usage is often ridiculous.

"Then when the newer language has come into full use we shall see greater and better pictures, for the art will then have attained to very high developments.

The Stage and Stage People

Peggy Rush, the leading lady of Frederick Harrison's Haymarket theater company, London, which will present the London success, "Quinneys," at one of the Shubert theaters, New York, early this month, is a Chicago girl. Miss Rush was taken to England by her parents when she was 4 months old, her parents being Americans. She is now in her eighteenth year and made her first success in musical comedy at the Shaftsbury theater, London.

Miss Virginia Glenn, the champion amateur dancer of the United States, has been selected as the new dancing partner of A. Baldwin Sloane, and will appear with him nightly at Castles in the Air and Ice Palace, atop the Forty-fourth Street theater, New York City.

Messrs. Laurillard and Grossmith have obtained the English rights to "The Road to Happiness," in which William Hodge is at present appearing at the Shubert theater, New York City.

Miss Haidee Wright has been engaged for an important role in "The Two Virtues," in which E. H. Sothern will shortly appear at the Booth theater, New York. Miss Wright, four years ago, visited this country with Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson on his first American tour. She returned to England and made a hit as Aunt Gertrude in "Milestones." Last season she received very favorable notice as the Duchess of Gillingham in "Evidence."

"Alone at Last," the new Viennese opera by Franz Lehar, composer of "The Merry Widow," will have its first performance at the Adelphi theater, Philadelphia, October 4. Prominent in the cast will be Jose Collins, John Charles Thomas, Roy Atwell and Harry Conor.

The latest addition to the cast of the new LaSalle play, "The Girl of Tomorrow," is Della Evans, widow of the late George (Honey Boy) Evans of minstrel fame.

An idea for a novel number in "The Girl of Tomorrow" occurred to Joe Howard on the trip with the company from New York to Chicago. A child entered the company's car carrying a large "Teddy bear." It took Howard just one hour to complete the lyrics and music for the new song entitled "Bachelor Bear."

Andreas Dippel's incomparable production of comic opera, "The Lilac Domino," will play an engagement in this city during the season. The tour this season will include all of the large cities as far west as Chicago. The unprecedented success of the opera in New York and Boston last season will doubtless be duplicated, if not surpassed, this year, since vast improvements have been made, notwithstanding the fact that such a thing as an improvement to a seeming perfection has been considered impossible. Miss Helene Morrill, the high vocal soprano of operatic fame, so well known in Paris, Berlin and Milan, who requires no other introduction than the mention of her high vocal registers, has been engaged for the stellar role of Georgine and Mrs. Humbird Duffey for the principal tenor role.

One of the strangest coincidences is the fact that two of vaudeville's best known comediennes and ragtime specialists were born Becker, although they are not related to one another in any way. The two Beckers are better known to patrons of the Orpheum circuit as Belle Baker, "The Bernhardt of Ragtime," and Ruth Roye, "The Princess of Ragtime." The nature of their specialties come under the same classification; there is very little difference in their ages; they are about the same height, and they were born within ten miles of one another. However, until just over a year ago they had never met, and neither had they seen one another on the stage.

Henrietta Crosman has a new playlet under way. It has been written by her husband, Maurice Campbell, who was also the author of "Thou Shalt Not Kill," which was Miss Crosman's vaudeville vehicle last season. The new act is not quite ready.

A story was published during the engagement of Dorothy Jardon at the Palace theater, New York, last week that Miss Jardon rubs herself with tiger fat to give her the grace of the big cats. A suggestion from the same source intimates that Gertrude Hoffmann, soon to be seen on the Orpheum circuit in "Sumurun," ought to admit she is rubbed down with bear grease to fit her bare-skinned dances in "Sumurun."

Evelyn Nesbit, with Jack Clifford, will play a return tour of the Orpheum circuit this season, beginning at Kansas City on November 14.

McIntyre and Heath, who were booked on the Orpheum circuit for just five weeks, have rearranged their affairs in the legitimate sufficiently so that they have been able to accept an extension of their vaudeville engagement for three more weeks, at St. Louis, Memphis and New Orleans.

Nazimova, after a triumphant tour with "War Brides," that has kept her busy since last January, will play her first return engagement on October 18, when she again brings "War Brides" to the Majestic theater, Chicago. The following weeks she will play St. Louis, Memphis and New Orleans.

Lina Abarbanell, late star of "The Merry Widow" and "Madame Sherry," and as sparkling an artist as those two characters, who made brief flutter into vaudeville last year, has again deserted the legitimate and will be seen at the Palace theater, Chicago, the week of October 11.

One of the novelty playlets of the season is "The Clock Shop," the new vehicle for those favorites, Sam Chip and Mary Marble. "The Clock Shop" is a musical fantasy by John Golden that was originally presented at the Lambs' all-star gambol.

That sweet-voiced imitatrice, Belle Blanche, who was caught last season in the whirl of Broadway revues and lost to vaudeville for a time, will begin a short tour of the Orpheum circuit at Memphis on October 11.

When Alice Lloyd is seen in vaudeville again this season there is good reason to believe it will be as a member of a team, the party of the other part being her husband, Tom McNaughton, the famous English comedian. It ought to be a very strong combination.

GET "HELLO" HABIT IS ADVICE

U. C. Student Criticises Conditions Existing at State University.

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—Get the "Hello" habit is the advice of a junior student at the University of California in a public letter addressed to the Daily Californian, the campus journal. There is a lack of congeniality among the students at the University of California and a tendency toward "snobbery," while at the other universities there is the spirit of democracy. His letter read as follows:

"To the Editor—Visitors to the campus have said that there is a marked lack of congeniality. As an instance, a student of one of the northern schools visited at the University of California; he also visited Stanford when he was here. He said that while many people spoke to him there as he passed them on the Quad, he [illegible] here and not have one speak to him.

"It seems that the northern colleges have a lesson that would be good for us to learn. I was a student at one of these schools before I attended here, and know just how he felt.

"When we speak to one another people will naturally wonder where they met us, and in that way we can all become better acquainted. And this spirit of heartiness is carried to the bleachers—this 'speak or we tub you' spirit that these other schools know and practice. It puts fight into the team, 'jazz' into the rooting section, and has helped win games for Stanford and Washington.

"In college we should not depend upon a formal introduction for our speaking acquaintances. Even if college life may be a secondary matter to many who live in Berkeley, Oakland and San Francisco, the 'hello habit' is a good one to acquire, it costs no effort to address a fellow student when you pass him, and is a good tonic for one's sociability."

SUSPEND CLASSES FOR FORESTRY CONVENTION

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—No classes in forestry at the state university will be held next week in order that students in the department of forestry may attend the sessions of the annual forest industry conference during forest week to be held in San Francisco and the bay cities. The first session will begin Monday morning at 10 o'clock, when the Society of American Foresters will convene.

Prominent men from the United States and British Columbia forest service, government experts, professors and lumber men will deliver papers and discuss the various phases of the service, industry, conservation and field open to the American forester. The conference is a joint congress of the forest protective organizations of the Western Forestry and Conservation Association, the Society of American Foresters and the American Forestry Association.

D. T. Mason, professor of forestry in the University of California, will address the morning session of the first day's meeting, speaking on "The American Forester: What Society Has Done for Him." Other prominent lumbermen and forestry experts will follow him, and several new conservative and protective ideas and thoughts will be brought out in the discussions and readings to be held during the congress.

ATTORNEYS MAKE MERRY AT RELIEF CORPS TRIAL

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—The mock trial staged by prominent attorneys of the bay cities under the auspices of Lookout Mountain Woman's Relief Corps No. 35 and G. A. R. Post, Friday evening, at I. O. O. F. Hall, Berkeley, proved a far greater success financially and in every way, than was anticipated. The hall was packed with friends of the organizations from San Francisco and neighboring cities. The trial was in the form of a breach of promise suit and from the opening to the rendering of the verdict by the jury, the audience was in a roar of laughter.

Judge William O. Minor acted as presiding judge. The attorneys for the plaintiff were H. W. Brunk, Samuel M. Shortridge, Lin S. Church and George F. Knowles were attorneys for the defendant. The plaintiff in the case was Sadie Stiles Thompson, the defendant P. S. Brunk; witnesses, Tom Reed, A. S. Olney, Albine Nielsen, jurors, F. T. Robson, Walter Gompertz, Christof Hoff, E. T. Harms, Wells Drury, Superintendent Morris C. James, Fred W. Foss, J. E. Streightiff, A. H. Broad and Mrs. Thelen.

The verdict of the jury resulted in a judgment of $100,000 for the plaintiff.

The affair was in charge of the executive committee of which Mrs. Nettie Campbell is the chairman.

Prof. Mead Urges Amendment Favors Rural Credit System

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Oct. 16.—Elwood Mead, professor of rural institutions, University of California, and member of the state rural credits commission, is a strong advocate of the plan to establish a rural credits system in California, and urges the approval of constitutional amendment No. [illegible], to be voted on at the election of October [illegible]. Professor Mead has made an exhaustive study of rural conditions, and is convinced that the future prosperity of agriculture in this state rests with the adoption of this constitutional amendment.

"The farmers and settlers of California," he states, "who have to borrow money pay more than double the average interest rate required of farmers in countries which have a rural credit system. Agriculture cannot develop under this handicap. The farmers of this state, with no rural credit system, pay from 6 to 12 per cent interest on loans running from three to ten years, and often with excessive commissions for securing the loan or its renewal.

"Notwithstanding California's great natural advantages of climate, soil and [illegible] a halt in rural development. Over 1,000,000 acres of land susceptible to irrigation is uncultivated and awaiting settlement. Another million acres could be irrigated if a demand for land and water was assured.

NEEDED FOR GROWTH.

"The settlement and cultivation of these lands is needed to insure the continued growth and enduring prosperity of our cities. We ought in this state to produce more butter, meat, cheese and wool. We need more farms devoted to raising horses, cattle, hogs and sheep. The alfalfa fields need to be extended, the livestock grown thereon multiplied.

"This cannot be hoped for until existing financial obstacles are removed. Interest rates must be lowered, the time for repayment of loans must be extended and, more than all else, there should be some organization that will give aid and direction to beginners, so that unimproved land may be converted into habitable and productive farms with the least possible effort and waste of money and time.

"We want to attract the young, virile and ambitious. We want to keep the red blood on the farm. We are not doing these things now. A recent investigation of the University of California showed the average age of settlers in new developing districts to be about 45 years. Men ready to retire from active life buy farms—the boys and girls flock to the cities.

"A recent report issued by the United States Government shows an increase of [illegible] in the population of California during the last five years. Seventy-three per cent of this increase was in cities and towns of 5000 and over. The increase in farm population was so small as to cause anxiety and lead to believe that changes in existing methods are desirable.

SETTLERS ARE SCARCE.

"Selling land to settlers has become so difficult that commissions to land salesmen have reached the incredible figures of 25 to 29 per cent of the selling price. Reliable men engaged in the business say that even with these extraordinary commissions they are not prospering. When one considers the attractions of rural life in this state there is no other conclusion except that this halt in development is due to vital defects in our policies.

"Two such defects are plainly apparent. Both are susceptible to removal if we set about it. The first is absence of aid and advice to settlers in the purchase and improvement of farms. The second, the high interest rates, the short time of repayment of loans and, in many cases, the inability to borrow money on any terms.

SUCCESSFUL ELSEWHERE.

"The introduction of rural credit systems in other countries has in every case been a financial success and a benefit to all classes of people. It has extended the area of land cultivated; increased the acreage yield, and led to the building of better houses, to rendering the social life of the farm more attractive, has tended to keep the boys and girls on the farm and check the drift to cities and to other countries. Nowhere has it been either an agricultural or financial failure, and these great results have been accomplished in each case without any disturbance or loss to the existing commercial banking institutions. Australia has, perhaps, the most liberal and most highly organized rural credit system of any country, but the introduction of this system has not injured the commercial banks. They have been more prosperous since its introduction than before, not a single bank has failed and the dividend rate last year varied from 5½ to 14 per cent, with liberal increases in their reserves.

"It is hoped that the voters will adopt the rural credits amendment and thereby empower the legislature to establish a system which will give California farmers the same credit advantages as those enjoyed by most of the farmers of the civilized world."

NEW BELT LINE WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

RICHMOND, Oct. 16.—Work of grading the branch track from the Santa Fe line to the Richmond pressed brick works is being rapidly pushed to completion and within a few weeks the work of laying rails for the permanent railroad will be commenced. With the opening of the line the entire waterfront section of Richmond will receive an immediate increase in business activity.

The Richmond Pressed Brick Works, formerly the Los Angeles Pressed Brick Works, and connected with the southern enterprise, plans to greatly enlarge its activities with the opening of the track. It is estimated that the brick output of the company will be increased from three to four times its present rate of manufacture. Superintendent John G. Gerlach is arranging to bring to the works large quantities of the Amador clay which is especially valuable for the manufacture of pressed brick.

The line will be operated under a contract with the Santa Fe railroad, which it will enter by a switch near Ferry Point.

ESCAPES FOEMEN; SO DOES HIS SAFE

Intrepid Turkos First of His Race to Receive Legion of Honor.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The first and only trooper of the Turkos, or French black troops from Senegal and Algeria, to receive the Legion of Honor from the French government, is a thick-set, coal-black, middle aged infantryman who went through one of the queer experiences of the war.

While operations were active at the front a short time ago, it was determined to fall back from a given point, and this Turko was given the small steel safe containing 50,000 francs in government funds to carry back to the new position. He was given a donkey and started off with the safe and treasure.

Suddenly, however, all the plans of removal were interrupted by a German raid, which swept the Turkos and all other troops, with their horses and supplies, into the utmost confusion. Many were killed and the whole force was badly scattered. It was taken for granted that the Turko with the safe and treasure was certainly lost, as even those not burdened with heavy loads had been swept away in the impetuous raid.

Some days later the French outposts were astonished to have the Turko, with the safe on his back, trudge into camp. His donkey had been killed, and for three days he had been inside the German lines carrying a steel safe on his back. He never let go of the safe. When the Turko lines were swept into confusion by the machine gun fire, he first lost his donkey, and then with his safe crept under some bushes.

The German lines rushed past his hiding place and he was left behind the German lines. He kept concealed during the day and at night, with the safe on his back, picked his way forward through the German rear guard to some new hiding place. This was kept up until at last he trudged into the French camp and laid down the safe and treasure before the astonished French colonel.

They gave him the Legion of Honor, and the whole regiment was drawn up as he received it from the representative of the government, who gave him the acolade or kiss of honor on his coal-black face.

COLLEGIANS PLAY LOVE FANTASY

Granville Barker's "Prunella" Is Produced in Greek Theater.

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—"Prunella," rich in song and replete with mirth and merriment, was produced this evening in the Greek theater by the English club of the University of California. This Granville Barker creation was something new to the usual staid and stern English club plays and instead of the Shakespearean form of production the college audience was amused by the antics of Pierrot and the shy coquetry of Prunella.

Miss Ruth Hammond in the part of Prunella, together with William Rainey in the role of Pierrot, stood out as the premier performers, and the secondary roles were also well portrayed. Miss Dorothy Epping as Tawdry and Miss Dorothy Wetmore as Doll interpreted their parts very creditably, while Miss Nelly Walker as Quaint and Miss Josephine Dunne as Romp [illegible] clever.

The settings of "Prunella" were totally different from any previous English club play, in that they were much more elaborate and artistic, as well as original. The play was laid in a delightful Dutch garden, with trees, hedges and shrubbery in profusion. In the center of the garden a fountain, on which was the statue Love, splashed, and at one side a low-gabled Dutch house was set. With this setting and with the fantastical garments of the players the piece had a splotch of originality that gave a swing to the piece. Pierrot in his jester costume and Prunella in her chic cap and ballet dress fitted in well with the setting. The cast of characters was as follows:

Boy	J. E. Krueger
First Gardener	H. J. Sussdorff
Second Gardener	Thornton Wilson
Third Gardener	K. C. Kaufman
Queer	Miss Ruth Doggett
Prunella	Miss Ruth Hammond
Prim	Miss Dorothy Riedy
Privacy	Miss Bertha Galloway
Prude	Miss Hazel Hollingsworth
Quaint	Miss Nelly Walker
Pierrot	W. S. Rainey
Scaramel	H. B. Scarborough
Kennel	O. R. Caldwell
Callow	J. B. Day
Mouth	T. L. Withers
Tawdry	Miss Dorothy Epping
Doll	Miss Dorothy Wetmore
Romp	Miss Josephine Dunne
Coquette	Miss Camille Purdy
Love	E. A. Breyman
Tenor	J. S. Candee

MELROSE TO GET FLYING SQUADRON

Complaint of Citizens Bears Fruit With Council After Conference.

MELROSE, Oct. 16.—A flying fire squadron will be furnished this community as the result of a complaint of insufficient fire protection made by a committee of representative residents who appeared before Commissioner Jackson yesterday. Heads of the fire department were taken into consultation during the interview and Commissioner Jackson assured the delegation that a fire department flying squadron would take care of the Melrose district, and that in future the fire-fighting service there would be the equal of any in the down-town district. The local fire station will be enlarged and a big and speedy auto fire truck will cope with fires in the neighborhood.

The promised improvements will be brought about as the result of an agitation by local improvement organizations, including the East End Civic Center. The following committee from that body met Commissioner Jackson: Mrs. Harry L. Boyle (chairman), Mrs. A. Busch, Mrs. W. D. Parrott, Mrs. George Ingraham, Mrs. L. H. Lahr and Mrs. S. C. Burgis.

The agitation for more adequate fire protection came to a head with the burning of the home of Charles A. Calhoun. It was claimed that the firemen were handicapped in fighting this fire through an insufficient number of hydrants.

HARD SURFACE HIGHWAYS NEEDED

Sentiment for Military and Commercial Roads Is Widespread.

(By J. A. HOULIHAN.)

That military preparedness for defense includes extensive road construction, viewed from the standpoint of the country as a whole, is made apparent in sentiment which comes from the Atlantic seacoast, out here on the Pacific slope, and even the Gulf of Mexico.

Recently the Alabama legislature unanimously passed a joint resolution, prepared by John Craft of the state highway department, and, of course, assented to by Governor Henderson, which calls upon the President and Congress of the United States "to take such steps as in their wisdom appears to be most expedient to bring about at the earliest possible moment the construction of a national system of good roads." It is set forth in the preamble that "a great war now being waged in Europe demonstrates that a national system of good roads is essential to the successful protection of a country in the event of war."

At the recent Pan-American Roads Congress in this city, among the resolutions adopted was one in which the congress recommended "to the Congress of the United States the advisability of investigating the necessity of building a hard-surface highway along the Pacific Ocean side, from Mexico to British Columbia, and other national highways, to be used as military and commercial highways."

Earlier in the year, at a meeting of the Maine Automobile Association, the chairman of the state highway commission contended that the first federal money spent in that state should be in connection with a system of roads paralleling the coast, to serve particularly in case of military necessity.

At the October meeting of the executive board of the American Automobile Association, with President John A. Wilson presiding, a resolution was passed, at the suggestion of Chairman Diehl of its national good roads board, "that the American Automobile Association respectfully asks the Congress, in its consideration of federal aid in good roads to the several states, to bear in mind that highways constructed in seacoast and border states should possess a relationship to the military preparedness of the country which is demanding such widespread attention."

The state and local clubs of the American Automobile Association are calling to the attention of their representatives in Congress this action of the national automobile body, and also asking that a bill shall be passed providing for an annual federal appropriation, divided among the several states on the basis of area, population and road mileage, to be supplemented by a like amount of money from the states, and the total to be expended on post and military roads selected through the co-operation of the respective state highway departments.

GASOLINE COMPANIES IN STIFF COMPETITION

The latest skirmish in the so-called gasoline price war between the Standard Oil Company and the independent dealers in the St. Louis district has developed into a test of indurance between the belligerents. Ten days ago the independents raised the price of all grades of gasoline 1.1 cents a gallon and announced that this was the first of a series of increases.

EVEN DISTRIBUTION OF WEIGHT IS ESSENTIAL

There must be a close relation between the weight distribution on the front wheels and the weight distribution on the rear wheels, according to Howard B. Rector, agent for the Marmon line. He says:

"It is to get a more even weight distribution that many manufacturers do not use unit power plants.

"Foreigners have given a great deal more attention to this point than Americans, with the result that there is practically no foreign car built with what is known as the unit power plant. It is this close attention with these small details that have given the foreign car such wonderful riding qualities at high speed. The prospective buyer of the high-quality car might do well to spend a considerable amount of time in looking into the balance of his car as a whole."

NOV. 16 IS DATE OF NEXT STATE MEETING

The next meeting for the delegates of the State Automobile Industries Association will be held at San Jose on November 16. It will be one of the largest, if the plans of the Garden City association work out. The latter place has one of the strongest organizations in the state body. Continual betterment work for the automobile business is carried out there. The San Jose association has succeeded in introducing several important measures in the city council, which have carried, one of the more recent being the ruling prohibiting smoking in any public garage.

A selection will be made of the city in which the next tire-changing contest is to be held. Secretary Smith of Oakland intends to make a fight to get the contest for this city.

In the next affair there will be three representatives from each of the cities having membership in the state organization, and the outcome will decide a champion in this particular field of endeavor for California.

John Gordon of the C. A. Muller Company and Eugene Soto of the Park Auto and Tire Company of Alameda, winner of The Tribune contest, will, in all probability, be two of the three contestants chosen from Oakland.

CITY OF BERKELEY BUYS FOUR CHEVROLET CARS

Berkeley city officials will now ride in style. There were four spick and span new Chevrolets delivered to them yesterday by the Mathewson Motor Company, and they were at once put into service.

For the exclusive use of the city councillors is a Baby Grand Chevrolet touring car. The department of public works is given two roadster models, styled as the Royal Mail model, and the health department will have a roadster to cover the official calls of that branch of city government.

SCENIC IDEALS WILL DRAW TOURISTS

Pacific Coast Will Be Touring Grounds for Wealthy Class.

"The success and the popularity of the Lincoln highway this year has proved to Oakland and San Francisco that from now on this vicinity is to be the objective point of the motoring public of the United States," says Hays "Speed" Eckert, resident manager of Earle C. Anthony, Inc., distributers of Reo cars.

"The Pacific coast, and especially California, has already been accepted as the future touring ground for the leisure touring class.

"The wonderful scenic attractions here especially have at last been recognized.

Non-Stop Motor Run Astonishes Motorists

Chandler Performance Wins Praise From Many Sources

The remarkable performance of the Chandler Six' party in driving from the Mexican boundary through California, Oregon and Washington to the Canadian line without once allowing the motor or the wheels of the car to stop moving was such an unheard-of feat of endurance that the motoring public was loath to credit the same when news was first flashed over the wires.

Sufficient time now has elapsed to convince even the most skeptical that the Chandler 'Six' did succeed in traveling from boundary to boundary without once stopping its motor or the wheels of the car. In addition to the observer on the car who was a disinterested party, at all the principal cities en route Chandler dealers and newspaper representatives acted as observers and verified the statement that in their respective cities no stops were made by the car.

"The difficult feat of making an 1800-mile run without once stopping the car for any purpose whatsoever," stated E. L. Peacock, president of the E. L. Peacock Auto Company, Chandler distributors for Northern California, "was accomplished by the Chandler 'Six' party because they fully prepared for every conceivable situation which might arise and which would have a tendency to mar the success of the trip. For instance, when gasoline was to be taken on, one member of the party would run ahead of the car which would be going slowly, get the gasoline at the supply station, and by means of a long funnel pour the gasoline into the tank while walking alongside of the car. Oil was accomplished in the same way. When it was time to eat all but one member of the party would hurry in advance of the car to the eating station and grab a hasty lunch, then rush ahead and catch up with the machine. Sleep was taken in relays.

"This is the first time in the history of motoring that an automobile has been able to travel for nearly 2000 miles under its own power without once stopping for any purpose. When this trip was first suggested I did not believe it could be done. However, with the absolute proof before me that the Chandler 'Six' did accomplish this remarkable tour, I will have to adjust my ideas regarding the limit of the possibilities of the modern automobile."

Peacock further stated that all along the route from San Diego to Vancouver the Chandler party met with only the kindest reception from city, county and state officials, from railroad men and traffic officers, and that the party deeply appreciated the interest they and the general public took in this enterprise.

APPERSON EIGHT IS GOOD SELLER

The success of the Light "8" Apperson has been very pronounced. The building of an eight-cylinder car by the pioneer company is a fitting climax to its long career as manufacturers of quality automobiles.

For 1916 the Apperson Company will build six and eight-cylinder chassis, with several styles of bodies.

The eight-cylinder chassis will take a seven-passenger body and a four-passenger roadster. The list price being $1550.

"Our eight-cylinder car," according to John Fremming of Fremming & Browning, "like the long line of predecessors, is an Apperson product. By that we mean it represents the effect and labor of Elmer and Edgar Apperson, the two men who have worked side by side for over twenty-two years in the development of this business."

Eastern Auto Head a Visitor Here

F. G. CHANDLER, Pres. of the Chandler Motor Car Co., a notable local visitor.

GOODYEAR CO. GIVES HINTS TO TRUCK MEN

"Saving Dollars on Truck Tires" is the title of the first of a series of folders just issued by The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company's Service Department. They aim to show how the driver of any truck on any make of truck tires, can obtain maximum mileage by observing a few simple rules.

Many booklets of instruction and sets of rules for pneumatic tires for pleasure cars have been issued by tire companies, but the truck has hitherto received less attention. Now that trucks are taking an ever greater part in transportation and haulage, the subject of truck tires and their upkeep is of interest and importance to more and more people, and the Goodyear series is very timely.

SCENIC IDEALS TO DRAW TOURISTS

(Con. From Preceding Page)

from the East that hundreds of motorists will ship their cars West this winter when the snow has filled the highway. They will remain here for the winter, and when the Lincoln highway is opened in the spring they will return home by this accepted route.

"It is now up to us to meet these tourists and make their visit so attractive that they will not only return, but will be instrumental in bringing others westward.

"Along this line Oakland, San Francisco and every other city of importance should set aside certain portions of blocks in the congested districts where motorists may be able to park their cars. This is a very simple matter to handle, as it will only be necessary to indicate that only cars bearing foreign licenses shall be parked at the places designated.

"This in no way will confuse the present regulation that will tend toward higher efficiency, and at the same time show the visitors that we appreciate their presence.

IN NEED OF CIVIC ADVERTISING.

"It is civic advertising, and that is what California needs most at this time. We must follow up the advantage of the advertising we have gained through the big Exposition.

"The pessimists have all along entoned the prophesy that there will be a reaction when the gates of the 'big fair' close. To offset any such condition we must take advantage of the touring attractions to make the state the playground of the United States.

"While the motorists will not number as great as the fair visitors, yet statistics prove that the amount of money they spend more than makes up for number of visitors. This is the class that we must cultivate. Money is what makes the wheels of commerce turn, so let us do everything possible to keep business in the high gear."

OVERLAND SALES EXCEED ALL RECORDS

Increase in Production of More Than 137 Per Cent in Six Months.

A new shipping record was established by the Willys-Overland Company on September 29, when 627 cars left the factory.

During the past four months the production of the Overland factory has grown tremendously. In June the shipments averaged 329 cars a day. Before the end of August this was increased to 5?? a day.

During September shipments again showed a marked increase, each week in the month being larger than any of those preceding. In the four days from September 27 to 30 inclusive 2233 cars left the Toledo plant. On the last Wednesday of the month 627 were shipped, a new day's record for the company. From April 21, when the shipments of new models first began to leave the factory, up to September 30, the Willys Co. had shipped 49,977 cars. During the same production period, on last year's models shipments amounted to 21,428 cars.

Six — Model 86 — $1145 f.o.b. Toledo

Just "Six" Facts—

To you who are confused with and weary of long drawn out aside-from-the-point arguments, we present these Six important basic facts:

The Overland Six has a wheelbase of one hundred and twenty-five inches.

Many a Six—costing more—has a shorter wheelbase.

The Overland motor develops full forty-five horsepower.

Many a Six—costing more—has considerably less power; considerably less speed.

Many a Six—costing more—has a smaller tonneau; hence less comfort.

The Overland Six has 35" x 4½" tires with non-skids on the rear.

Many a Six—costing more—has smaller tires.

The Overland Six has high tension magneto ignition.

Many a Six—costing more—has not.

All Overland electric control buttons are on the steering column—within reach.

On other Sixes, that cost more, they are not as conveniently located.

These few major items alone should, we believe, convince any intelligent buyer of the downright wisdom and out-and-out economy of selecting an Overland Six.

HIGH GAS PRICES MAY STILL BE HIGHER

Jump in Crude Oil Increases Necessity for Economical Motors.

It is an ill wind that does not blow some good. This is quoting the old saying ... F. W. Warren, vice-president of the Oakland Motor Car Company ... in the recent raise in gasoline prices and the trend to still higher prices.

After mentioning the fact that the price of crude oil in the Oklahoma fields had increased nearly ... per cent, Mr. Turner states that in his opinion there need not be the slightest apprehension among manufacturers of motor cars as to the rising prices of gasoline affecting the present demand for cars.

"One thing I have always contended—and the officials of the Oakland Motor Car Company agree with me in this—is that economy in gasoline consumption would eventually be a problem that engineers of motor car companies would have to solve. Our company started experimentation along this line several years ago ... when we brought out the first commercially successful high-speed motor in this country, as applied to a motor car for carrying passengers, that, although we were then pioneers, we would see the day when the high-speed motor would be universally demanded."

NEARLY $1,000,000 IN FEES.

Motor vehicle registration fees in New Jersey, for the eight months of this year, were $980,160, which is $165,655 in excess of the total fees collected for 1914.

MAKE AUTOS ON SCHEDULE TIME

Big Factories Turn Out Cars on Scientific Basis.

Before his board of directors the general manager of one of the leading automobile building concerns of a few years ago ... to cover the contract ... cars, instead of the ... he had just ...

The directors ... the executive a ... and declared there were ... prospective automobile owners in the world.

It is the executive who tells the story. He is one of the biggest men in the industry today. The directors and the company they directed vanished some time ago from the active list.

Men of the same type as this early optimist have been back of every automobile manufacturing success in Detroit and Michigan. Their early efforts in manufacturing were crude and hectic. But, with time and experience they have developed their optimism into a entire lines and have organized plans of production and distribution so efficient as to bear creditable comparison to any industry of long standing.

The Maxwell Motor Company, for instance, began its production of the present model in July with a definite schedule of production and delivery for every car of the 60,000 to be built. Each day's work of their plants in Detroit and at Newcastle and Dayton was laid out in advance. Each car in this schedule was definitely assigned a certain Maxwell dealer. Its date of shipment formed part of the dealer's contract and the contracts covered the whole fiscal year. It was arranged to give each dealer his cars in carload lots. For long distances trainloads were dated weeks and months ahead.

Tips That Help the Owner

Simple Rules for Reducing Upkeep

The exterior of the motor and transmission should be cleaned frequently. Where so much grease is used, it is almost impossible to keep from getting more or less of it on the outer side of the mechanical parts.

Clean, bright-looking mechanical parts should be a source of considerable satisfaction to the car owner. Frequent cleaning enables the operator to discover loose nuts, bolts and cotter pins that otherwise would go unnoticed until trouble occurs.

Tire chains, when used, usually become so dirty that handling, in order to replace them into the burlap or canvas sack provided, is unpleasant. A good method is to grasp them with the thumb and forefinger only and hand the chains to a hook protruding from some part of the car. Then slip the bag over the chains from underneath.

A mirror of the round, vest pocket type is a handy addition to any tool outfit. It may be used either in the daytime or night to reflect the rays of light into dark places of the car when seeking a lost nut or cotter pin.

A good many cars are now provided with means of accommodating the driver of exceptional proportions. Adjustable pedals are now the rule on carefully built cars, while individual front seats readily admit of considerable change of position without adding materially to construction cost. Adjustable steering columns likewise are not unknown, though less easily introduced into the design. Heretofore the comfort of everyone except the driver has been sedulously attended to. Hereafter it will be very much otherwise, particularly in view of the growing feminine contingent behind the wheel.

One of the commonest causes of demagnetization is improper handling of magnets when and after removing them from magnetos. For this reason the manufacturers object strenuously to the removal of magnets except by those who are fully qualified to do such work as it should be done.

Every time a magnet is made to "stick" to a piece of iron or steel and then pulled away, some magnetism is lost.

If a magnet is dropped, or struck, or otherwise sharply jarred, it will lose magnetism. This does not hold true if the magnet is struck while being charged.

Loss occurs if a magnet is left lying around after removal without a keeper—a piece of soft iron placed across the ends or poles.

If the keeper is removed by sliding it from the poles toward the bent part a large proportion—sometimes nearly half—of the magnetism will be lost. Doing this three or four times will absolutely kill the magnet, so far as its use in a magneto is concerned.

Keep the car clean.

Apply brakes gradually. It saves your machine.

Keep grease cups filled and lubricate all parts as designated in the lubrication chart.

Keep clutch and transmission cases cleaned.

When motor is running properly do not tinker with adjustments.

When motor is very cold, do not attempt to drive the car until motor has run from three to five minutes. This may seem like an unnecessary wait, but the operator will be amply repaid for so doing.

When motor is very cold, gasoline is taken into the motor in large globules rather than as gas, consequently combustion is poor, little power is shown, and motor misses badly.

If motor is started and allowed to run a few minutes before starting the car, you will avert much carbon trouble later on, as continued efforts in trying to run the car when motor is cold causes a great amount of carbonization to take place from the excess amount of raw gasoline and poor combustion.

The pedestrian is entitled to consideration.

Learn all you can about the cars and operation of your car. It will save you many dollars.

BLOCK SYSTEM USED AS AID TO TRAFFIC

Traffic on Indianapolis streets now is handled like railway trains—by the block system. By turning the block the corner policeman starts or stops vehicles without the customary whistle signal. At night colored electric lights take the place of the printed sign.

KELLY SPRINGFIELDS CHOSEN BY PACKARD CO.

Kelly Springfield tires are coming in for an increase in factory equipment business for the 1916 season. News which has been sent to L. G. Reno from factory headquarters tell of its choice for at least part of the Cadillac, one half the Packard and most of the Westcott business.

Earlier in the year it was adopted by nearly a dozen other manufacturers.

Locally Reno claims a large share of trade from owners in the higher price car class who, he proudly declares, are willing to pay the increase asked for his product.

MITCHELLS NOW HAVE SEDAN TOP

The cost of all-year driving for Mitchell owners has been materially reduced by the introduction of a new demountable Sedan top.

The demountable Sedan top means an all-the-year car for any and all kinds of weather at the expense of only one car and one body, and the fact that for a very slight additional investment "the six of '16" can be converted into a luxurious inclosed car, suitable for winter use, which will mean a material increase in the winter use of cars.

The new detachable Sedan top furnished on both the five and seven-passenger models is complete in every particular. The interior is attractively lined with whipcord, and a large electric light concealed in the top of the car furnishes an abundance of light. The windshield is built in with ventilating features and the doors open full length. The side windows are removable and can be taken out, making practically an open touring car for moderate weather.

OFFER PRIZES IN ESSAY CONTEST

Studebaker Gives Awards for Best Story on Rear Axles.

The rear axle, next to the motor itself, is the most vital part of a motor car, yet it seems to be least understood, or the ... It was this fact that prompted the Studebaker Corporation to institute a prize essay contest among boys not over 17 years of age for the best article not exceeding 500 words on the construction of the full floating rear axle, as used in Studebaker motor cars, and the advantages it possesses over other types of axles. The essay contest was of a national character and brought several thousand articles discussing the full floating rear axle, coming from almost every part of the country.

Not only do the essays show a great deal of familiarity on the part of Young America with automobile construction, but they developed the fact that the young writers possess a creditable mechanical knowledge. Many of them entered into a detailed description showing how a full floating rear axle relieves the shaft of the burden of the car's weight, at the same time affording greater accessibility to the parts having direct ... efficiency in the car's performance.

The prizes offered in the competition totaled $500.

NEED DIPLOMACY IN NAMING CARS

Tact Required in Choosing Proper Name for New Model.

"The naming of a new National is always an occasion very similar in importance to the christening of a new baby," writes George M. Dickson, general manager of the National Motor Vehicle Company.

"With all the fond relatives ready to suggest names for the baby, it often requires clever parental diplomacy to choose the name that will suit everyone best. At the National factory everyone who has had a directing hand in producing the new model is asked to offer suggestions for a name, the idea being to get a name that will fit the car and, if possible, describe some particular quality that makes the new model different. It certainly was an apt idea when our six and twelve-cylinder cars were named Highway. No name could better describe their physical attributes nor be more suitable to be associated with the prestige that the name National has established."

Asked whether he thought a name had any importance as a selling asset, Mr. Dickson replied: "It all depends on the car. The name Highway certainly is proving a big asset for us in making sales of these new twelve and six-cylinder cars. As one recent purchaser remarked: 'Highway perfectly describes that quality I always knew National cars had, but which I never could find words to express.'"

WISCONSIN AUTO INVESTMENT $70,000,000

At the recent convention of the Wisconsin Bankers' Association it was brought out that there is an investment in motor cars of some $70,000,000 in that state, 90 per cent of which has been withdrawn from banks either by withdrawal of deposits, money borrowed or notes purchased. This condition has caused a shortage of capital.

When Detroit—the Home of Automobiles—makes Studebaker its own "First Choice"—

Can YOU safely buy any other car without knowing what Studebaker offers?

Think!

Detroit makes three-fourths of all the cars made in the entire country. Detroit people—the majority of them—are either directly associated with one of the many manufacturers—or else come in daily touch with the people who are. They KNOW the cars—know the factories—know the organization. Do you think they'd invest their own money in a car unless it was the TOP value of the market?

Fact is that the official registration figures for the first seven months of 1915 show a substantial preference for Studebaker Cars over all other cars listing at $500 and more.

And when Detroit people make Studebaker "First Choice" over every other car listing at $500 or more, what can it mean but that Studebakers give the GREATEST value for the price?

But see the cars—judge for yourself. Ride in them and see on the road, in ACTION, on the hills and thro' the rough going WHY Detroit favors Studebaker above all other cars selling at $500 or over.

PARTS' SHORTAGE DOESN'T AFFECT KISSEL CO.

Preparations at Outbreak of War Give Factory Ample Material.

When the war first began officials of the Kissel Kar Company inclined to the opinion that it would be a struggle of considerable length, would involve the sacrifice of human lives in numbers that had never been paralleled in the history of the world and a struggle that would require the use of basic materials that would drain every source of supply in the world, crippling industries in an appalling manner, unless such dependent industries were intrenched, through rare foresight, against such emergencies.

That early conference by the Kissel officials has since proven itself to have been one of the shrewdest pieces of business judgment that has featured the automobile industry since the great ... the situation as it presents itself today to all present and prospective Kissel Kar owners, both in the line of pleasure and commercial cars. For business with the company, from the very beginning of the war, has been brisk, sales have been rolling up in record-breaking totals and contracts have been fulfilled to the letter in every part of the country. Discrimination against certain territories in the matter of deliveries has never entered into the factory's problems.

"All of this," according to Ben Hammond, manager of the Kissel Kar Branch, "is due to the fact that more than one year ago the conditions as they exist today were properly gauged. I do not mean to the letter, but in a general sense. Preparedness began then in the buying of materials—steels, alloys and metals—on a big scale at prices which prevailed at that time. As a result manufacture of cars in both lines has gone on unhampered. Deliveries on schedule time, fulfilling of contracts and doing even a little better than all agreements has been the history of the company and its branches all over the United States."

NEW OFFICE BUILDING FOR DODGE BROS. CO.

A handsome new administration building has just been completed by the Dodge Brothers at Detroit. It is 400 feet long, 80-feet wide and four stories high. The entire lower floor is taken up by the sales and advertising departments, reception rooms, lobby, etc., while the remaining offices occupy the second and third floors.

The fourth floor is given up to dining rooms and rest and lounging rooms. Messrs. Dodge have a private dining room and there is a cafe for the executives and heads of departments. A cafeteria that will seat 500 is maintained for the benefit of the office employes. A big lounging and smoking room is provided for the men, and the women employes have a beautifully furnished rest room.

ENCLOSED CARS GAIN IN FAVOR

All Around Serviceability and Comfort Make It Popular.

That the enclosed type of motor car is steadily gaining each year in public favor is demonstrated in the fall business of the Cadillac Motor Car Company. Last year this company shipped a greater number of its closed body cars than ever before, and orders now on hand indicate that this season's business will eclipse all past records by a substantial margin.

Among the reasons attributed by Manager Webber of Don Lee's for the heavy increase is the fact that people are coming to appreciate more and more the great comfort to be derived from a type of car that is especially adapted for service every day in the year.

The Cadillac line includes four enclosed body types—the standard limousine and the berlin, each of seven-passenger capacity; the victoria, which accommodates three, and the brougham, seating seven.

In the victoria, one of which is now here, the top, which is of long-grain, bright-finish leather, can be laid back, and the window sashes lowered into the door panels, converting the car into a smart roadster.

TAKE PART IN DISPLAY WEEK

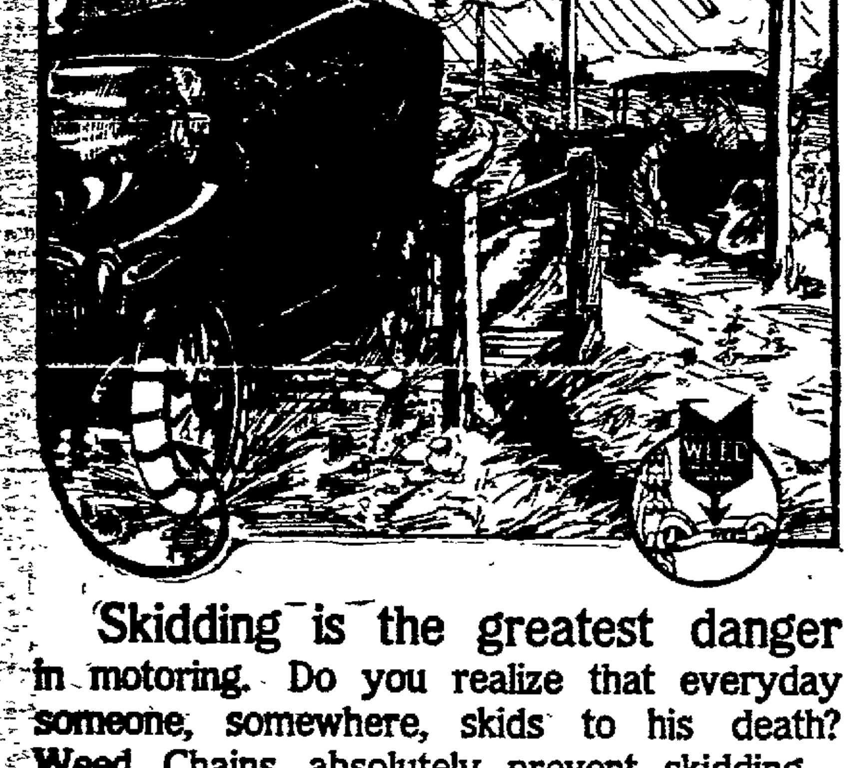

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company was prominent among national advertisers, who sensed the importance of the demonstration made each year by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, in the observance of a national newspaper window display week, which ended yesterday.

In conformity with its past policy of assisting Goodyear dealers everywhere to make the most of their window display possibilities by a striking arrangement of tire products, the company furnished its dealers a standard display specially designed for this demonstration. The decorations were given free of all charges.

Each of these window trims is costly and in the aggregate stood the company a neat sum.

WIFE HAS DISAPPEARED, NAPA VETERAN REPORTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—Major W. McNeill, who is a resident of the Veteran's Home at Napa, reported to the police today that his aged wife had disappeared from her home at 1365 Grove street, in this city. Major McNeil, who is a retired army officer, came to visit Mrs. McNeil and discovered that she had left home and left no clew as to her destination. The condition of the house was such as to indicate that she had intended to be gone but a few hours.

Skidding is the greatest danger in motoring. Do you realize that everyday someone, somewhere, skids to his death? Weed Chains absolutely prevent skidding—then why don't you put them on?

GASOLINE GAUGE IS USEFUL ITEM

Eliminates the Old-fashioned Method of Determining Fuel Supply.

A gasoline gauge might be considered an item of small importance in the equipment of an automobile, yet there are few drivers of motor cars who cannot recall some experience where its usefulness would have been very appreciably felt. For one thing it does away with the old-fashioned method of using a stick for calculating the quantity of gasoline remaining in the tank, which is as uncertain as it is commonplace. There is just as much importance in knowing the extent of the gas supply as in being assured that the crank case has adequate lubrication. Especially is this so in case of a hurried trip.

Studebaker engineers have steadily worked on betterments that mean greater convenience and pleasure in motor car driving. With a gauge on the instrument board of the car it can be told at a glance exactly how much gasoline the tank contains, while it reminds the person whose mind might be occupied with other affairs to look after this important matter. Another usefulness is in the assistance it lends the inexperienced driver in the economical use of gasoline.

A further touch of refinement has been given the lighting and ignition system of the new models through using switches of the rotary type which does away with multiplicity of buttons. By throwing the lever of the lighting switch practically any combination of lights may be secured or the lamps dimmed. The ignition switch is provided with a secure locking device. Headlights on the car can be inclined to regulate the direction of the rays.

Control instruments have been eliminated one by one by the engineers, so that the few remaining are in clear view and within easy reach of the driver. The lighting and ignition switches, the speedometer, the electrical system indicator, the oil and gasoline gauges are all grouped at the center of the dash, with an electric lamp for illuminating purposes. This does away with long reaching for controls, lending ease and gracefulness to motor car driving.

The compactness and simplicity shown on the instrument board of the new Studebakers has not only been commended by veteran motorists, but has played an important part in popularizing the cars with lady drivers.

VELIE SIX IS A NEW ARRIVAL

Frank Bartels, local distributor of Velie cars, is showing the new Velie model 22, a six-cylinder car selling for $1065.

A Velie-Continental motor with removable cylinder head offers, without doubt, the best in power equipment. Separate units are used in ignition, starting and lighting. The spark advance is automatic, removing the necessity and danger of a hand-controlled lever.

A multiple disc clutch, three-speed selective transmission, floating rear axle, rear gasoline tank with vacuum system, long, underslung springs, and an equipment complete in every sense of the word, leaves nothing to be desired in chassis construction.

The body finish is Velie blue. Real leather upholstery and trimming throughout show the experience gained by years of manufacturing.

REAR ADMIRAL FACES TRIAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Rear-Admiral William Little, retired, today faced trial by court martial on charges involving neglect and careless methods in the conduct of his duties while inspector of machinery at the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, Quincy, Mass., in connection with the construction of the submarine U. S. S. K-2. He will be tried in Boston beginning October 18.

The order for the trial, issued by Secretary Daniels, followed an inquiry into the source of trouble in vessels of the K-2 class. In explaining his reason for action against an officer who has been retired after attaining the highest rank on charges relating to duties performed prior to retirement he said that it indicated the department's determination to have the construction of ships conducted with the greatest care.

According to navy officials, trouble with the submarine's storage batteries developed since her acceptance in January, 1914. Defective installation, it was said, caused short circuiting.

LILLIAN LORRAINE IS ARRESTED FOR SPEEDING

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—At the wheel of a large and powerful automobile, Lillian Lorraine, famous stage beauty, who was for three years the star in "Ziegfeld's Follies," and who is in Southern California acting in the movies, was arrested for speeding on the Anaheim boulevard near Long Beach yesterday.

The motorcycle officer who arrested Miss Lorraine declared that she was driving the car at a rate of forty-one miles an hour when he started the chase of the automobile.

In the machine with Miss Lorraine were three friends. The party was returning from San Pedro to Long Beach, according to Miss Lorraine's story to the police.

The arresting officer said that the automobile with Miss Lorraine at the wheel shot past him with the speed of a rifle bullet, and that it was only after a race of several miles that he managed to overtake the machine.

EVANGELICAL PENSION FUND NUCLEUS FIXED

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—The general conference of the Evangelical Association decided today that the nucleus for a pension fund to relieve superannuated ministers should amount to $400,000. The fund will be raised pro-rata by the churches in the various states. Those in Alabama have been assessed $10,000, in California $6,000, Canada $25,000, Dakota conference $15,000, Eastern Pennsylvania $25,000, Erie conference $15,000, Pittsburg $7000, Indiana $42,500, Illinois $40,000, Iowa $25,000, Kansas $25,000, Minnesota $26,000, Michigan $25,000, New England $3000, Nebraska $13,000, New York $13,000, Ohio $36,000, Oregon $7000, Texas $2000, Wisconsin $42,500, Washington $2000.

CHAIR TO HONOR HOLDER.

PASADENA, Cal., Oct. 16.—A fund of $5000 was completed today to establish a chair of biology at Throop College of Technology here to honor the memory of the late Dr. Charles Frederick Holder, naturalist and author who died at his home here Sunday. Dr. Holder was founder of the Tuna Club at Catalina and member of many scientific bodies.

LADY ABERDEEN TALKS SUFFRAGE

"Bound to Come," Says Noted British Leader, Here for Big Congress.

"Suffrage for women is bound to come. I trust it will pass triumphantly at all your state elections."

This is the message of the marchioness of Aberdeen to the women of America.

The noted British suffrage leader now in California, where she will preside at the first International Congress of Women, to be held at the Exposition, plans to aid every suffrage campaign in the country if possible, she declares. Her husband, the marquis of Aberdeen, will accompany her on her travels to suffrage fight centers.

That the end of the war will see a victory for the suffragettes of England is the opinion of the titled visitor.

"A great change," she said, "has come over England, and women formerly identified with the militant party are now aiding their country. People who formerly were strongly against us are now our friends.

"This is due to the fact that the women of England have forgotten for the time their own troubles and have joined to... way possible."

CONGRATULATES WILSON.

"I congratulate your president as much on that as I do on his engagement," she commented. "His example will be followed by thousands. Primarily the marquis and I have come to lecture on civic life and public welfare in Ireland, but I also intend to give much time toward furthering the cause that is dear to my heart, political equality.

"Suffrage for women is bound to come. It will come. I trust it will pass triumphantly at all your state elections."

Lady Aberdeen will preside at the first International Congress of Women ever held in the United State, to meet in San Francisco. This congress will convene on November 1 and continue one week. It is expected that fully 200 notable women from all parts of the world will be in attendance.

SESSION IN AUDITORIUM.

The officers and chairman of departments of the San Francisco district of the Federation of Women's Clubs will act as general hostesses, and will hold a one-day session in the civic auditorium on Monday, November 1. There will be a morning and afternoon session. In the evening the California Club will tender Lady Aberdeen and the members of the Congress a reception in their clubhouse.

San Francisco day, November 2, will be spent in an informal visit to the Exposition.

Federal day, November 3, will result in the appointment of a national committee to urge Congress to take the necessary steps to preserve the Exposition buildings standing on Presidio grounds, for the general benefit of the officers, men and families of the army stationed there. A committee on Permanent Organization of International Congresses will also be appointed. Similar arrangements will be made for the creation of a Pan-American commission to visit South America, and in the co-operation of the Latin-American women with those of the United States.

There will be three monster mass meetings to which the public will have access. The first one will be for the women of the Americas, then there will be a fraternal societies mass meeting to show what women have done in benevolent work.

The Argentine commissioners have promised hearty co-operation, and will tender the members of the International Congress a tea in the Argentine pavilion on the Exposition grounds.

The Century Club will give a reception in honor of Lady Aberdeen, and there will be excursions to San Mateo and Napa, as well as a day in Oakland and Berkeley.

Headquarters are now open at the Fairmont hotel, where the general secretary, Mrs. Jean Sinclair, will receive the membership fees of $1, which entitles a member to a reserved seat, a badge, a program and a vote at the business sessions.

$100,000 FIRE RAZES WHOLE BUSINESS BLOCK

The loss is estimated at $100,000.

The losses include the Bieber and Dunlap store, claimed to be the largest mercantile establishment in Lassen county.

The Milton & Carlisle poolroom, the residences of Supervisor H. E. Wood and P. Holcomb, the Bieber Gazette office and Milton candy store, were also destroyed.

In all eight buildings were razed. All were of frame construction.

The fire started at midnight in the Bieber and Dunlap store. The exact origin is unknown. Some claim that the blaze was of incendiary origin.

The fire raged for two hours before it was controlled.

U. S. FORESTERS PLAN EXPOSITION CONCLAVE

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—"Forest week" will be celebrated at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition from October 18 to 23, and several hundred government foresters, together with hundreds of lumber manufacturers and representatives of the great lumber industry, plan to make the week a feature of the autumn attractions at the fair.

The question of what is being done to conserve the forest resources of California and other western states will be fully explained by members of the United States forestry service at the convention of the American Society of Foresters, October 18. H. S. Graves, chief of the forest service department of the government, will be the principal speaker at the three business sessions of the organization. All phases of the lumbering industry and the conservation of public timber lands will be discussed.

RENEWED DEMAND FOR NON-SKID TIRES

The first signs of winter, which are being felt in San Francisco when the streets are wet from midnight mist, has created a renewed demand for non-skid tires.

"This demand has been especially noticeable in the sale of Lee puncture-proof non-skids," says Lou Lockhart, manager of Chanslor & Lyon Company.

"There is always a greater demand for puncture-proof tires from the desire of owners to be absolutely sure that tires will not have to be changed in the rain.

"Many a tire is doing service now that will go to pieces on the first rain. The fact that this first rainy day is due has caused the owner that is always prepared to check up his tires and put in non-skids and puncture-proof."

VALUABLE ALMOND SHIPMENT.

OAKDALE, Oct. 16.—What is said to have been the largest car of almonds ever shipped from here was sent out by the Oakdale branch of the Almond Growers' Exchange Tuesday. It weighed 57,000 pounds and was valued at close to $10,000.

HOLLAND CAPITAL TO DEVELOP OIL

$5,000,000 Coming to California for Work Undertaken by Shell Co.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16.—Another $5,000,000 of European money is coming into California to develop the oil industry. The Shell Company of California has just been issued a permit by Commissioner of Corporations H. L. Carnahan authorizing it to sell $5,000,000 par value of its preferred shares for cash, to net the company not less than 90. None of this stock is to be sold in California, but is to be taken up entirely, it is understood, by Holland capitalists. The proceeds will be used in the general development work undertaken by the Shell interests in this state.

Wallace Long Investment Company, Long Beach, is permitted to issue 9967 shares to Wallace Long in exchange for real property in Fresno, Imperial and Riverside counties.

Leader Manufacturing Company, Los Angeles, is permitted to issue 500 shares to C. A. Nicholas and W. M. Beidman in exchange for the assets of their co-partnership business.

Amelia Custom Milling Company, Bakersfield, is permitted to sell 15,000 shares, at 25 cents per share, for the purpose of erecting a five-stamp mill in the Amelia district of Kern county for use of various mines.

Red Cap Mining and Development Company of Scotia, Cal., operating ten quartz claims and three placer claims in northeastern Humboldt county, makes application for permission to sell 100,000 shares at 10 cents to net the company the full amount of the selling price. The $10,000 raised, it is estimated, will pay off indebtedness and complete development work preparatory to installing a mill.

Maximoil Company of Vernon, Cal., makes application to issue $13,000 par value of its shares in exchange for the refining plant and other assets of the firm of Murray, McHugh & Murray.

McKevitt Corporation, Santa Paula, makes application for permission to issue $500,000 par value of its shares to Alice S. McKevitt in exchange for all of her properties, consisting of stock, bonds, notes and real property situated in Ventura and Los Angeles counties, which she desires to have managed in corporate form.

O. F. Darling & Co. of Oakland proposes to take over the tailoring business of Pike Woolen Company in exchange for $20,000 par value of its shares and to sell an additional $20,000 worth of stock at par for the purpose of establishing branch stores at other California points.

Pacific Western Commercial Company, San Francisco, makes application for permission to sell 95 shares to Charles C. Haub for $7500.

Butte County Orchards Company of Chico makes application to issue approximately 185 shares to stockholders in consideration of money advanced to the corporation and to sell an additional 165 shares. The company is developing a 320-acre prune orcahrd.

WIRE IN HAT SAVES LIFE.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 16.—A wire frame in her hat saved the life of Miss Lillian E. Woehrle, 20 years old, a stenographer in the recorder of deeds' office, when a machinist's hammer fell from a four-story building on Washington avenue and struck her on the head. Miss Woehrle was taken to the State hospital suffering from a severe scalp wound. She was on her way to the courthouse when the roof repairer let the hammer drop. Physicians say the wire in the woman's hat saved her from a fractured skull and perhaps instant death.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

Identifies Loudon as Spanish War Officer

AURORA, Ill., Oct. 16.—Max Loudon, also known as Count Max Lynar Loudon, arrested in New York on a charge of bigamy, was a colonel of American volunteers during the Spanish-American war, serving under former President Roosevelt, according to Thomas Dunham, an Aurora manufacturer, who lived in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1914. Dunham said he had been an intimate friend of Loudon's and, with Mrs. Dunham, often visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Loudon at Fort Erie, but that neither of the two women accusing Loudon is the woman they met as his wife.

SAVED FROM DEATH.

CHICO, Oct. 16. — Trapped by smoke and flames and practically helpless, Joseph B. Silvers, aged 90 years, was saved from a terrible death in a fire that destroyed his son-in-law's home, through the heroism of Brett Deveney, a student at the State Normal School and the Chico High School.

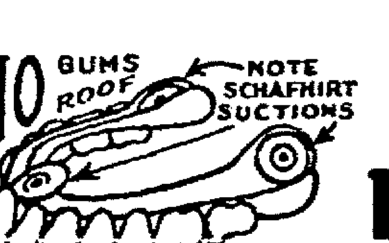

Crowd Throws Mud at Gen. Louis Botha

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A Reuter dispatch from Cape Town says:

"General Louis Botha, the premier, has concluded another electioneering tour, on which he addressed many meetings in former rebel centers on the western Transvaal. At a majority of these meetings he received a peaceful hearing and obtained votes of confidence, but at Christiania he was howled down and his face bespattered with mud."

DESPERATE SUICIDE ATTEMPT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—John Gisca, 35 years old of 752 Vallejo street, ill and out of work, attempted suicide this morning by slashing his body with a razor. Gisca cut himself in nearly a dozen places. He hacked at his forehead, both wrists, his stomach and chest. He was taken to the Harbor Hospital. It is believed that he has a chance to get well. He declared that prolonged sickness and lack of employment had led him to attempt his life.

It's Different

Don't confuse the SCHAFHIRT ROOFLESS TEETH with bridge or alveolar work. It's different! To have teeth restored by these old-style methods, you must have at least two teeth of your own.

But by the SCHAFHIRT way, if you have lost one tooth, ten teeth or ALL your teeth, I can restore them without a plate over the entire roof of your mouth!

2040 92nd Ave., Oakland.

Dr. Schafhirt:

Dear Doctor:—It gives me great pleasure to send you this little note of appreciation of the roofless teeth you made for me.

The several dentists I consulted before coming to you all said there was nothing for me but to wear a plate over the roof of my mouth, as I had no teeth to fasten alveolar work to and that your method was a fake.

At first it didn't seem to me that you could make teeth without a plate snug and firm in my mouth, as I had no teeth of my own to fasten a set to.

But the teeth are certainly a success. I scarcely realize they are artificial.

With good wishes I remain. Yours sincerely,

MRS. MARY L. MERCHANT.

I don't ask you to take my word for what I claim. Ask the people who wear these teeth! A book full of names FREE. Phone Lakeside 24. Ask for "Booklet A." Beware of cheap imitators.

An Advertisement on the Importance of Treatment for

BY

DR. GEORGE CALDWELL

Formerly of Surgical Staff Nose, Throat and Ear Dept., Lane Hospital Clinic; Stanford University, etc.

No one can be healthy physically or mentally unless they can breathe freely through the nose at all times and are free from poisonous discharge from the throat.

If you are a mouth breather, have catarrh, take cold easily, have ear trouble, or tubercular glands in the neck, or if you snore, you probably have enlarged tonsils or adenoids. School records show that children, after having been PROPERLY operated on, gain rapidly physically and mentally.

If you or your child are to be examined, or to have treatment or operation you should have it done by a Specialist who is doing such work constantly and successfully. If he advertises so much the better for you, as you might not otherwise know who to go to without seeking the advice of someone who might be interested or prejudiced.

Advertising neither makes or breaks skill. It is merely one of the ethical modern methods adopted by up-to-date merchants, banks, doctors, dentists and churches to enlarge their field of usefulness; and the public profit by it. All doctors advertise in one way or another who have a special inducement to offer, but not all consider it ethical or profitable to pay for a frank, straightforward, truthful advertisement in a newspaper.

If it is decided to have a tonsil or adenoid operation you will want the CALDWELL BUTTONHOLE OPERATION, because it is a much milder operation, more quickly healed, the results are absolutely perfect, it is a guarantee against recurrence; it improves the singing voice, and is almost bloodless. On adults it is performed without a general anaesthetic painlessly.

If your nose stops up I can cure you. Not all nose trouble or throat troubles are due to tonsils or adenoids. An examination will clear up all doubts. I will be pleased to give my opinion on a case without charge.

Sincerely,

GEORGE CALDWELL, M. D.

PREDICT LIVELY CONSTRUCTION YEAR

NEW $60,000 RESIDENCE OF J. E. DIBERT, NEARING COMPLETION ON ADAMS POINT

1916 TO SEE MANY IMPORTANT PLANS

While industrial and public building has been progressing rapidly, enormous strides have been taken in Oakland's home building. The entries of from twenty to thirty new home permits on the weekly building permit list has not given the conception of how heavy the building activities are under these conditions, but when the sum total for a month is taken, and even more so when the year's figure is computed, the public gains a lively idea of building in Oakland.

"The year is better and better as it nears the end," said President William Makin of the Builder's Exchange, "and all our predictions for a lively year have been fulfilled." Secretary Edwin Davis is sanguine over the prospects for even a better year next year, when the Exchange, in its new building, will enlarge its facilities for the handling of business.

One of the notable examples of recent home building is the new $60,000 home of J. E. Dibert. This structure, on Belmont street near Staten avenue, Adams Point, is one of the new examples of colonial influence types. Having a low, wide facade, the architects made the most of the effect, placing the door in the center and balancing each side with wide triple windows. Trellises are used across the front and the exterior design is in cement. The entrance hall is panelled in natural woodwork, the living and dining rooms open off each side of the hall, and the staircase is concealed here. The second story has a den, sleeping rooms and a large sleeping porch. Milwain Brothers are the architects.

BUILDING PROGRESS.

Progress is being made to a marked degree on the new van and storage building being constructed on Grove street, and the Shredded Wheat factory is also nearing completion. Considerable work has been accomplished both on the new detention home and the county infirmary building.

Several new building plans were placed before the Builders' Exchange last week. One of these is for a factory of considerable size and another is for a warehouse in West Oakland. Plans for a new theater have been rumored in the exchange but so far have not been placed before the builders for estimates. Secretary Davis declares that there are several large contracts soon to be bid for, but declines at this time to state their nature.

NEW RESIDENCES.

Director O. W. Fletter of the Builders' Exchange declares that the organization will figure on several large residence contracts which architects have informed him will be ready to bid on within the next few weeks.

BIG GAINS SHOWN IN PAST MONTH'S PERMITS

Not only did building in Oakland for September show the largest total of any month of the year, with one exception, but, according to H. A. Lafler, September, 1915, showed a gain over 1914 of 45 per cent and over September, 1913, a gain of 14 per cent, being therefore, the largest September in three years. This combined with the fact that bank clearings in Oakland for September, 1915, also showed a gain over both 1914 and 1913, is decisive evidence of the march of prosperity in the east bay cities.

A large proportion of this healthy building activity in Oakland is in private residences and is particularly concentrated in the head-of-the-lake district. Wickham Havens Incorporated report that in their properties along in the head-of-the-lake district the building of two-story houses since January 1st now totals $322,775. This does not include a number of fine villas being erected in Piedmont just over the Oakland line from Crocker Highlands.

Among the houses started recently in the head-of-the-lake district are the following:

Residence of David Caig on Santa Ray avenue; residence of Annie Depaoli on Calmar avenue, residence of Charles Dorsch on Walavista avenue, as are also the residences of W. J. Dowell and J. H. Fitzmaurice. On Ardmore avenue, in Crocker Highlands, J. J. McDonald, the well known Oakland attorney, has just broken ground this week for an $8000 home.

About twenty fine homes in the same vicinity are now reaching completion.

The most extensive and notable building enterprise in the residential line is the erection by Charles MacGregor of $65,000 worth of houses on Mandana boulevard. These houses are all being built for sale and indicate the confidence of well-informed builders in the capacity of the market to absorb a dozen or so houses costing around $5000 at one time. The MacGregor houses are all finished in white cement exterior, while the interior finish is in Southern gum and mahogany, with hardwood floors in every room, eight rooms, bath, shower and sleeping porch.

Naval Base Site to Be Urged Again by Cities

RICHMOND, Oct. 16. — The commercial organizations of Berkeley and Richmond are preparing data to be used in connection with the campaign toward having the Navy Department accept the naval base site touching on the Richmond and Berkeley fronts that was officially recommended by Rear Admiral Charles F. Pond. Mayor Samuel C. Irving of Berkeley and Mayor E. J. Garrard of Richmond are also taking an active part in the work, both communities having a strong feeling that they will be successful in the fight. The official recommendation by Admiral Pond, who was named to investigate all sites, is a potent aid.

Congressman J. Arthur Elston, when he paid an official visit to the site a few days ago, was told of all its meritorious features by Admiral Pond, who accompanied him on the trip. Mayors Irving and Garrard and representatives of the Berkeley Chamber of Commerce and the Richmond Industrial Commission also being in the party. Secretary Wells Drury of the Berkeley commercial body, who is particularly well posted on the various statistics, helped materially in enlightening the congressman.

With the material obtained in dredging a channel in from deep water and constructing a basin, an area of tide lands will be reclaimed that will pay for the cost of dredging twenty times over and all this new land will be the property of the government for various works in connection with the drydocks.

GETS OVER $50 IN LOAF OF BREAD FOR NICKEL

FOSTORIA, Ohio, Oct. 16.—John C. Danner, manager of the Fostoria Baking Company, sold over $50 in cash, a like amount in checks and two loaves of bread for a nickel.

Fred Orth, an assistant, was left in charge of the bakery, and after missing the usual banking hour, selected a hollowed out loaf of bread as the best hiding place for the money he had taken in during the day.

He placed the money in a loaf of bread and tied it up. The next morning Danner himself was the first in the bakery and made several sales before Orth arrived.

Search thus far has failed to reveal the purchaser of the bread containing the money.

BUILDING IS ACTIVE IN BERKELEY DISTRICTS

BERKELEY, Oct. 16. — Building activities have been a feature of the local realty market during the week, particularly in the outlying residential parks which are being rapidly improved by those in search of ideal home surroundings. Ground was recently broken for a handsome $10,000 residence which is to be erected on Alvarado road in the Claremont district for G. H. Atkins, the well known art dealer of San Francisco. Rudolph Schevill, professor of Spanish in the University of California, has chosen a location in Northbrae on Tamalpais avenue, where he will build a $5000 dwelling.

Among those who are preparing homes in the Northbrae section are J. M. Mackie, who will put up a $4000 structure on Shasta avenue, and C. H. McCoy, who will soon be living in his new residence on Mariposa avenue near Los Angeles. While the majority of the permits for residential construction for the week have been confined to the hill districts, there has been considerable improvement of inside properties. The permits totaled $29,000.

Among the new business enterprises to be located in Berkeley is the Poppy Film company, for which a studio is being erected by W. J. Schmidt on San Pablo avenue near Jones street. This is the second moving picture concern to start operations in this city, and it is anticipated that others will soon follow. Climatic conditions for outdoor photography are ideal in the locality, and the environs are sufficiently diversified in picturesqueness to afford settings for all kinds of screen work.

Realty sales have been comparatively light with a tendency toward a moderately busy winter. Transfers made during the week included eight in Claremont, nine in Northbrae, six in the College Homestead tract, four in the Hillegass tract, three in Regents Park, four in the Hardy tract, two in San Pablo Park and two in Berkeley Heights.

RENTALS ACTIVE.

Although the rush season attendant upon the opening of the fall semester of the University has passed, there is a steady demand for rentals. Homes and flats are in special request, many families seeking locations here during the remaining period of the Exposition and for the winter. Apartments are at a premium both in the immediate vicinity of the University and in the remoter sections of the city.

Owing to the proximity of the proposed naval base on the waterfront of Albany and the importance of this project for the growth of Berkeley, the Chamber of Commerce is interesting itself actively in the effort to secure the location at that point. At a recent meeting of the board of directors, the subject was given lengthy consideration. President D. E. Bigelow and Director C. L. Schneider reported that they had attended Admiral C. F. Pond and Congressman J. A. Elston on a visit to the site for the purpose of outlining a mode of procedure to bring the matter to the attention of the federal government.

MANY PERMITS.

G. H. Atkins, Alvarado at head of Vicente road, 2-story 12-room dwelling; $10,000.

Rudolph Schevill, Tamalpais near Shasta, 2-story 8-room dwelling; $5250.

J. M. Mackie, Shasta near Tamalpais, 2-story 7-room dwelling; $4000.

C. H. McCoy, Mariposa near Los Angeles, 2-story 7-room dwelling, $3000.

Annie Fenley, Grant near Rose, 1-story 5-room dwelling; $1900.

Mrs. L. Thompson, 1641 Julia, repairs; $500.

W. J. Schmidt, San Pablo near Jones moving picture studio; $500.

G. Rollins, 1172 Parker, alterations, $210.

R. W. Kinnie, 6 Nogales, garage, $150.

Charles Godin, Jaynes near Edith, alterations, $150.

Mrs. E. J. Wetzel, 1633 Josephine, garage; $150.

M. B. Driver, 2613 Fulton, garage; $75.

SUGAR CONSUMPTION TO MEAN LOCAL BUSINESS

More than one-fifth of the 40 billion pounds of sugar that represent the world's production last year was consumed in the United States. The consumption of sugar in the United States exclusive of its sugar-producing islands during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, has been calculated by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, Department of Commerce, as 8630 million pounds or 86 pounds per capita. The bay region, principal receiving point of Hawaiian sugar, sees much of this shipping, and Oakland is soon to have a large station.

Of the sugar consumed in this country in 1914-15, 1941 million pounds were produced on the mainland, 1281 million pounds in Hawaii, 589 million pounds in Porto Rico, 327 million pounds in the Philippines, and the remainder in foreign countries. Cuba, the leading source of our imported sugar, sent us 4785 million pounds in the last fiscal year, that quantity being nearly four times as much as that from Hawaii and eight times as much as that from Porto Rico.

BEET SUGAR LEADS.

Beet sugar now leads cane sugar by nearly one billion pounds in the yearly domestic product, having reversed the conditions which obtained 20 years ago. In 1895, for example, according to the Statistical Abstract of the United States, the domestic sugar product totaled approximately 775 million pounds, the share of beet sugar only 45 million pounds. In 1915 our sugar product had increased to 1941 million pounds, the share of beet having grown to 1448 million and that of cane having decreased to 493 million pounds. Meantime beet sugar has practically disappeared from our imports. Eighteen years ago, when the Cuban supply of cane sugar was cut off by the war, we imported nearly two billion pounds of beet sugar. After the return of peace in Cuba our imports of beet sugar fell off sharply, and in the last fiscal year beet sugar imports amounted to less than one million pounds. The refinery at Alvarado, in this county, recently started with an enlarged force.

The cutting off of the sugar supply of European countries has resulted in a remarkable expansion of our sales of sugar to foreign countries. For the fiscal year 1915 they aggregated 582 million pounds, as against 22½ million pounds in 1909 and 40½ million pounds in 1880.

	1913-14	1914-15
	(Millions of pounds.)
World's sugar product	42,053	40,424
U. S. cane sugar product	691	493
U. S. beet sugar product	1,467	1,448
U. S. imports: Cuban	4,927	4,785
Hawaiian	1,115	1,281
Porto Rican	641	589
Philippine	117	327
All other	18	309
U. S. exports sugar	72	582
U. S. consumption sugar	8,794	8,630

RESIDENCE TRACTS SHOW SOLID GROWTH

It is in the residence sections of the city—Piedmont, Claremont, East Oakland, Fourth avenue, about Lake Merritt and on the edges of the municipality—that Oakland's tremendous growth during the past few years is especially noticeable.

In these sections building activity is surprising. On all sides cottages, bungalows, two-story houses and the more expensive residences of the wealthy are springing up like mushrooms. And, according to local real estate men, these homes are sold just as soon as built, disclosing that there is demand—a big demand.

This activity has been going on for the past two or three years and is continuing with unabated regularity.

Along with this activity is the fact that realty values have remained steady and have suffered no collapse during the past year which has brought about in other sections of the State heavy depressions in realty values.

Gustave Lang, Los Angeles capitalist and member of the commission that is working on a readjustment of property assessments in the southern city, while on a visit to Oakland during the week was impressed by this condition of affairs in the realty market.

To David H. McLaughlin, associated with E. B. Bull in the management of the R. N. Burgess company's local offices, whose guest he was, Lang pointed out two other essential things in Oakland's development:

EXPLAINS FACTORS.

First, that compared with Los Angeles the valuations on close-in residence property, in the region of Lake Merritt, for instance, were especially conservative.

Second, that the tourist had been attracted to Oakland and that he was much impressed by the beauty of the city, its splendid school buildings, its magnificent harbor facilities.

Lang stood at the corner of Fifteenth and Broadway and saw five automobile sightseeing buses pass the corner in as many minutes and each carried a capacity load.

"What does it mean?" he asked, and answered his own question. "That Oakland has something to show the newcomer, the tourist."

Lang was told also that the sightseeing bus was the direct result of the campaign inaugurated several years ago by the commercial organizations in sending broadcast literature telling about Oakland.

"Your city amazes me," continued Lang. "In Los Angeles we have discovered that the property assessments need readjustment, which means that values must be readjusted as well. Here in Oakland I find that your values have undergone no change, that they have not felt the depression noticeable elsewhere. Oakland has become a city since I last saw it in 1906."

McLaughlin points out that during the past week the inquiries for homes in Oakland have increased considerable and that the homes sold have been largely cash sales, which is an indication that the market is loosening.

Bank clearings and the mortgage and loan market continue strong, disclosing brisk business.

NEW MARKET DEVELOPMENT.

Much interest is centered in the placing on the market shortly of the 10,000 acres of country home and farm lands in Mount Diablo Park. Rising in and about the meridian mountain. These properties [illegible] Diablo Park Club, which will become a part of the general tract. The first unit of the property is rapidly being laid out, preparatory to placing on the market.

Big Sums Sent Into Martinez by the Shell Interests

MARTINEZ, Oct. 16. — The bringing of $5,000,000 more of hard foreign money into this state by the Shell Oil Company, as announced during the week, not only helps the State that much, but is a big direct lift to Martinez, where the company's great refinery is being rushed along. Announcement of two more 51-[illegible],000 steamers for the Martinez fleet is also announced.

The Shell Company is using all the land it has purchased in the laying out of its plant, every available part being taken up with stills and other equipment and the large tanks both for crude and refined material. The company has erected some handsome buildings for its draughting and engineering headquarters and local offices. In front of them has been constructed one of the finest boulevards in this country.

Two one story shacks that served as store buildings for the old Martinez were moved out during the week to make room for modern brick structures [illegible] Martinez the [illegible] that industrial and [illegible] With plans that have been drawn and contracts actually let there will be a general wiping out of venerable, unsteady structures in the next ninety days. It all makes a scene of semi-chaos, but it is development and the progress of a city.

The Martinez Development Board, or Chamber of Commerce, that was organized a month ago, is busy with many important activities. All the leading citizens have got into the swing of the work and the organization is helping greatly in the city's advance.

NEW FACTORIES ARE SOON TO RISE

Plans for the erection of several important new factories in Oakland, and work on several now under way, are being fast completed. One of the most important of the city's new industrial plants, the big fabricating steel works being constructed at the foot of Harrison street, is now well on the road to final completion, and will shortly be ready to take its place in future big building operations.

Progress is being made with all rapidity on the construction of the Shredded Wheat plant, which is even a little ahead of the building schedule, according to the construction engineers.

A new cement company at the present time is negotiating for a site in Oakland, according to word received by officers of the commercial organizations, and there are also negotiations under way for the construction of a large machinery shop.

One important factory, which it had been feared would leave Oakland altogether, planning to establish in New York, has left a large assembling plant behind it, in the building once occupied by the factory itself. This is the American Creamery Machinery Company, which established here, but last week moved its main plant to New York. The branch here, almost as extensive as the old factory itself, will be operated under the direction of a sales force. F. D. Courtenay is in charge. That the firm left behind the big branch is declared by factory men to be significant.

SECRET PROFITS ARE DENIED TO AGENTS

(Sixty-first case in a series of recent real estate decisions of interest to agents and owners, summarized for The Tribune by Attorney Carlos G. White of Oakland, lecturer in law at the University of California, and member of the firm of Dunn, White & Aiken.)

The relationship of principal and agent is one particularly protected by the law.

Ordinarily when one man deals with another the law expects each to be on the alert to protect his own interests, and not to believe everything that may be said by the other. But when one deals with his own agent respecting the subject matter of the agency the law allows the principal to place special confidence in the statements of his agent.

The relationship of principal and agent being therefore one in which personal confidence in law and in fact obtains, the law makes it the special duty of the agent to act in the highest good faith toward his principal, and makes it an actionable fraud on the part of the agent if he obtains any advantage over his principal, in matters connected with the agency, by means of misrepresentation, concealment or adverse pressure.

CASE IN POINT.

In the case of Teats vs. Caldwell, decided August 4, 1915, by the District Court of Appeals, Second District, the principal question was whether one Palmer had been acting as agent for the plaintiff, Teats, and whether his dealings with the plaintiff were to be tested by the strict rules applicable to agents dealing with their principals respecting the subject matter of the agency.

The defendant, Caldwell, was administratrix of the estate of Palmer. Plaintiff resided in the East and alleged that Palmer had acted as her agent in investing $1650. Plaintiff alleged that Palmer charged her that sum for a lot which he personally bought for only $1000, and plaintiff sought to recover $650 and interest from Palmer's estate.

The administratrix of the estate denied that Palmer had been plaintiff's agent in the transaction, and upon the trial in Los Angeles, the Superior Judge granted a non-suit. The plaintiff appealed.

THE EVIDENCE.

The record indicates that the plaintiff, a resident of Chicago, met Palmer while on a visit to California in 1902, at which time, as her agent, he bought a lot for her and subsequently sold the same at a profit, retaining the proceeds until plaintiff, at his suggestion, bought through him the second lot.

Among the letters written to plaintiff by Palmer, the evidence showed communications as follows: "I shall try to handle the money you left in my care so that I shall win nicely for you." "I am watching for a good investment for you, and I want a very good one." "I have a dandy investment for you. . . . It will cost you but $1650," and others to like effect.

The evidence showed that Palmer, for $1000, caused the lot to be deeded by the owners direct to plaintiff, charging her $1650 therefor.

SECRET PROFIT ILLEGAL.

"That Palmer profited by the transaction to the extent of $650, clearly appears," says Appellate Justice Shaw, "and that an agent may not, as such, make a secret profit out of a transaction wherein he represents his principal, is a rule universally recognized and has no exceptions.

AGENCY RELATIONSHIP.

"The question therefore is, does the evidence tend to establish the relation of agent and principal between the plaintiff and Palmer? If it does, the granting of defendant's motion for a judgment of non-suit was error. . . .

"That plaintiff in intrusting her money to Palmer, with which . . . he should make such purchase, regarded Palmer as a trusted agent upon whose advice she relied admits of little doubt; and that in making the purchase he, without consulting plaintiff, assumed to act under the general authority conferred upon him to buy property for her as her agent, appears from his letters . . .

"There is nothing in his communications calculated to acquaint her with the fact, as claimed by defendant, that she was dealing with him at arm's length, or that he was selling to her his own property. She assumed and had a right to assume that he was acting for her in the purchase of property from a third party.

"The fact, if it be a fact, that the service was rendered gratuitously in no wise relieved him from the exercise of good faith toward his principal. . . .

OLD STATION AGENT QUITS.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Oct. 16.—J. G. Wilbur has resigned his position as station agent for the Missouri Pacific Railway, after being in their employ for thirty-six years. He is said to be the oldest passenger agent in service for the company in the State of Missouri.

Whaling Wants to Manage Vernon

Bert Whaling, the Brave who, with Moran, was traded to Vernon for Willson, says that he will not report unless he is made manager of the club. He demands that Doc White be deposed and that he be established in that berth. Bert threatens to jump to the Federals unless Maier complies with the demand.

Although Whaling is a Los Angeles man and probably would sooner play on the coast than in any other minor league, he figures that he is still a little too good for just an ordinary backstop job.

Berkeley Trounces Alameda In Annual Football Clash

The Berkeley High school rugby team started its annual upward spurt toward the county football championship yesterday by easily trouncing the ruggers of the Alameda High school on Alameda's own field and with the whole population of the Encinal city turned out to cheer their game youngsters on to victory. The score, 11 to 3, does not tell half of the story, for throughout the entire fray, except when Alameda would suddenly spurt, the game was in Berkeley's favor and Alameda was outplayed.

Both teams struggled valiantly for every inch of territory from the start to the finish. The ball was in play all of the time, and usually it was a red shirted Berkeley youngster who was either carrying or on top of the ball. Alameda showed best during the first ten minutes of the first half. The Berkeley boys couldn't get started and Larkin, the Alameda half, who was Alameda's star of the game, had little difficulty in getting the ball out to his backs. The teams were fighting desperately with the ball in Alameda's territory when Referee Jimmy Thoburn, the Oakland Tech High coach, called a 20-yard scrum. Alameda hooked the ball and after the pack was loose, both Nevin and McKechnie of Berkeley plunged after it regardless of whether they were offside or not.

Thoburn, of course, penalized the Berkeleyites by giving Alameda a free kick and Smith, the Encinal booter, took advantage by placing the ball squarely through the goal posts for Alameda's only three points of the game. But for that penalty, Alameda would have certainly been held scoreless.

After the newness between the two teams had worn off, the Berkeley boys got going and then they started their upward climb. They rushed Alameda down to their 15-yard line, hooked the ball in the scrum, and by a pretty pass from Fenton to Chalmers to Jessup, the former went over for a try. Mathews' convention failed.

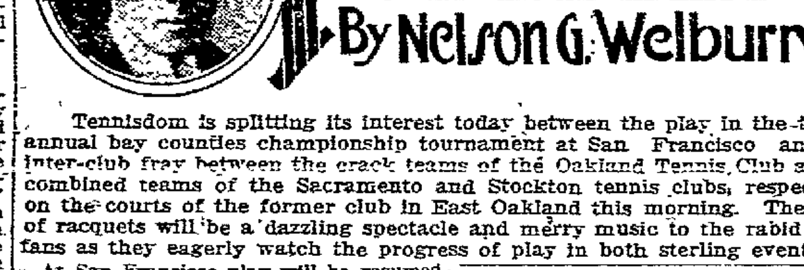

Fierce passing and consistent forward work kept the ball in Alameda's territory throughout the rest of the first half. Several long and timely boots to touch by the Alamedans saving them many a yard.

The second half was but a repetition of the first with the forwards doing most of the work and consistently running the ball up and down the field. After the teams had battled back and forth for 15 minutes, "Dug" Montgomery got the ball after a pass from Chalmers, who secured it out of the ruck, and dodged through the Alameda defense for a try. Mathews again failed to convert.

Alameda fought Berkeley right back to their own line, however, and threatened their goal. With the ball on Berkeley's fifteen yard line, the Berkeley forwards again started a run down field and placed their team out of danger. The forwards kept right on going, tore hole after hole through the Alameda defense, and after they had enough, they passed the ball out in the open, where McKechnie, Fenton and Nevin worked their way through for a sensational score, which Mathews converted. Alameda tried hard and made a gallant attempt to pull the same trick which they pulled in the Alameda-Oakland game, that of scoring two tries in the last three minutes of play, but the Berkeley boys were too experienced, too heavy and two fleet of foot for the Alamedans, and they were unflinchingly holding their own in the center of the field when the shot was fired.

Berkeley, front rank, Peterson, Graff; lock, Muldoon; breaks, Sisson, Fraga; rear rank, Brown, Mathews; half, Fenton; fives, McKechnie, Chalmers; center three, Montgomery; wings, Jessup, Houston; full, Davis (captain).

Tennisdom is splitting its interest today between the play in the twelfth annual bay counties championship tournament at San Francisco and the inter-club fray between the crack teams of the Oakland Tennis Club and the combined teams of the Sacramento and Stockton tennis clubs, respectively, on the courts of the former club in East Oakland this morning. The battle of racquets will be a dazzling spectacle and merry music to the rabid tennis fans as they eagerly watch the progress of play in both sterling events.

At San Francisco play will be resumed in the men's singles event and also with considerable vim in the inauguration of play in the men's doubles event. Talent galore is represented in both events with the prospects of thrillers being produced in each round. It is probable that the finals of the men's singles will be reached today.

The sensation of last Sunday's play in the men's singles event was the unexpected defeat of Roland Roberts, Pacific coast junior champion, at the hands of Raymond Greenberg, a young and lanky player with a devastating drive and smash. Roberts was badly off form and played from the defensive throughout the match. Greenberg injected plenty of snap into his play and cavorted around the court in somewhat of a sensational manner.

The probabilities are that if Roberts got away from the game for a couple of weeks, he would throw off this staleness and would return to the game with greater vim and determination, and possibly greater success. We are of the opinion that he has been playing too much tennis lately. His actions were somewhat insipid and sadly lacked their former snap. Greenberg, on the other hand, hit like a demon and was as frisky as a cricket.

BATKIN UNDER ATTACK.

With the elimination of Roberts, Babe Batkin will now have to guard his honors from a field of unrelenting pluggers, in the players of Carl Gardner, Ray Greenberg, Vandyke Johns, Leon Strauss, Clyde Curley. It's a tough plow, but we feel that the irascible Batkin is equal to the occasion.

In the men's doubles event Roberts and Johns appear to hold the edge. They will encounter stiff competition from Wickham Havens and Carl Gardner, Edward Klein and Charles Stuckney, Clyde Curley and Babe Batkin and Leon Strauss and William Marcus. In all probability this event will reach its termination about next Sunday.

At 10 o'clock this morning the combined Stockton and Sacramento tennis teams quietly slipped into town, headed by the noble and convivial Joseph L. Brunschwiler of Sacramento and the gallant and daring Sidney H. Hodghins and "Doc" Dewey Powell, respectively, of Stockton. Both aggregations are bragging about what they are going to do to this Oakland bunch. Great claims of superior form and court generalship have they presented. To their credit we candidly admit that they are fighters every inch of the way.

In passing it is decidedly interesting, to say the least, to note that in August of this year ten sturdy members of the Oakland club tackled these two clubs on their home courts, with the result that Oakland cleaned Sacramento up for eight events out of thirteen and took her worthy opponent, Stockton, down the line for nine events out of a like number.

Sacramento will be ably represented by Charles Lumbard, city champion of Sacramento, Verre Jones, A. Becker, Joseph Brunschwiler, P. C. Gaskill and Chalmers, while Stockton will be strongly represented by Walter Hunter, Sidne Hodgkins, Dewey Powell, Alex Gravem and [illegible]. Ten singles and five doubles matches will comprise the meet.

So, all in all, it's going to be some clash, and we have a certain premonition that they will depart with Caesar's famous, bellicose and laconic message of victory considerably altered, and reading somewhat as follows: "We came, we saw, and we were conquered!"

On Saturday next the tenth annual Alameda county singles and doubles championship tournament will be launched upon the Berkeley Tennis Club courts at 2424 Hillegass avenue, Berkeley. The following four events will be contested: Men's singles, men's doubles, consolation handicap singles and women's singles. Handsome prizes will be awarded the winner in each event.

This event is one of the biggest items in tennis activities on this side of the bay. It usually draws a heavy entry and invariably produces high-class tennis. It is a banner and blue ribbon event.

Entries will close next Thursday evening, October 21, at 6 p. m., and should be mailed, with remittance entry fee, to Harvey Hicks, 2442 Forest avenue, Berkeley.

The entrance fees are as follows: Men's singles, $1 per person; men's doubles, $1.50 per team; consolation singles, no entry fee, and women's singles, 75 cents per person.

Among some of those who will take a fling at the title will be Henry Breck, Ray Jones, Carl Gardner, Wickham Havens, Charles Bates, Percy Murdock, Charles Stuckney, Edward Klein, Ernest Smith, Nelson Welburn, Stanley Smith, Cleveland Steele, Charles Foley, Robert Lipman, Robert Clark, Norman Ambrose and John Brackett.

The tournament is open to all Alameda county players, including students at the University of California. The tournament committee comprises Hervey Hicks, chairman; Russell T. Crawford and Robert Clark.

Now that the national tennis event is a matter of history, the main interest is centered in the national ranking. Both in the east and west tennis bugs are doping out the probable rating. The consensus of opinion seems to be that William Johnston, national singles champion, will just barely slip into first place. It is contended that Johnston's remarkable win against Behr, Williams and McLoughlin, respectively, will fortify his claim for position No. 1. His defeat of three formidable players was achieved by remarkable tennis.

Williams seems likely to land in second place, owing to the fact that he has truly played the most consistent tennis of the entire lot. He was seldom streaky in the tournament matches. His playing was of the substantial order. Possibly the following made-up list will come pretty near being correct:

1—William M. Johnston.
2—Richard N. Williams, second.
3—Maurice E. McLoughlin.
4—Karl H. Behr.
5—Theodore R. Pell.
6—Watson M. Washburn.
7—Frederick B. Alexander.
8—Nathaniel W. Niles.
9—Clarence J. Griffin.
10—George M. Church.

The elimination of Murray, Fottrell, Bundy and Strachan is due to their limited or non-participation in the national and other important events. Last year's ranking was as follows.

1—M. E. McLoughlin.
2—R. N. Williams, second.
3—K. H. Behr.
4—R. L. Murray.
5—W. J. Clothier.
6—W. M. Johnston.
7—G. M. Church.
8—F. B. Alexander.
9—W. M. Washburn.
10—F. F. Fottrell.

FREMONT SHOWS TO GOOD ADVANTAGE

The Fremont High school rugby fifteen took the place of the Oakland High school team against the Stanford freshmen rugby aggregation on the Exposition Marina yesterday and in a hotly contested game, featured by the playing of Freddie Stevens, last year wing of the Berkeley High school team, the Fremonters lost by a score of 16 to 14. Stevens scored two tries and was the star of the day. Considering the fact that they filled in at the last moment the Green and Gold boys played a remarkable game and gave the freshmen their hardest match of the season. The "frosh" have defeated the Alameda, Berkeley and Technical High school teams by larger scores than the one by which they defeated Fremont yesterday.

The Fremonters were outweighed by every man and had the wind to face in the first half, which placed them considerably at a disadvantage. The first half ended with the score 11 to 3 in Stanford's favor. In the second half the Fremont boys rallied and had the freshmen on the defensive the greater part of the half. They scored two tries while Stanford scored one, which was converted. That conversion won the game for the freshmen.

The Oakland High ruggers were unable to play owing to the fact that they played the Technical High team on Friday and several of the men were laid up with injuries.

Cardinal Looks Now for Santa Clara Defeat

TRIPLE VICTORY AT STANFORD CHEERS CARDINAL HOPES

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 16.—Stanford won three times today on the local turf, the Varsity defeating the Olympic Club, 49-8, the second Varsity winning from the Santa Clara seconds, 10-8, and the peanut leaguers managing to outplay Cogswell Poly, 11-5. Although the Varsity-Olympic contest was featured, the game with the Santa Clara second team was easily the best contest of the day. Not only was play faster, but it was uncertain up to the final gun as to who would be the ultimate victor.

Victory was only taken by the Cardinal when Hammond, center, jumped over a waiting tackler, and fell across the line for the points. It was the most spectacular play of the season. Maltby, half, fed the ball to Greve, who passed to Gladstone. The clever wing managed to pass the leather to Hammond before being tackled, and the center sped on to a clean cut victory. This was Stanford's second and last try. West converted.

The first half produced no score. Play up and down the field grew more and more intense until the bleachers were fairly frenzied. A goodly section from Santa Clara kept things humming during the play.

Santa Clara's backfield attacked again and again, but the Cardinal second forwards were too much for them.

Real rivalry had developed from a supposed scrub game. Play was forced to Santa Clara's five-yard line, and Johnston, rear ranker, went over for Stanford's first try. West converted. Not many minutes passed before Santa Clara came back, rushed the ball into Cardinal territory, and scored a try. No conversion. A little later, rushing tactics did the same trick, Mulholland to Conners. Jackson converted.

Seven minutes before the end of the half, Hammond made the memorable jump and the game was won.

The first half of the Varsity game was a procession. The Olympics seemed powerless to check the Stanford attack, which developed early. Both backs and forwards were on the offensive and at last Coach Brown seems to have polished off a backfield. Stanford scored eight tries in this half, four of which were converted. The second period of play found the clubbers defending stubbornly, and as a result fewer tries were obtained, two of which were converted by Bob Templeton.

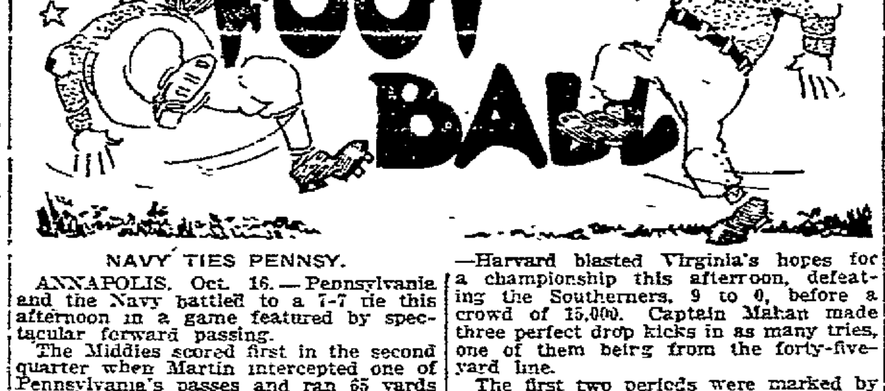

Besides tackling well, Templeton played fullback in great style, including a field goal, which he dropped from the forty-yard line, in his list of well-done plays. Soper, Wylie, Braden, Erb and the entire Cardinal backfield were in the limelight from start to finish. Hawkes, Guerin and Lachmund showed much for the Olympics. The lineups:

NAVY TIES PENNSY.

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 16.—Pennsylvania and the Navy battled to a 7-7 tie this afternoon in a game featured by spectacular forward passing.

The Middies scored first in the second quarter when Martin intercepted one of Pennsylvania's passes and ran 65 yards through a broken field for a touchdown. In the third portion, Penn uncorked some still more spectacular passing and Hopkins scored on a long throw from Berry. Each side kicked goal.

TIGER STOCK SOARS.

PRINCETON, Oct. 16.—Princeton had a field day at the expense of Lafayette this afternoon and tonight Tiger football stock has reached par after a disastrous slump. The score was 40 to 3, the Tigers easily displaying the best brand of football seen on a Tiger field in weeks. The regulars were all removed after the first half, and the substitutes romped on to victory.

ARMY LOSES 13-0.

WEST POINT, Oct. 16.—Army football struck rock bottom this afternoon when little Colgate battered through the soldiers for a 13 to 0 victory in one of the hardest fought games seen on the plains in years.

The big Colgate forwards smashed the army's line to pieces and only furious offense by the army backs held the upstaters to 13 points.

McEwen at center and Oliphant at left end were the most consistent performers for the army, while Gill and Spencer shone for the visitors.

ST. IGNATIUS WINS.

St. Ignatius University overwhelmed the Barbarian Club rugby team yesterday afternoon by a 34 to 0 score. The college boys put on a strenuous game, and the machine-like work of their fast backfield ran rings around the club-men.

MULTNOMAH TRIUMPHS.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 16.—Six touchdowns and two goal kicks represent the 32 points by which the husky Multnomah football eleven downed the Washington Park aggregation of Seattle this afternoon. The Seattle team, which was composed of a bunch of ex-high school stars, had no chance whatever of scoring against the "Winged M."

Led by Captain "Red" Rupert, the club players showed much of the old-time spirit and rushed the visitors off their feet.

YALE DOWNS SPRINGFIELD.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 16.—Yale played straight, old-fashioned football against Springfield this afternoon and won rather easily 19 to 0. Two touchdowns, a field goal and a safety rolled up the total. Legore made the first touchdown in six minutes of play.

Yale escaped by good luck with her goal line unsmirched.

Miller of Springfield blocked Savage's attempt at goal and ran fifty yards through a broken field, only to fumble almost on the line. Yale then scored a safety.

OREGON DEFEATS IDAHO.

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. 16.—In a slow game interspersed with rapid-fire plays and long passes the University of Oregon this afternoon defeated the University of Idaho 19 to 7.

The game was long because of the fact that both teams used the same style of play. Oregon had the better of it in every department.

In every phase of the game Oregon showed wonderful improvement over last Saturday when defeated decisively by the Washington State college.

PITT SMOTHERS CARLISLE.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 16.—Glenn Warner's new methods defeated his old charges, 45 to 0, this afternoon, when Pitt smothered Carlisle, formerly coached by Warner. The Pitt fans were jubilant tonight over prospects of victory over Pennsylvania next Saturday.

MAHAN THE WHOLE TEAM.

STADIUM, Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 16.—Harvard blasted Virginia's hopes for a championship this afternoon, defeating the Southerners, 9 to 0, before a crowd of 15,000. Captain Mahan made three perfect drop kicks in as many tries, one of them being from the forty-five yard line.

The first two periods were marked by fumbling by both sides. Virginia lost a chance to score in the first period by a misplay. Twice the Crimson carried the ball to Virginia's five-yard line, only to meet a stone wall in the visitors' line.

ST. MARY'S BOYS LOSE TO U. S. C. BY BIG SCORE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 16.—Poor interference and bad tackling, coupled with an inability to gauge U. S. C.'s plays, found St. Mary's team a loser by 47 to 3 here today.

The U. S. C. points were made almost entirely in the first half, twenty points being scored in the first quarter and a like number in the second.

During these two periods the southerners used forward passes and sweeping end runs for long gains, while the invaders were unable either to halt the U. S. C. rushes or advance the ball themselves.

The second half found the St. Mary's team taking a decided brace in spite of the absence of Captain Guisto, who was injured in a mixup near the end of the second quarter.

In the middle of the third quarter, Branden of St. Mary's broke through and blocked an attempted drop kick, picked up the ball on the run and was not downed till he reached the U. S. C. twenty-five yard line.

Three attempts to buck the U. S. C. line were failures and Fitzpatrick's attempted drop kick missed by about a foot. Later in the quarter Fitzpatrick pulled off a great sixty-yard run through a scattered field, but the ball was lost on downs.

The final quarter saw U. S. C.'s Varsity backs being rushed in the game again, and they tore through St. Mary's for a touchdown in a hurry, making the score 47 to 0. St. Mary's came right back after the kickoff, however, intercepted a U. S. C. forward pass and then Fitzpatrick dropped a nice goal from the twenty-five yard mark, the final score of the day.

For St. Mary's, F. Guisto, H. Hogan, Marcolia, Fitzpatrick, Grace and Branden were the heroes.

CARDINALS SURE OF GREAT RUGBY TEAM THIS YEAR

Lack of Interest in the English Game Is Not Damper on Coach Brown's Efforts.

Disregarding the fact that the interest in rugby on the Pacific coast is rapidly decreasing with the return of the "old" game, Coach Floyd Brown, who pounds into the heads of Stanford students how to pass, boot, tackle, hook, dribble and other sundry things, is going right ahead in his endeavor to develop a remarkable cardinal rugby aggregation. Of course, the backfield which represents the farm is perhaps the brightest "thing" on the farm. We say "thing" because Coach Brown has been priming the Stanford backs so rapidly ... that the backfielders of the Stanford team represent one unit more than they do seven individuals.

Although the loss of such stars as Charlie Austin, Otto Lachmun, "Deke" Gard, Frank Andrews, Art Reeves, "Tiny" Wines and "Jumbo" Blase has hit the "Paly" village hard, the cardinal followers can't see where their team is not a wonderful one. The second string men of last year are stars of the highest caliber this season and the Stanford varsity fifteen is fast rounding into form where they will soon be as fast and clever as the 1914 Red and White aggregation which trounced California so decisively.

The turning of Joe Urban, the speediest, trickiest, squirmiest wing ever developed on the Pacific coast into a five-eighths man, which rugby experts thought was an impossibility since Joe always possessed a naughty habit of "hugging" the ball too long, which habit he acquired while palying at wing, has plugged up the hole left by Charlie Austin, and now the Stanford followers can again claim one of the fastest revolving backfields in the history of the sport on the coast.

Art Erb, as great as they 'em on the defensive and a sure booter, will now go back to halfback, where he has represented Stanford for the last two years. Art has been playing at first five, but Urban's coming has relieved him there and he will now play at his old position. For an understudy Erb has Frank Walker, star of the last year freshman team. Dievendorff, who is after the right wing position, has had two years training under Coach Brown, and is consistently after the ball, and when he gets it holds on to it like a bulldog. He is a scrapper and ought to prove a star this year.

Those who lose out for the second five position will go after the other wing place. If Templeton is played at second five, then Swiggart, Bacon, Townsend and Long will grapple for the left wing post. All are A1 players and either of them would fill the post capably. Fullback has found another star in Bobby Templeton, brother of Ric, and a lad possessing one of the most remarkable boots on the farm. Bobby, as a rugbyist, has developed wonderfully. Last year, as a freshman, he lost out in effort to make the freshman team. He showed a good boot, but could not tackle, and a fullback who can't tackle is about as valuable as an armless baseball pitcher. But this year he came out again for football, overcome his old fault under the rapid tutelage of Brown and is now Stanford's most prominent candidate for the job.

With Joe Urban a certainty at inside five, Coach Brown can now confine his attentions to the fight between Ric Templeton, the 1915 track captain; "Wiggles" Swiggart, Oakland's representative; E. J. Bacon and Towndsend for the second five-eighths post. The odds, of course, are in favor of the former, who is playing like a whirlwind this year and is besides more experienced and speedier than his rivals. Ric is not very strong on the defensive, however, and he may be shifted on a wing. Swiggart is a squirmy youngster, fast, and uses his "noodle." Bacon and Towndsend are all round good rugbyists and figure to put up a stiff fight for the position.

At center three-quarters Stanford has one of the greatest rugbyists in the Pacific coast in Danny Carroll, this season's captain. Carroll is the brains of the entire Stanford backfield, and whoever is playing beside him will be helped out considerably.

Long, this year's freshman star; "Dievy" Dievendorff, and either Bacon, Towndsend, Swiggart and Templeton will play the wings.

Coach Brown is not worrying much over the forwards. For the front rank positions he has two real stars in "Jersey" Bihlman and Soper. Both are experienced, grand hookers and can dribble in excellent fashion. Phil Knight and Smitherun are fighting it out for the other front rank position, with Knight having the advantage right now.

Jim Wylie, whose knowledge of the game has been an important factor in cardinal victories of the past, and Francis Rehm, better known as "Fat," will be the breakaways this year.

Wylie's prowess as a footballer need not be mentioned, but Rehm was a sub member of both the Varsity football and Varsity rowing teams last year. He is fast for a big man and has the "never say die" spirit of Stanford always attached to him when in the game. Bloeser, also a member of the rowing team, is also out for one of the breakaway positions and has given a good account of himself.

"Swede" Pettingill, member of last year's team, Fisher, Coleman and Braden, also 1914 Varsity member, are battling for the two middle rank positions. "Swede" is almost a certainty for one of the jobs, but the fight between Fisher and Coleman is a hot one and may not be settled until the big game between Stanford and Santa Clara on November 13 is called.

As far as the old "new" game which California has adopted is concerned, Stanford is not worrying. They will have a strong team to beat when they meet the Saints and besides there are more students of the university playing rugby than ever before, and Stanford's motto is "athletics for the many and not for the few."

GLASSES HANDICAP TO GOLFERS.

There is no denying the fact that the golfer who is compelled to wear glasses is under a heavy handicap. Glasses seem to be a bar to golfing greatness. About one-third the golfing fraternity in America wear glasses, yet in looking over the list of stars one can not find a truly great professional who wears them and of all the great amateurs Walter Travis is the only bespectacled one.

Nose glasses, it has been found, are less of a handicap than spectacles. The former are usually held in place rigidly when spectacles often swing around, particularly when the body swings with the golfing stroke.

The worst handicap for the golfer comes on rainy or damp days. The mist fogs his glasses, impairing his sight. The fogging requires the frequent removal of the glasses for polishing and this removal tends to throw the sight out of focus temporarily. Of course, nobody is going to give the game up just because these things exist. If anything the "four-eyed" folks are made only the keener for this handicap.

Seals Rally and Batter Their Way to Victory; Bees' Last Chance Vanishes

Oaks Fall Back Under Vernon Attack, Losing Their Chance for Fourth Place Finish

KID SOMNAMBULISM IS STAR OF GAME THAT OAKS LOSE

Rowdy's Men Take Half-Nelson on Fifth Place, and Press Beavers.

Somnambulistic baseball was forced upon a small and struggling audience at Recreation Park yesterday, Oakland succeeding in making one run less than Vernon and establishing a half-Nelson grip on fifth place. Oakland even progressed to the extent of threatening Portland, which has been making a gallant effort to break all diving records in the Coast League. The Beavers broke their string of defeats yesterday, and Oakland succeeded in losing, thereby gaining half a game on the Burrowing Beavers. It's a grand race we are having in both directions.

Vernon crossed the plate three times and Oakland twice, despite the manful efforts of Bill Prough and Art Fromme. While this was going on the fans were more interested in the scoreboard and the Salt Lake reports than anything else. The players frequently did not run out their hits and were seemingly not inclined to exert themselves. It was very sleepy.

In the first inning the Oaks had a good chance to put over a run, but listless base running plugged things up. With one out, Hosp had walked. Middleton flew to Wilhoit, but Johnston singled to right. Wilhoit made a try for Jimmy at first but the play failing, the ball was relayed to third, where Hosp was caught, as he was walking into the bag.

After Fromme had fanned in the third three singles in a row by Rader, Doane and Bayless filled the bases for the Tigers. Wilhoit hit to Hosp, and when Elliott muffed the return throw, Rader scored the first run. Purtell sent a short fly to Johnston and Risberg fanned ending the inning.

The Oaks took the lead in the fourth by scoring twice. Middleton flew to Wilhoit. Johnston singled to left and Gardner was hit by a pitched ball. Duddy forced Gardner at second, Berger to Purtell, Johnston taking third. Johnston and Duddy then executed the double steal, Jimmy crossing the pan. Elliott uncorked a single against the right field fence, which landed well up on the screen and Duddy scored.

Three more hits in a row in the sixth inning, coupled with a sacrifice hit and sacrifice fly brought in two runs for Vernon and won the game. Risberg, Berger and Mitze were the ones to single in this inning, the former scoring on the catcher's hit. Fromme sacrificed the runners a head, while Rader sent a fly to Middleton, which allowed Berger to score. Doane grounded out to Gardner.

Two hits were made by the Tigers in the ninth, but a perfect throw to the plate by Johnston cut off a run. The Oaks went out in regular order in the half of the inning.

DIAMOND FLASHES.

Jack Ness was ill yesterday and was unable to get in the game. He was out in a uniform but did not take any practice. Rube Gardner was shifted to first, while Louie Litschi took care of the right garden.

Dickie Bayless made the star catch of the day when he made a long sprint and took in Middleton's fly in the fifth inning.

Frank Hosp also made a nice play. With Fromme on first Rader hit a grounder on the opposite side of the bag to that which Hosp covers. Frank made a stab at the ball and just did get it. He threw to Stow, forcing the slow Vernon twirler.

Bobby Stow made a clever stop of Wilhoit's grounder over second base and a pretty throw to Gardner just getting the lengthy Tiger.

ANGELS KICK THE OLD GAME AWAY; BEAVERS WIN 4-1

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16.—Love and Krause hooked up in a pitchers' battle at Washington park today and neither side being able to score in the first four innings of the tussle. Portland, however, managed to win out by a good margin when they put over four runs in the seventh and eighth innings, while Los Angeles was able to gather but one.

The Angels lost a good chance to score in the third inning when Love opened the inning with a triple. Maggert singled, but Love was caught at the plate, Speas to Fisher. In the seventh inning Stumpf walked and Fisher popped to Metzger. Stumpf went out stealing, Boles to McMullen. Ward walked and stole second. He finally scored and Davis was safe at first when Harper dropped Davis' fly. Krause fouled to Boles.

Koerner, for Los Angeles, opened with a single and Harper sacrificed. Bates to Stumpf. Terry, batting for Larson, popped to Stumpf, and Boles tripled to center, scoring Koerner. Metzger fouled to Fisher.

Portland opened the eighth inauspiciously when Lober popped to Terry. Derrick walked and Speas was safe at first, Derrick taking second on McMullen's error. Bates forced Speas at second, Terry to McMullen, Derrick taking third. Derrick scored and Stumpf was safe at first on Terry's error, Bates taking second. Fisher singled to left and Bates and Stumpf scored on Ellis' error, Fisher reaching second on the play at the plate. Ward singled infield and Fisher was nailed at the plate. Terry to Boles.

BOWLING ON GREEN

The latter half of the week has been just as active in the singles rating tournament of the Oakland Scottish Bowling Club on Lake side Park green as the early part of the week.

Major Henry Hume played 23 ends against Kenneth Dorward, winning out finally with a score of 22 to 17.

Sill beat "Glenn" in 16 ends by a score of 21 to 5.

Yesterday afternoon, Kenneth C. Dorward beat William Chalmers in 17 ends by a score of 21 to 9.

K. C. Dorward achieved a victory also over Robert Dalziel, Sr. in 20 ends by a score of 21 to 11.

It was an "off day" with W. Chalmers for he met with a second defeat at the hands of Robert Dalziel, Jr. in a game of 26 ends by a score of 21 to 18.

Robert Dalziel, Jr. was in turn beaten by Robert Howden in 22 ends by a score of 21 for Howden and 18 for "Bob."

There were not many team matches during the latter half of the week.

'SLIM' LOVE IS HARDEST OF ALL PITCHERS TO HIT

With only two weeks left to the Pacific Coast League season of 1915, "Slim" Love of Los Angeles stands the best chance of leading the regular pitchers of the league in holding opponents to low batting averages. Johnson of Vernon and Steen of San Francisco are up around the top, but neither has had enough work to be rated as a regular and take the honors away from Love. For twenty-eight weeks of the season Love held opponents to an aggregate batting average of .219. Fanning of San Francisco and Ryan of Los Angeles are in a neck and neck race for second honors among the regulars, each having held opponents to a .237 average.

Piercey is Vernon's best bet, having held opponents to a .240 average; Lush is Portland's best bet, .246; "Lefty" Williams leads the Salt Lake pitchers, holding opponents to a .247 batting average, and Klawitter tops the Oakland pitchers, having been hit at a .254 clip.

More hits have been made off "Spider" Baum of San Francisco than off any other pitcher in the league. Opponents have rapped Baum safely 339 times. Second on the list comes "Lefty" Williams, who has been hit safely 351 times, and then comes Klawitter, who has allowed opponents a total of 349 hits.

The following figures show the total "at bats," total hits and aggregate batting averages of all opponents against each pitcher for the first twenty-eight weeks of the season, up to October 11:

NONPAREILS WIN ANOTHER.

Spread won his third straight victory last Sunday by defeating the fast Eureka club, 4 to 0. The feature of the game was the masterly pitching of Spread, who allowed but five scattered hits and struck out thirteen of the opposing batsmen. Walker held him in fine style. Carpentier and Pimentel featured at bat with two hits each. The score:

UNIVERSITY GIRLS PLY HOCKEY STICKS STURDILY

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—Unusual sport regaled the women students of the University of California this morning when they watched the freshmen and sophomore girl teams competing on the hockey field. It was the first year in which the co-eds have followed the new game and today was the first of a series of practice games which they will play.

The sophomore women defeated the freshmen by a score of 6 to 3.

Despite the inexperience of many of those who participated the play throughout was fast and exciting. The freshmen stickers were evidently outclassed from the first.

Enthusiasm for hockey was shown early in the semester and the game has since been included among the important activities of the women students. Miss Mary Blanchard, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College and a pioneer hockey player coached the girls through a part of the season. Since that time special coaches have been in charge of each of several squads.

Luscher and Nelson Are Slam-Bang Mixers

Dope Gives Former the Edge, but You Never Can Tell

In the matching of Rudy Nelson and Frank Luscher, West Oakland fans see the first step in Promoter Simpson's campaign to displace the lightweights from their monopoly of the main events in local boxing shows. Nelson and Luscher will meet at catch weight, which means that both will be considerably over the lightweight notch. Eventually we will see middle-weights in action at West Oakland and then heavies. Luscher trimmed Denny, when the latter was in considerably better form than he was last Wednesday night, when Rudy Nelson took the decision from him. This would give Luscher an edge over the hard-hitting mechanic figured on dope, but the records of the ring show that little dependency can be placed on a three-man angle.

Nelson and Luscher will probably wade into one another, tossing science to the winds. They are both sluggers of the rough and tumble kind, and that is after all what the fans want.

Simpson has carded five special events. The first will bring together Frankie Farron, the lad who fought Jimmy Duffy to a standstill a while back and who earned the far western amateur championship of the bantam-weight class in the P. P. I. E. matches. Simpson has picked out a tough opponent for Farron in the person of Tony Freitas. Freitas is a slashing little Portuguese mixer who hails from Twenty-third avenue, the place where half of the local wallopers develop. He is a willing boy, can hit with both hands, and has held his own with such chaps as Jimmy Dundee, Joe Gorman and Johnny Conde. In Farron he will meet one of the cleverest lads ever introduced in these parts. He is as clever as they make them, and the fans will be provided with one of those rare treats of watching a bout between a boxer and a fighter when Farron and Freitas clash.

GEORGE VERSUS MEREDITH.

The second special event brings Chris George, the sensation of East Oakland, who defeated Kid Grant at the Wheelmen Club last Wednesday and also fought a draw with Kid Smiley. "Sailor" Meredith will be George's opponent. He is a slugger and can assimilate plenty of punishment. He is a newcomer on this side. He met George a couple of months ago in the main event bout at San Jose and the two put up a terrific encounter. They should certainly repeat. The East Oaklanders are training at Manuel Vieira's quarters.

Kid Williams, West Oakland claimant for the feather-weight title and defeater of Whitie Smith, will return to the ring after a long layoff when he hooks up with "Young" Azevedo, also of East Oakland. Azevedo is one of the cleverest infighters in the local amateur game and if he can keep on top of Williams from the start to the finish the Williams admirers will look very downcast at the conclusion of the bout. Williams has shown a punch and plenty of punching ability in all his bouts and is a real special eventer.

GORMAN AGAINST SHADOW.

It's going to be West Oakland against West Oakland when Joe Gorman and Kid George face each other. Gorman has performed very notably in these parts and his two bouts with Jimmy Dundee made for him many friends. Shadow is the hope of the colored "sports" of West Oakland. He is a clever boy and is as fast as his name signifies.

The real slugging match and the last of the five specials will see Pete Francis, Elmhurst lightweight, and Jimmy West, who beat Kid Taylor last Wednesday, in action. Both have been improving right along and a rip snorting bout should develop when the two start.

The five special events, together with the main event bout between Frank Luscher, the East Oakland lightweight star, and Rudy Nelson, who bested Frankie Denny last Wednesday, and two preliminary bouts which will bring together "Young" Mike Gibbons vs. "Spike" Halliday and Jimmy Kerrose vs. Eddie Baker, makes up Simpson's West Oakland card for Wednesday night.

Held Became Umpire Just to Prove Nerve

Many people believe that Red Held, one of the indicators who has been handling the series here, is the best umpire in the circuit. Whether this is true or not, Red has never been accused of lacking nerve, which is one of the main essentials of the successful indicator holder, and it was his desire not to be taken for a man who didn't have backbone which led him into this precarious calling.

Red formerly played with several minor league teams before quitting the professional game and returning to his home in St. Louis. Here he organized a semi-pro club which was strong enough to beat anything of the kind in that section of the country.

In 1910 Bill Shipke, who was then with the Washington American league team, happened to go through Kansas City, where President Shively, of the Western association, was making his headquarters at the time. Shively told Shipke, who had played with Held in this association, that he was shy an umpire, and Shipke immediately recommended Held.

A contract was sent to Red, who was well satisfied where he was and he turned it down. Shortly afterward Shipke wrote him a personal letter and said that if he didn't accept he would think he had a proverbial "streak of yellow" somewhere in his makeup.

This decided Red, who signed the contract and reported, only to find that in the meantime the league had started fighting. There were eight clubs and four of them lined up with Shively and four with a man named Allen, the vice-president.

Red naturally took orders from Shively, who hired him and it wasn't long before Allen told him to either quit sending wires to the former, or he would lose his job. Sure enough along in May Red received a message while umpiring in Joplin, Mo., requesting his resignation. Red turned it in and went to the Illinois-Wisconsin league for the rest of the season, and then shifted to the Central association in 1911. Here he was the only one of 22 umpires who managed to stick the season through, and the next year Red went to the Eastern association, where he was the only indicator holder who started the season and managed to stick to the close.

That fall he went to the meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues at Milwaukee, and while there got into communication with Allen T. Baum, president of the Coast League. Red came to this circuit the next spring, and has been here ever since.

Having demonstrated to the satisfaction of his friends that he was a man with backbone, Red found that he rather like the job of calling them right on the diamond, and while he has many little tete-a-tetes with the players, manages to get by as well as any of the other arbitrators and better than the majority of them.

SOUTH TACOMA CLUB DOWNS OLYMPIC

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—The South Tacoma baseball team, which will meet the Great Western Power and Southern Pacific baseball nines tomorrow at Grove Street Park, Oakland, defeated the crack Olympic Club team today at Ewing Field by a score of 4 to 2. The game was 2 all up to the ninth when the Northwesterns got to Moocroft, the Olympic pitcher, for a triple and a homer. Following is the score.

SEQUOYAH GOLFERS SETTLE TOURNEY THIS AFTERNOON

Harvey Lindsay and F. J. Reagan Reach Finals, Beating Belcher and Knowles.

Playing the best game of his career and negotiating the Sequoyah Country club course in 81, Harvey Lindsay yesterday won a hard match from Robert Belcher 3 up and 1 to go, and the right to compete against F. J. Reagan in the finals of the tournament for the President Dennis Searles cup, which will be played over thirty-six holes today. Reagan won his match in the semi-finals from William Knowles 4 up to 3 to go.

In the finals today Lindsay will find himself up against a hard game, in which he will have to allow Reagan fourteen strokes. The latter is a very steady player, who has been improving much of late, and Lindsay may find it necessary to beat his 81 of yesterday in order to win the cup. The finalists will play eighteen holes this morning and finish the match this afternoon, when it is expected a large gallery will follow the play.

The Lindsay-Belcher match was the feature of the day, the former winning principally on account of two phenomenal puts, and no little hard luck that followed his opponent. Although bested on the first nine holes, and turning the half 2 down, Belcher played gamely and evened up the match by taking the tenth and eleventh, only to go behind when he missed puts on the thirteenth and fifteenth by bare fractions.

BELCHER IS BEATEN.

Belcher started out well, and won the first in four. He lost the next two, having hard luck on the third hole when a very pretty shot kicked off the green. The fourth was Lindsay's and also the fifth, which he made in three. Belcher took the sixth. The seventh was halved after Lindsay had put one in the pond, but recovered with a forty-foot put. The eighth went to Lindsay, and, by halving the ninth, Belcher turned the half-way mark 2 down.

Belcher soon demonstrated that he was not out of the match, however, and evened up by taking the next two holes, and the players started on the twelfth with honors even. Lindsay took the next two holes, however, with another phenomenal put on the twelfth. The ball lay off the edge of the green and was holed from a distance of over fifty feet. Belcher suffered a little hard luck on the thirteenth, missing his put by a bare inch. Lindsay took the fourteenth, and the fifteenth being halved he was dormie three. Belcher won the sixteenth hole without the one stroke which was allowed him there, and with a good drive off the tee for the seventeenth it looked as if he might even up. Lindsay drove too far up the hill and was obliged to drive his second over the trees, but by a good shot put his ball just off the green. Belcher made an unfortunate approach from a good position, the ball laying badly on the slope. Lindsay holed out for a four on the next to last and took the match 3 and 1. Completing the course with a 4 for the eighteenth, Lindsay made it an 81, and bettered his own best mark.

BAD SECOND ENDS GAME.

Reagan took the lead over William Knowles right from the start and at the halfway the match stood 3 up in his favor. Knowles made a game fight from then on, but lost another and was 4 down at the fifteenth, giving the match to Reagan 4 up and 3 to go.

A perpetual challenge handicap board is the latest installment at the Sequoyah club. Under this system the players are rated in order and any golfer has the right at any time to try for a better position by challenging anyone ahead of him. If the challenger should win he is entitled to his opponent's place on the board, while if he loses he has to pay the difference in the number of their positions in balls.

TOURNEY IS PLANNED.

On the 26th and 27th of November the Sequoyah golfers will hold a home-and-home tournament with the Presidio club of San Francisco. The locals are still confident from their recent win over the Claremonts, and are busy priming their players for the match.

The mixed foursomes which featured the Columbus day play last Tuesday at the Sequoyah club was won by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Valentine Jr. The match was a two-ball handicap affair. Next Tuesday the regular fall sweepstakes match which is held in connection with ladies' day on the course will be the program. The Tuesday programs are becoming more and more popular with the fair followers of the Scotch pastime, and nearly half a hundred players are turning out every week.

BILL STEEN TOO MUCH FOR THE SLUGGING BEES

Seals Pick on Killilay for Tallies in Ninth Inning.

SALT LAKE, Oct. 16.—Inability to connect safely with Bill Steen's curve ball when hits meant runs spelled the second defeat of the series for the Bees this afternoon, 9 to 2.

Fittery held Steen even as far as hits were concerned until a pinch hitter relieved him in the seventh, but he was wild and his walks coupled with the fact that he permitted Ping Bodie and Jerry Downs each to souse one out of the park, gave him the worst of it.

Jack Killilay proved easy picking for San Francisco in the last inning, and the Seals found no trouble in clouting him for five more runs.

... pitchers for tomorrow. Beating Salt Lake in the ball game was not all the damage Bill Steen did to the Bees. During the Seal batting practice Steen hit a liner back at Manager Blankenship which hit the Salt Lake skipper on the knee cap, so that he was forced to leave the grounds and seek a bone setter. Blankenship had volunteered to pitch to the Seals during batting practice in the hope of working off a bad cold.

FRANK SLOMAN SETS WORLD'S RECORD

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16. — Frank Sloman of the Olympic Club and Polytechnic High school smashed the interscholastic world's record this morning on the exposition track by running the quarter mile in 48 1-5 seconds. There was not a breath of wind and the record will certainly be allowed.

The record was formerly held by Ted Meredith, who ran it when at Mercersburg Academy in 48 4-5 seconds.

Three timers were holding watches on Sloman and their times were 47 3-5, 47 4-5 and 48 1-5, so Sloman was given the worst of the deal, in accordance with athletic traditions.

"Dad" Moulton, the old-time sprinter and most experienced clock man of the three, caught 47 3-5.

Sloman ran the 300 yards in 31 4-5 and the 400 in 42 3-5. His performance was all the more meritorious from the fact that he left the other runners and finished the last 100 yards alone.

Parry Hayward of the Polytechnic finished second, Leslie Henry of the Polytechnic third and A. Williams of Mission High fourth.

TRIBUNE INAUGURATES MID-WINTER LEAGUE OF CLASS A AND CLASS B BALL

ALL MANAGERS URGED TO ATTEND MEETING

Convention of Amateur Baseball Magnates to Be Held in Tribune Building Tuesday

Managers and fans interested in amateur and semi-pro baseball are urged to attend a meeting next Tuesday evening in the editorial rooms of The Oakland Tribune, Eighth street, between Broadway and Franklin, at 8 o'clock. At this meeting it is hoped to launch the fastest mid-winter baseball league in the history of the bay cities. Professional ball players will not be barred in the Class A division, many coasters having already signed up.

The following rules will be offered the meeting and the managers will vote upon them. All managers who have filed application for admission to the league will be entitled to vote Tuesday evening:

RULES GOVERNING THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE MIDWINTER BASEBALL LEAGUE.

Article I—The name of this league shall be The Tribune Midwinter Baseball League.

Article II—This league shall consist of Class A and Class B teams whose managers have affixed their names hereto, and such other teams as may be admitted from time to time by a majority vote of the board of directors.

Article III—The governing body of the league shall be a board of directors, consisting of one representative from each team. The board of directors shall elect a president, a vice-president, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall constitute the executive committee. The offices of secretary and treasurer may be held by one man.

Article IV—It shall be the duty of the board of directors to adopt such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the government of the league. It shall be the duty of the executive committee to enforce the rules of the league, pass upon the eligibility of the players and decide all disputes, and their decision shall be final. The secretary shall perform such duties as usually pertain to that office. The treasurer shall keep the funds of the league.

Article V—These rules may be amended or officers removed by two-thirds vote of the board of directors, after one week's notice.

Rule 1—The Wright & Ditson league ball shall be the official ball in the league and used in all match games. In case it is impossible to obtain this ball at any time the Goldsmith league ball may be substituted.

Rule 2—The official grounds for this league shall be decided upon by the executive committee.

Rule 3—The executive committee shall arrange a schedule of games, so that each club shall meet each other in its division a stated number of times during the season.

Rule 4—The league shall be divided into divisions consisting of not more than eight nor less than four clubs in each.

Rule 5—The dates for postponed games shall be fixed by the executive committee; also the hour at which scheduled games shall begin, and such scheduled games must begin not later than forty-five (45) minutes from such time, or the team ready to play may claim a forfeit.

Rule 6—The manager of each club will post a list of its players with the secretary not later than October 25. Any changes on this list must be in the hands of the secretary twenty-four (24) hours previous to the game in which the new players are to participate.

Rule 7—No club shall be permitted to carry more than fifteen players at any one time.

Rule 8—No player shall be allowed to play for more than one club in this league.

Rule 9—The umpires shall be selected by the executive committee. In case the regular umpire fails to appear, the managers of the competing clubs shall select a substitute.

Rule 10—The managers of the winning teams will report the result of each game to the secretary as soon as possible after the completion of each game.

Rule 11—(a) Each manager shall cause to be issued to each player in his club a card, which shall be the player's certificate of membership in the club; and no member shall be allowed to play with any other team in the league unless he has been released by the manager of the team issuing the card and the card canceled and a new card issued by the new manager. (b) The official certificate of membership shall be as follows and shall be supplied by the executive committee out of the funds of the treasury:

This is to certify that..... is a member of the..... club of the Oakland Tribune Midwinter Baseball League.

Club ..... 191 ...

The services of the above named being no longer needed I hereby cancel my claim upon him.

.....Manager

.....191 .....

Canceled cards shall be delivered to the secretary.

Rule 12—Reach Baseball Guides shall be the official guides of this league and the umpire and players shall govern themselves accordingly.

Rule 13—The Oakland Tribune Midwinter Baseball League season shall end on the ..... day of .....(and no manager shall be permitted to secure a player for his club within thirty days of such date without the consent of the executive committee.

Rule 14—All protests shall be in writing and filed with the executive committee within two days after the cause of the protest is discovered and becomes known to the manager of the team making the protest.

Rule 15—No protest shall be allowed until after the manager or the opposing team has been notified in writing of the grounds of the protest and shall have had at least three days after receipt of such notice in which to refute the charges in writing. If after such statements have been filed with the executive committee and the committee requires further statements from either manager or from the umpire or the members of the team a meeting may be called by the president of the league, or, in the event of his absence, by either of the other members of the executive committee, at which meeting the respective managers may produce further evidence to substantiate their charges.

Rule 16—Any team failing to appear for a scheduled game shall forfeit such game and may be dropped from the league by the executive committee unless good cause is shown, but one week's notice must be given by the secretary to the manager of such defaulting team to show cause why such team should not be dropped from the league before such action can be taken by the executive committee.

Rule 17—All teams shall be provided with uniforms.

Rule 18—A team not having nine signed players present may play a substitute player with the consent of the opposing manager, provided said substitute is otherwise eligible under these rules.

Rule 19—The sum of twenty-five (25) dollars from Class A teams and fifteen (15) dollars from Class B teams shall be deposited with the treasurer of the league, upon their entrance, as a bond to insure the good faith of the managers and ball players, and the appearance of the teams in their scheduled games. The bond shall be forfeited should any of the teams or managers fail to abide by the above rules.

The following clubs, the managers of which have affixed their signatures hereto, agree to abide by the above rules:

BOYLE & LAWLOR NOTES.

The Boyle & Lawlors have sure been hitting the ball hard and will give all the pitchers they face a merry old time. Boyle & Lawlor travel to Fort Baker today and will have a good line up. The line up will be: Barney ss, Couter 2b, Starr 3b, Bullock 1b, Dooley lf, Cady c Nattinger rf, Davis lf, Meyers p and Palihpon 2b or cf.

Barney did clever stick work last Sunday. His work being largely responsible for the victory over Cal. Conical Co. Barney drove out two hits in three attempts. His fielding was also up to its high standard.

Carter, who cavorts around the keystone sack has been playing some great ball and also has been hitting the ball right on the nose.

Boyle & Lawlor batting averages:

Players:	G.	AB.	BH.	Pct.
Meyers	5	22	12	.581
Barney	7	27	11	.407
Davis	15	49	21	.429
Bullock	12	56	21	.375
Nattinger	10	43	15	.349
Starr	14	57	19	.222
Dooley	7	30	10	.333
Devine	5	22	5	.227
Carter	15	57	18	.316
Palihpon	4	14	3	.214
Cady	8	22	6	.273

Team batting average, .370.

ALLENDALE NOTES.

The fast Allendales won from the Buccaneers Sunday at Allendale, 12 to 4, slugging Abrahamson for 19 safe hits. Allendale will make trouble for any club they play, as they have a fast club, with Cy Cunningham and Lefty Ramdell pitching winning ball.

Harrison, Allendale's fast first baseman, is playing a bang up game at first, getting some hard chances. He is hitting the pill hard. He pickled one for three bags Sunday.

Wiedmann on second is also playing a nice game, getting everything coming his way. He handled four chances without a miss cue and was the star of the day with the war club, getting a three-bagger and three two-baggers out of four trips to the plate.

Elliott, Allendale's fast third baseman, is fielding nice and as throwing to first is a factor. He also hit two on the nose, bringing in Allendale's first two runs.

Fuller caught a good game, holding Cy up in fine form and pegging nice to the bases, throwing out five Buccaneers who tried to steal. He also hit three on the peak. They all hit it, Sunday.

Baker on short again showed the Allendale fans some pretty fielding, going into deep center and getting a Texas leaguer from Barham's bat and another time going over second base and scooping up a bat looked like a sure hit with his gloved hand and getting the man at first base with a fine throw, cutting off a rally.

TACOMA TIGERS, NORTHWEST'S IDOLS, CLAIM CHAMPIONSHIP

CHAMPIONS PLAY TWICE TODAY

The Tacoma Tigers will tackle the Southern Pacific team, champions of the Oakland Commercial league, in the first game, starting at 1 p. m. This game will be called at 2:30 to allow the northern team a few minutes rest before they tackle the Great Western Power team. Orval Ely, the big Tacoma southpaw, will work the first game against the railroad boys, with the possibility that Nick Dahl will do the twirling in the second game.

The Southern Pacific twirling will be done by Harmon and Kogler, while either Joe Great Westerns McCreery will do the twirling, with Crosswaithe behind the bat.

The lineups for the two home teams will be as follows:

Southern Pacific—Downey or Kaney, p.; Kogler or Harmon, c.; Truck, 1b.; Smith, 2b.; Prentiss, s., Querolo, 3b.; Ferreria, lf.; O'Connor, cf. Scozzafava, rf.

The players who are making the trip with the northern team are: Catchers, Lester Patterson and Jack Farrell; pitchers, Orvial Eley and Gus Davis, left handers, and Oscar Haughland and Nick Dahl, right handers; first baseman and captain, Eddie McTighe; Paul Shager, second base; Allen Browne, shortstop; Oscar Jensen, third base; Henry Crowl, left field; Jule Snager, center field; Walter Hagedorn, right field. Urban Woods and Roy Whitowsal, utility.

The White Auto Garage team of Cincinnati, O., winners of the Eastern Division of the Elimination League, are expected to arrive here on October 21. A three-game series will be played, probably two being played in Oakland.

Lefty Ely of the Tigers is certainly a wizard, and during the past season several of the Northwestern League clubs tried to secure his signature to a Northwest League contract, but without success. When the Tacoma team was in a big hole, through the absence of a couple of heavers, he secured the services of Ely for four games. In none of the four games did the opposing teams get more than six hits. He lost two games and won two, pitching one two-hit game, a three-hit game, a five-hit game and a six-hit game. He retained his rating as an amateur, as he received no remuneration from the Northwest club.

Jake Baumgarten will umpire the double-header Sunday at the Grove street grounds. Jake had a very successful year in the Three I League, and his services have been very much in demand. He will also officiate in the three games for the championship.

Ely beat some of the best teams in the state of Washington this season and piled up an average of winning 21 out of 23 games played. In these 23 games he struck out on an average of 13 men per game.

QUESTION BOX

To the Sporting Editor—Last half of tenth, score tied, bases full and two out; pitcher walks batter, forcing over run; runner who was on first stops on way to second and refuses to go on and touch that base; first baseman calls for ball and touches this runner between the bases. Does the runner have to touch second base to force in the run? J. M. S.

It is a technical point that has not been raised before, so far as we recall. Runner is entitled to second base and don't see how he can be put out before he touches it. It doesn't seem to matter really whether he touched the base or not under the circumstances.

To the Sporting Editor—Score is 6 to 4 in favor of visiting team when home team comes to bat in last half of the ninth; home team gets a man on base with two out and next batter hits a home run, making score a tie; umpire calls game on account of darkness. Does score stand as a tie or does it revert to eight even innings? D. I. DUNNE.

Rule 24 is clear enough. The game stands as a draw, the team last at bat getting credit for what it has done.

The ruling on this has been explained frequently enough. The runner is out except in case the ball is out of play, as when a home run is hit out of bounds. With no play possible on the runner the ruling is that the penalty is not enforced.

With the Broadway Billiards

BROADWAY BILLIARD NOTES.

"Tanbark" Yeazell was in rare form last Sunday against the Southern Pacific Store team, holding them down to two hits and sending back seven men to the bench. This is his first game in two months that he has pitched. That is why he retired in the ninth inning. He sure hit the old pill, getting three long singles.

"Pop" Hoenish, behind the log, caught in A-1 style, not a stolen bag being made on him. Together with Westphal, they make a fine pair of receivers to have on any ball club.

Mainland kept up his good work with the stick, annexing two more hits to his credit.

Today's game will be with the Buccaneers at 11:30 at Bay View. Batteries—Van Mourick and Westphal for Broadway Billiards; Scott and Steinbeck for Buccaneers.

"Dutch" Kogler was hit rather hard last Sunday, twelve big juicy hits being made off his delivery.

"Vin" Hayes, lately with the Weiner Tailors, played a star game, handling several hard chances without a miscue. He sure looks good at short.

"Red" Gefken again had on his batting togs, getting a double and single off of "Dutch" Kogler. Red is a terror to all pitchers, as they all look alike to him. He played a nice game at the difficult corner.

KRIEG NOTES.

The J. J. Krieg Co., annexed another victory over the fast Barney Frankels last Sunday, 16 to 7. The game was featured with heavy hitting on both sides, the Krieg Co. slamming out 15 bingles, while the Barney Frankels connected for nine hits.

Less Manning covering the right garden for the Kriegs, led with some heavy hitting, a triple and a double out of twice at bat being his record for the day. Manning received a bad injury to his foot when he slid into third in the fourth inning, and had to retire from the game. Manning's speed was much in evidence Sunday, and the many bush teams when travel about the bay are beginning to recognize his speedy tactics.

"Chink" Dixon was next in line, connecting for four solid singles out of five trips to the plate. Dixon is covering centerfield for the Krieg Co. in league style, and looks to be in the best of condition.

Bennallack on the mound for the Krieg Co. had everything on the ball, holding the Barney Frankels safe, and also made it his fourth straight victory.

DAVIS DOWNS DIXON.

Bacon's double drove O. Hoag across the plate for the winning run in the eleventh inning of an exciting game which Davis won, 4 to 3. McGee pitched a fine game, allowing but seven hits. The fielding of both teams was exceptionally good, C. Rohwer's work at short for Dixon standing out above the rest.

T. Hoag was the hitting star of the game, connecting for four safe hits out of five trips to the plate. Bacon and E. Rohwer were also heavy clouters, Bacon getting two hits and was robbed for the third by a wonderful catch by C. Rohwer. E. Rohwer got a double and a triple out of four times up.

Fast fielding by C. Rohwer who started two double plays, shut off the scoring. Dixon started scoring in the fourth, when E. Rohwer started out with a walk and went to third on R. Rohwer's sacrifice bunt to McGee. He scored on Eames' grounder to second. In the first of the fourth, T. Hoag started with a two base hit and went to third on Harwood's infield out to second, but was retired at the plate when McAllister grounded to Groves. In the fifth with one gone, H. Rohwer tripled to the leftfield fence, but died on third.

In the sixth, Davis staged a score fest, netting three runs. With one gone T. Hoag and Harwood singled through short. McAllister singled to left, scoring T. Hoag and went to second while R. Wohwer juggled the ball. Harwood stole home. O. Hoag singled and stole second. Bacon, batting for McFarlan, singled, scoring McAllister. Grieves and McGee were easy outs, ending the inning.

In the seventh, T. Hoag singled with two gone and stole second and third, but died there. In the eighth Dixon started a rally, tying the score. Kamensind walked. C. Rohwer flew out to Bacon. E. Rohwer doubled over the rightfield fence, scoring Kamensind, and scored when Harwood let the peg to third get away from him. In the tenth, T. Hoag singled, but was out trying to make second. Harwood tripled out died at third.

With two gone in Dixon's half of the tenth, E. Rohwer tripled to center, but stopped there when R. Rohwer grounded to McGee. In the eleventh, O. Hoag singled, Bacon doubled, scoring O. Hoag, and winning the game. The next three men were easy outs.

The Stockton Athletic club nine was defeated by the score of 8 to 5 at Lathrop Sunday. The locals blame their defeat to a bad decision by the umpire. Dewey knocked a home run with two men on the bases, the umpire declaring the ball fair. After lengthy argument by both clubs he reversed his decision and made Dewey bat over and the locals lost an opportunity to tie the score.

The score:	R.	H.	E.
Athletics	5	9	2
Lathrop	8	8	4

Batteries — Dewey and Smith; Sangulnetti and Lawrence.

The baseball team from the marine barracks defeated Torrey, Sunday, by the score of 7 to 4. Pitcher Farley pitched a masterful game for the barracks' team.

That baseball team from Benicia is going some at the close of the season, Red McClain grabbing off another Sunday from Bay Point by the score of 5 to 4.

Fred Watters and his Scheidt's Boosters, the 1915 pennant winners in the Fresno City league and champions of Fresno, were defeated Sunday at Coalinga by a score of 8 to 4, due to hard hitting on the part of the oil town boosters. Robinson, the Fresno pitcher, weakened in the fifth inning, and Catcher Nelson of Kingsbury finished the game as a pitcher.

Nelson shot the ball over the plate so fast that the Coalinga batsmen could not see it. But the damage had been done before Robinson left the box. Dunn finished the game behind the bat. Dunn and Lacey formed the battery for Coalinga. Fred Watters was forced to make the trip with a crippled lineup. He disbanded his team after the game.

Rizzo was the hitting feature of the day getting three hits and a walk at four times at bat. Rizzo is signed to catch for one of the fast teams in the Richmond Midwinter league.

Landridge played his general good game at third, getting three hits out of four trips to the plate and fielding his position in great form.

Player:	AP.	BH.	Pct.

Ambrose Plays at Stockton

The Ambrose Tailors will journey to Stockton today to try conclusions with Cy Moreing's cohorts. With the addition of Speed Martin in the hurling department the Tailor's stock has taken a big boost and they should give the Stockton boys a stiff argument. "Red" Baldwin will do the receiving for the Oakland boys. Tyler Christian will probably be pitted against Martin.

The Ambrose Tailors had little difficulty in defeating the Union Iron Works team of San Francisco last Sunday at Melrose. The Tailors put eight runs over the plate while their opponents were unable to even approach the tallying station. Speed Martin pitching his first game in the Tailor uniform was invincible striking out fourteen men and allowing but four hits two of which were of the scratchy variety. Only two balls were batted to the outfield, which is some pitching in itself.

Red Baldwin continued his hard hitting for Ambrose last Sunday. Red connected with the horsehide on three occasions out of four trips to the plate. He also caught an excellent article of ball, holding Martin's shoots in clever fashion.

Al Furrier returned to life last Sunday and boosted his batting average by clicking out two bingles in four tries. Al also crossed the plate three times, all of which was not a bad day's work.

"Dutch" Holstrom was another shining light in the Ambrose galaxy of stars. Dutch fielded some impossible chances and made them look easy. He also pummeled the San Francisco pitcher for a couple of blows.

Word was received from "Funny Man" Payne, who is doing duty for Uncle Sam in the Philippines. Payne will be remembered as playing third for the Tailors last year, being one of the best amateur infielders around the bay. He writes that he is playing the national pastime down there when he gets the chance. The game is very popular in the islands.

Joe Maher played another of his bang-up games at third for Ambrose last Sunday. His fielding at all times bordered on the sensational. It looks like Ambrose has a couple of these St. Mary's wonders on his squad. Rhubart is also playing stellar ball.

The Oakland Commercial league came to a sudden end Saturday after Southern Pacific Store team took the final game in the series from the much touted Commercials. Shammell had the game tucked away when he did a little loafing which gave the railroad boys the edge, which they were fast to take advantage of. George Crosswait has a good chance for the Ambrose trophy, having played in every engagement, batted .260, and showed up head and shoulders above the other backstops, catching the most difficult pitcher in the bushes, big Al Schammell. Oakes O'Connor is also a strong candidate for the suit. The S. P. team now claim the amateur championship of Oakland.

Bart Burke has arranged with advance Agent Biddy Bishop for the South Tacoma Tigers to play the northwestern amateur champions a match Saturday with his Olympic club nine at Ewing Field. The Tacomas will send in Lefty Ely against Al Schammell. A pitchers' battle is expected.

The Oakland boys are right there when it comes to boosting along anything that has the atmosphere of clean sport. The way F. H. Woodward got Manager J. W. Corcoran in tow, and scheduled the Tacoma Tigers for a double header today on the State league field at Grove and Fifty-eighth streets is a big send off for our city. His selection of the teams to meet the Tigers is a popular one. The first game will be with the Southern Pacific club, while the second game will be with the Great Western Power company's first team. It is hoped a good gate will result, as the Tacoma club is entitled to the best attendance Oakland has ever shown at an amateur contest.

OAKLAND M. W. A. NOTES.

In last Sunday's game at Fort Baker the umpiring was very bad at times and the team's all around good playing in the last few innings is all that saved the game.

Nelson, as usual, pitched a fine game. He was especially effective with men on bases. In the ninth inning he whiffed all three men. He held the hard hitting soldiers to eight hits and sent fourteen of them back to the bench by the strikeout route.

Meyers, playing his first game with the Woodmen, played an errorless game in the field, accepting several hard chances. At the bat he showed good form, getting two clean hits.

Osgood, Raust and Eustice all connected for three baggers during the game, which shows that the boys were sure hitting them hard. Eustice's was especially a very long drive to deep left.

Maas made a pretty catch of Lesh's hard drive in the fourth inning; it was almost an impossible catch.

Tenkin made a nice catch of Cunningham's fly ball in the fifth inning. He also got two nice hits.

RESULTS SUNDAY.

At Chico—Chico 11, Marysville 1.

GAMES TODAY.

At Chico—Oroville.

At Woodland—Marysville.

An unsatisfactory ending of the Oroville-Woodland Trolley league baseball game came at Oroville Sunday when Umpire Frank Korrell gave Oroville the game in the first inning, 9 to 0. Jack O'Neil, Woodland player, was ruled off the field for protesting a third strike decision on McGinnis, another Woodland lad. O'Neil hesitated to leave the field, and his teammates surrounded Korrell and pleaded that he had made a hasty decision. Korrell refused to waver, pulled his watch and, after eight minutes, declared that Woodland had forfeited the contest. The decision cost the Woodland betting fraternity over $100, as the Oroville management refused to call off the bets or allow the Olives to play an exhibition game to decide the wagers.

For almost two hours the players and fans wrangled and argued on the diamond, but no fistic encounter resulted.

That the umpire threw O'Neil out of the game without provocation and without warning, was the contention of all the fans and players.

Had Korrell given O'Neil a warning, after which the Woodland boy continued to protest; or had O'Neil expressed himself any stronger than "that was a low ball, Frank," the ruling to throw the Oak first baseman out of the game might have been justified. But there's where Korrell pulled his first big blunder. O'Neil, who has the reputation of being as clean-mouthed a lad as ever played ball for Woodland, was ordered to quit the game and without provocation and without warning.

Pitcher Mickie Shader and other Oroville players aided in with Woodland, but the managerial powers that be ruled otherwise, and the disappointed players and fans left the grounds at dusk.

It is said that Shader, who had a bet with a Woodland fan, was such a good sport that he called his own wager off, despite the decision of his manager.

Three weeks ago in Woodland, Fraser and certain members of the Oroville club cursed Korrell for rank decisions and didn't get as much as a reprimand. Almost the same occurrence was noted when the Marysville team was here two weeks ago. Spillman continually lambasted vile epithets at Korrell and the worst Korrell gave him was an order to go to the bench, which Spillman did not do.

Howard Brown of Marysville, president of the Trolley baseball league, refused to accept the ruling of Umpire Frank Korrell. Brown said that from what he had learned of the facts it was "child's play" upon the part of the umpire, and he was not justified in such a stringent decision.

The game will be played a week from today at the Oroville grounds. Today, Chico and Oroville play, while Woodland plays Marysville. Should Chico and Woodland win it would make the leaders tie for first place.

The Marysville Giants failed to overcome the Chico jinx at Chico Sunday, and lost a one-sided game to Peck's Colts by a score of 11 to 1. A jumble of hits and errors gave Chico four runs in the sixth frame and six runs in the seventh, during which Peily Henry put the ball over the fence with the bases loaded. Kunz's homer in the fourth made the Giants' only run. Anderson blew up in the seventh, and was replaced by Sparks.

NILES ESSANAY INDIANS.

Niles won again last Sunday but not until after a hard battle with the Olympic club.

Fodder Dolan was the star of the day. He struck out 15 men and allowed only six hits in the entire 11 innings. He also slammed out a home run and a single and scored two of the Indians' four runs. It sure was a "Red Head" day.

Again, but few Niles fans were out. They really do not deserve a ball club.

Fodder Dolan's admirers are attempting to make Foster and Dutch Leonard share with the little "red head" in the Hall of Fame.

Medcraft, the young right-hander of the Olympic club is a promising twirler. He made ten of the Essanay Indians join the army last Sunday.

There should be a large crowd out next Sunday to see the Indians battle with the strong Herberts of San Francisco.

The Herberts are the most popular bunch that has ever played in Niles.

We might mention that the Olympic crowd are a fine bunch of boys. They are gentlemen in every sense of the word and made many friends by their sportsmanlike behavior. Also by their classy ball they put up last Sunday.

MODESTO REDS OUT-CLASSED.

The Modesto Reds were out-classed before the record crowd of the season, at Stockton, Sunday afternoon, and Cy Moreing's stars won out by the score of 5 to 0. The Modestos were playing a club much superior to themselves and at no time did they have an opportunity to win the contest as their hitting was light while Lefty Owens was not stingy enough to stop the Stockton sticksters.

Credit must be given Tyler Christian for his good work in the box, as he pitched the best game of the series. His curves broke well and he had the Reds at his mercy, keeping his hits well scattered and tightening up when Modesto had men on the bases. He fanned seven Reds and neither walked nor hit a batter.

MARTINEZ AND RICHMOND PLAY.

Lefty Lou Stanley, and his slow ball coupled with a world of speed, put the crusher on the hopes of Bill Luce's Richmond crew at Martinez diamond by a score of 3 to 2. In the record of baseball the battle will go down as the most brilliant played in the county.

Martinez started out after Frank Gordon in the very first frame, when with two out Jacobs, Danzig, Hogan and Goldie grabbed four safeties and earned the two run lead which they maintained until the sixth.

In that spasm Daniels was first up and went out, Murray to Danzig. Stanley was a bit wild and walked Carter and then Christensen sent a high fly to Jacobs who got under it. Cunningham tore off a stiff single over second and Conger went to third.

In Richmond's part of the ninth a supreme effort was made to tie the score. Ingraham swung hard at three and sat down. Benn sent one to Goldie who made a great running catch of it. Then Murphy drove a safety into the leftfield. Bill Luce sent Butch Woodbury in to bat for Cleek. Butch came through with a single to left. With two on Frank Gordon had his chance to win his own game. He drove one at Hogan who gathered it in and threw to Danzig for the third and deciding out.

Richmond and Martinez will meet in the third and deciding game today at Richmond. Manager McNamara will use the same lineup which he sent against the Elks on last Sunday.

KREMER BEATS HOLLIS.

The Sebastopol champions scattered Petaluma's aspiration eggs all over the Petaluma lot Sunday afternoon. And when the joyous band of Gravenstein rooters departed for the apple center after the game, the Petaluma bugs were still trying to figure out what sort of hurricane had hit their hen roost, for after the nine spasms of stirring baseball had passed out into the catacombs of bush baseballdom it was found that the champions had circled the sacks three times, while Petaluma only chased over two.

"Babe" Hollis bent them over for the Leghorns and allowed but six hits, all of which, however, were of the "real bingle" variety and were well timed. He was not accorded much in the way of support, especially from his batterymate, who acted as if a good sleep would have done him good.

Kremer crooked them for the champions and pitched a wonderful game. He was nicked for ten safe swats and many times with the pouches populated he pitched himself out of the hole with all the skill of an old-timer. In inning four he struck out the three batsmen and likewise in inning five. Altogether he struck out ten men and walked but two.

Sebastopol put the skids under Hollis in Chapter 1, when Joe Tobin uncorked a hit he had been saving for two long weeks, and that caused Hollis to lay like a Leghorn while the ball ambled over his nose and on into centerfield. Pat McDonough then committed his first error. Pat let one of Hollis' slippery slants slide from his big glove and Tobin, whom some fan accused of being fast, took second at a mile a minute clip just to keep the bus in rush, and Patrick, having recovered the elusive egg, tried to force Joe to halt at the second pillow, said attempt resulting in a flying pill which was captured by Killilay in centerfield, while Tobin helped himself to the third cushion. Scanlon flew out to centerfield and Wuffli popped one to the second baseman.

Cartwright drew four wide ones and worked the delayed double steal, Tobin scoring. Carty took third when Pat McDonough let another ball get past him. Hollis' Nemesis, Bankhead, laid a bit into the left meadow and Cartwright scored the second run. Smith was a victim, Hollis to Ryan.

The run that proved to be the winner was scored in the third inning. Scanlon three-bagged against the rightfield fence and Wuffli singled to leftfield, scoring Tommy.

The Leghorns finally awoke to a sense of their duties in the fifth inning. Ryan singled to centerfield, Fitzsimmons singled to leftfield. Goldenson struck out. Melchoir singled, scoring Ryan, and Cohen doubled, scoring Fitzsimmons. This was all Petaluma was able to do in the way of runs, although they had many chances. Always the old pinch hit was missing.

Bankhead seemed to have but little difficulty in connecting with Hollis' curves and was credited with half of the hits made by the Gravensteins. His string includes a single, a two-sacker and a three bagger. He also drove one over the rightfield fence, but it went a few feet foul, thereby robbing him of a circuit smash.

IN 47 DAYS I CAN bring around a happy marriage with the one of your heart's desire; that is, if I find the marriage would prove for the best; otherwise I shall not accept your case.

IN 52 DAYS I CAN give you the power to advance in your position and secure a raise in salary.

IN 56 DAYS I CAN overcome your habits of all kinds, also work this secret influence on those you wish, without their knowledge, so they will begin to prosper and advance in life.

IN 60 DAYS I CAN make you so successful in speculations and investments that you will be making money faster than you ever have before in your life in a safe and honest way.

Foreclosure Sale
22 acres of land located about 23 miles from Oakland, about ¾ mile from the Oakland-Antioch electric line, 45 minutes to Oakland and about ¼ mile from the S. P. R. R.; 1¼ miles to town. Land is on main county road and near highway; is fenced; has some very fine large trees on it, also some young fruit trees and a fine spring of water. Land is very rolling, but can all be farmed and has been farmed for years; is good, deep soil. About 8 acres of it is garden soil, balance suitable for fruit or grain. Land sold 2 years ago for $4500. Is being foreclosed on and must be sold at once and I can guarantee delivery at $2209. About one-half cash and balance can stand.

150 acres first class river bottom sediment soil, free from hardpan and very deep; suitable for alfalfa, pears or any kind of vegetables; especially adapted to asparagus and beans. Joins main county road on one side, Tuolumne river on the other; only 7 miles from Modesto; close to school. In a rich and highly improved district, only 20 acres under ditch, as the balance does not require irrigation. Fair house, barn, windmill, etc. Place all fenced, and about 50 or 60 acres cleared. Can get balance cleared for wood on it. Adjoining land of similar nature recently sold for $250 per acre. For immediate sale can deliver this at a price of $85 per acre; only $3500 cash required, balance to suit. Positively the best bargain in this district.

INVESTMENTS

AAA—THE company referred to in this ad has over 250,000 tons of low-grade free-milling ore, carrying over $7.00 per ton in gold, already mined and piled up, ready to treat. It will cost to handle and treat this ore not to exceed $2.00 per ton. Total value over one million five hundred thousand dollars. In addition to this, there is a lot of much higher grade ore yet to be mined. The total capital stock of the company is only $500,000; par value $1.00 per share. The stock is fully paid and non-assessable and there are no salaried officers. The company is organized under laws that are among the strictest in the United States when it comes to the protection of stockholders. Takes a three-fourths vote of the stockholders to dispose of the property or rights of the company. Allow cumulative voting.

Regarding dividends, it would take a 50-ton mill working 300 days in the year over 16 years to treat the ore that is mined and piled up. This alone would pay 15% net per annum on the total capital stock of the company, $500,000, and when you stop to consider that there will be only about 400,000 shares of outstanding stock you will realize that this would mean 18% per annum return on the investment if the stock was bought at par. This is in addition to what will be made from ore which the company will mine and ship. The company is already operating on a small scale, and made a small shipment of ore on October 1st, 1915, and it ran a little over $100.00 per ton. This proposition should, and I am satisfied will be, paying dividends within a year, probably much sooner. The property is proven.

Truth is stranger than fiction. I was skeptical when all this was told to me, but I've seen it. You will find the representations modest when compared with the facts.

I invested $15,000.00 in cash in this company as a permanent investment, and I hold under option to purchase another block of this stock. I propose to sell some of my personal stock at a price enough above my optional purchase price to net me a fair profit.

The matter of speculation in this enterprise is eliminated so far as it is possible for speculation to be eliminated in any line of business, and 15% is about four times as much interest as you can get on a time deposit.

$100.00 is the smallest amount I will sell. No literature. For interview address Stockholder, Box 3878, Tribune.

GILT EDGE 1st mtge. of $3700, at 6%, on ranch near Napa; need money elsewhere. Box 3769, Tribune.

MARKET ACTIVITY BELOW NORMAL

Sales Weak on Most Lines of Fruits and Vegetables for Week-end Volume.

While the market was fairly active today it was below the normal for week-end briskness and carry-over stocks of several varieties of fruit and vegetables resulted. The market was weak on most lines of fruit with few changes in quotations. Grapes, as on the previous day, were largely overstocked, many of the arrivals of different kinds being of poor quality and selling at a low figure. Much of the grape stocks will have to be sacrificed in the early part of next week in order to get them cleaned up. Seedless were scarce and Tokays the most plentiful. Tokays brought from 25c to 75c for lug boxes. Tomatoes were plentiful today and maintained the low figures of yesterday.

MARKET SUMMARY SHOWS BIG SLUMP

Prices Decline Steadily and Public Interest Noticeably Less Keen This Week.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16. — A marked change came over the speculative situation this week, trading in the four full days, interrupted by a holiday, showing an almost steady decline. Yesterday's sales were the most of any full session in more than three weeks when operations failed to approach a million shares and public interest was noticeably less keen.

Prices in general showed more or less substantial losses compared with their high of the preceding week, except for United States Steel and a few of the war specialties, Bethlehem Steel being especially conspicuous for its new high record of 47[illegible]. In the main, however, heavy selling, partly of foreign origin, was effective in reducing values. Rails manifested underlying strength, but even in that division profit taking was a potent force.

Among the factors contributing to the reactionary trend was the latest news from abroad touching on the war situation. Bulgaria's projection into the conflict, indications of tension in the British and French ministries, and more particularly the possibility of withdrawal of allied forces from the Dardanelles, were developments which excited apprehension in high financial circles.

Domestic industrial conditions continued at high pressure, some steel mills refusing further orders, except for delivery in the distant future while prices of certain manufactured products were sailing to high price revision. General betterment was reported in mercantile lines and crops lost none of their brilliant promise. Railroad earnings showed improvement in gross but some mixture in net returns. Investment inquiry made only moderate headway, due perhaps to renewal of liquidation in our bonds for European account. Sales of the new Anglo-French notes were made at a fraction under the subscription price.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 16—Wheat developed strength today, largely as a result of wet weather in the spring crop belt, threatening further delay to any accumulation of supplies at the leading terminals northwest. The opening, which ranged from ⅝c to ⅜c higher, was followed by a moderate additional upturn.

The close was unsettled, ⅝c to ⅞c net higher, with December at $1.08⅝ and May at $1.09⅞.

In corn as in wheat the unsettled weather had a bullish effect. After opening ¼c to ⅝c higher, the market scored yet further gains. The close was steady at ⅜@⅝c to 1⅛c net advance.

Close: Wheat—Dec., $1.08⅝; May, $1.09⅞.
Corn—Dec., 60⅝c; May, 61¾c.
Oats—Dec., 40⅜c; May, 40⅝c.
Pork—Dec., $15.17; Jan., $17.52.

COMSTOCK SHARES AGAIN IN DEMAND

Mining Exchange Handles Big Buying Orders of Considerable Volume.

North End Comstocks were again the feature of the mining shares market on the San Francisco Stock Exchange today. Buying orders of considerable volume had been received overnight and there was a rush to fill them on opening. Prices carried upward rapidly and some new high quotations were established. News from Union and Sierra Nevada continued to indicate the possible discovery of important ore bodies with good values, and traders generally believe that the district is on the eve of a revival.

Union went from 55c to 75c on opening sale, dropping back to 70c on moderate profit taking. Trading during the first hour was about 2500 shares, indicating that the stock is tightly held. The offerings of Sierra Nevada on the upward trend amounted to 10,000 shares in the same period. The stock went from 45c to 56c on opening, touched 57c later and then slid down to sales at 51c and 52c. Con Virginia sold up to 24c and back to 22c, the opening figure. Ophir made a rapid gain, selling from 42c to 49c before the reaction, which carried it back to 46c on trading that totaled 3500 shares.

The Goldfields were neglected, with Jumbo Extension and Goldfield Consolidated both holding at $1.37½. Merger Mines were steady at 19c.

There was a little activity in Jim Butler, which sold from odds of [illegible] up to 77c and West End, which was two points higher, with sales at 58c.

United Western dropped a point to 39c and Rochester Mines continued in demand after a sale at 57c.

.NYONE SEE THE COUNT?

'Harcourt Lost, Strayed or Stolen

as anybody here seen the Comte Eu- [illegible] sent him to America, and the [illegible] Rochambeau delivered him [illegible] Ellis Island or elsewhere in the envi- of New York. There he escaped the [illegible] of the minions of impost laws proving that several bulky portman- he carried only contained scrolls of [illegible] and were, therefore, works of art, that his excess baggage, in the con- of two curious trunks, was merely [illegible] collection of manuscripts of [illegible] composers. Also, to the wonder- of the obvious customs collectors, [illegible] his passports and his cre- [illegible] of ambassadorial importance as [illegible]—not minister—from France to Panama-Pacific Exposition. Having sated the curiosity of the customs [illegible], he was permitted to proceed lei- [illegible] to the west, and because of the [illegible] manner in which he travels [illegible] be somewhere in this region now. [illegible] be characteristic of the Comte to [illegible] unheralded. For the Comte, it has [illegible] hinted, is fond of the incognito.

[illegible] should anybody observe, in the dim [illegible]dors of the French pavilion at the [illegible]sition, a middle-aged, simply attired [illegible] with drooping mustaches, and a [illegible]ent air which seems almost apolo- [illegible]—a taciturn sort of man, who may [illegible]ractedly seat himself in the bourgeois [illegible] novels; or who may stare amusedly [illegible] the busts of Richelieu and the grand [illegible]rch, King Louis XVI; who may even [illegible] with Lafayette's own sword, while he [illegible] with the sardonic guard near the [illegible]res of Washington and Franklin— [illegible]d anybody see such a man, that for- [illegible] person will probably be looking [illegible] the Comte Eugene d'Harcourt. And [illegible] Comte is a very famous man in Paris.

[illegible]ERED NEW YORK STEALTHILY.

[illegible] entered New York almost stealthily, [illegible] stole softly away for the west, ac- [illegible]ing to latest reports. He was then [illegible]sed, as a police description would [illegible] like a plain American business man [illegible] dark suit and soft black hat; and [illegible] hair is "shot gray with and white." [illegible] will not wear any of his decorations, [illegible] which he possesses several bestowed [illegible] different governments.

[illegible]'s description may enable somebody [illegible] recognize the Comte.

[illegible]e identification may be verified by [illegible]oaching the supposed Comte and say- [illegible] "War!" If the stranger is really the [illegible] d'Harcourt, he will refuse to dis- [illegible] the war. He may even explain, con- [illegible]tially:

[illegible]ou see, I am on a delicate mission, [illegible] by France. I go to represent France [illegible] an Francisco. I go to see most of [illegible] large cities, to study their conserva- [illegible]s of music. I may give a few orches- [illegible] concerts here and there, so you see, [illegible] good friend, I must not discuss the [illegible] nor the composers of other nations, [illegible]tially not of those with which we [illegible] at war. So let me be discreet in that [illegible] thing."

[illegible]ut," you may say, "the Exposition—" [illegible]en the Comte, if it indeed be he, will [illegible] ejaculate:

[illegible]h! the Exposition! That is different.

AH! THAT IS DIFFERENT.

[illegible] have been busy finishing a volume of [illegible] for the Exposition, a collection of [illegible]ch music classics of the seven- [illegible]th and eighteenth centuries."

[illegible] you may be sure it is really the [illegible] d'Harcourt [illegible] y add, touching your [illegible] wished you had asked me [illegible] first impressions of America." [illegible] I could have told you that these are my first impressions. I was in this [illegible]try once before, some twenty years [illegible] ago, when I was a pupil of Mas- [illegible] studying music at the Paris Con- [illegible]atoire. I ran over to America then, [illegible] remained only long enough to learn [illegible]w words of English, most of which [illegible]ve forgotten. But wait until I shall [illegible] been here a month and you will [illegible] me talk your native tongue!"

[illegible] will then be entirely proper to ask: [illegible]ow long are you going to stay and [illegible] are you going to do besides offi- [illegible]ng at the fair?"

[illegible]e Comte may even reply courteously [illegible] this vein:

[illegible] have hundreds of pounds of manu- [illegible]ts of music with me—two big boxes [illegible]—all works by French composers. I [illegible] a most interesting orchestral suite [illegible] Debussy, an orchestrated version of [illegible] of his piano pieces, which are [illegible]ming. I have a lot of other French [illegible]c by living composers."

SOME OF OWN.

[illegible] would not resent being asked, def- [illegible]tially:

[illegible]ave you any of your own?"

[illegible]es, I admit that I have. You know [illegible] opera, 'Torquato Tasso,' was pro- [illegible]d several years ago at Monte Carlo, [illegible]eaux, Antwerp, Geneva and Ghent. [illegible] the overture was played by the Bos- [illegible] Symphony orchestra for the first time [illegible] America. If the right occasion pre- [illegible] itself I shall conduct some of these [illegible]s in this country during my present [illegible]

[illegible]hen I want to see what is being done [illegible]ur public schools in the way of music [illegible]. I am eager to hear opera per- [illegible]ances at your famous Metropolitan. [illegible] want to hear some of your big or- [illegible]tras, some concerts and recitals, for [illegible] to tell my government—in my re- [illegible] which I shall make—what this great [illegible]try is doing in the cause of music. [illegible] I want to meet your composers, your [illegible]uctors, your artists and your critics, for I, too, served in the capacity of music [illegible] to the Paris Figaro years ago, and am a member yet of the Associated Professionelle de la Critique Dramatique et Musicale, of which Adolphe Brisson is president.

EAGER TO BEGIN.

"So, all told, I am looking forward to my stay here with unusual enthusiasm, for I am sure you have many interesting, artistic features about the musical life of this country; and I welcome the thought of having so many interesting days ahead. I am eager to begin. Good-by. Sorry our chat must end."

At this point, the discerning native should politely say, "au revoir." For the Comte is not likely to tell much else about himself.

It is seldom even in Paris that the Comte can be induced to talk about himself. The sentiments recorded above are not altogether an imaginary conversation, after the style of Landor, whom the Comte is reputed to have read deeply, but represent fairly well what is in the Comte's mind. He has said all these things since he arrived in America, as interviewers elsewhere relate. But even these bits of self-revelation were hard to draw from the Comte. He is not by nature discoursive. Yet he is a cosmopolite, a very famous one in Europe, and among musicians he is deemed one of the cognoscenti.

Comte Eugene d'Harcourt is the only son of Comte Jean d'Harcourt and is a nephew of Comte Bernard d'Harcourt, formerly French Ambassador to London, Rome and Berna. The present Comte Eugene d'Harcourt was born in Paris and is a member of the Jockey Club. He studied music at the Paris Conservatoire under such masters as Massenet and Savard and later entered the military service. Upon the advice of the eminent conductor Charles Lamoureux the young man went to Berlin to continue his musical studies at the Berlin Royal High School of Music, where he took diplomas. His principal operas are "Torquato Tasso" and "Severo Torelli." His "Symphomie Neo-Classique" was played in Paris at the Concerts Lamoureux, and in addition he has written three patriotic songs which have been sung by the tenor Franz, of the Paris Opera, and a number of orchestral pieces.

As conductor he won renown by making propaganda for the best in music by leading a series of popular concerts, and he has helped native French genius blossom into prominence by conducting the works of French composers, giving the first performance anywhere of Debussy's "L'Apresa-Midi d'un Faune." His government also has sent him on expeditions such as the present one, and he has made reports upon the musical status of a number of countries. He was appointed conductor of the Concerts Populaires du Jou de Paume, at the Tuilleries, which the outbreak of the war interrupted.

In brief, the Comte Eugene d'Harcourt is an important addition to the musical life of this country.

But it may be a hard job to find him.

HIGHER WAGE TO DRAW MINISTERS?

More [illegible] ded [illegible]rs.

[illegible] Pay minis- [illegible] you will find [illegible] to become preachers.

Rev. [illegible] of the Lutheran Church [illegible] gave that [illegible] Lutheran Synod [illegible] its session recently [illegible] church, Fifty-second [illegible] communication [illegible] general synod's committee on education [illegible] under discussion.

Some one proposed that the church should offer prayers that candidates for the ministry be produced.

Rev. Mr. Bobst said prayer was always good, but a more sensible way of solving the problem would be to provide clergymen with a living wage. "You will have to pay better salaries if you don't want a depleted ministry," he declared.

Rev. Lewis C. Manges of Harrisburg did not agree with Bobst. He said the shortage in ministerial candidates is not altogether due to small salaries. The ministry is a profession of self-sacrifice, he contended, and young men are as willing to suffer for a great cause today as at any previous time in the world's history. If ministerial salaries should be doubled, Manges said, it is doubtful if the problem would be solved. By doubling the minister's pay a class of men would be attracted who would not have the self-sacrificing spirit.

According to Rev. Mr. Manges, the jokemakers, both in newspaper offices and in families, are responsible in a measure for the small number of ministerial candidates. He said a minister is invariably caricatured as a mollycoddle on the stage and in the comic supplements, while in family life a boy who expresses a desire to become a clergyman is invariably ridiculed by those who are nearest and dearest to him.

TIPPERARY HYMN MUSIC DECRIED

Creator Approached on Too Easy and Familiar Terms, Says Pastor.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—"We have too much Tipperary hymn music in the church nowadays. We have too much hip, hip, hurrah business. The Creator is approached on easy, familiar terms, in prayer, as one might approach an old acquaintance. Some Christians, judging by their talk, have a sort of a slap-you-on-the-back friendship with the deity."

So said the Rev. Dr. William Quay Rosselle, pastor of the Fifth Baptist Church, in his address entitled "Contribution of the Bible School to the Worship of the Church," at the [illegible] anniversary session of the Philadelphia Baptist Association, in Bethlehem Baptist Church. Dr. Rosselle made an earnest appeal for greater reverence in worship. He said the recent tendency—and in this his friends and he was referring to the "Billy" Sunday campaign—is to secularize religion. "Religion must not be regarded as a frolic; it is something sacred, devotional, and should command our highest respect," he said.

The Rev. Dr. Peter C. Wright, pastor of Gethsemane Church, protested against paying Baptist pastors smaller salaries than the wages of carpenters and artisans. "I know a Phi Beta Kappa man who was paid [illegible] a day," the Rev. Mr. Wright said. "I know another who is receiving $7 cents a day. What do you pay a carpenter? What do you pay your plumber? You ask men to give themselves to the service of the church, and then permit them to die in penury and shame."

SEEKS REIMBURSEMENT.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Oct. 16.—Is a policeman an officer or an employee of a city? That is a question the Montgomery County District Court will have to settle at the October term. A year ago John E. Gordon was chief of police of Cherryvale. While taking a prisoner to the lockup the prisoner drew a revolver and shot the officer in the arm, and as a result, he says, he will always be handicapped in earning a living. The city of Cherryvale having made no effort to reimburse him, he has sued under the workman's compensation law.

CONSTABLE ENDS TREASURE HUNT

Gold Seekers Disturb Sleep of Prosy Townsmen: Old Tradition Revived.

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 16.—Recalling old stories of treasure buried by bandits on the king's highway many years ago, a group of men, headed by Joe Lopez of Spain, was found on the site of the former Alejo Dernal rancho shortly before 4 o'clock in the morning by Constable Parker, who was summoned by neighbors aroused from early morning slumbers by sounds of digging. The men were ordered away.

Tradition tells an interesting story of the burial on the ranch of treasure worth a king's ransom by highwaymen who were apprehended by the authorities. One was shot from his horse and fell dead at the roadside. The other escaped and buried much of the loot in rawhide chests on the site, it is related. He fled to Mexico, and, dying there, gave a map and description of the place and the buried treasure to a friend, who afterward came to California, and through whom the first search for the gold was made.

The present activity has set the tongues [illegible] buried treasure is an interesting [illegible] which is now in the heart of the residence district.

The men who were ordered from the place had [illegible] adobe construction, which is said to be the only one of its kind on the Pacific coast. Many stories of ghosts are rife today, and [illegible] tells a tale of having himself seen St. Anthony, the patron saint [illegible] one night [illegible] showing the way to the buried treasure.

About thirty years ago much digging was done [illegible] here and in the vicinity of old [illegible] on the site of which the felt factory now stands. Strong objection was made at that time, and, though many of the older residents have always been firm in their conviction that gold and silver and jewels are buried as tradition tells eight feet under the ground in three separate places on the old Alejo Dernal rancho, no further attempt to locate the loot has been made until now.

The rancho comprised about [illegible] acres originally, and the home site is now the residence of W. Tetzlaff, who married one of the daughters of Alejo Dernal, and on whose place the digging was commenced.
